Aly Maher Pasha, Egyptian Premier, Suddenly Resigns

Action Likely to Delay Ending Row With British

By FRED J. ZUSY

Cairo, March 1—(AP)—Prime Minister Aly Maher Pasha resigned unexpectedly today on the eve of talks he had confidently predicted would lead to settlement of Egypt's bitter feud with Britain. He stalked grim-faced from an hour-long emergency cabinet session and told reporters he had quit. He made no other statement.

Political sources said Maher became involved in a dispute with King Farouk, who installed his Independent government Jan. 27 following bloody anti-British torch riots in Cairo.

It was reported Ahmed Naguib Hilaly Pasha, also an Independent and one of Egypt's elder statesmen, may be asked to form a new government. He told reporters he had heard nothing about it.

Maher Pasha's son, Mohammed Aly Maher Pasha, said the 69-year-old independent leader resigned because of "inability to work due to mysterious currents behind his back." King Farouk installed Maher Pasha after ousting the strongly Nationalist government of the Wafdist party leader Mustapha El Nahas Pasha.

The prime minister was to have met this morning with British Ambassador Sir Ralph Stevenson on reopened discussions aimed at settling the dispute between the two countries over the Suez Canal zone and the Sudan. Those talks were postponed only a short time before Maher resigned, and the announced reason was Stevenson had become ill with a "chill."

Seeking Agreement

Those talks also were aimed at trying to reach some agreement which eventually would bring Egypt into a western-backed Middle East defence program. Egypt's entry into such a setup hinged on her demands that British troops first be withdrawn from the Suez Canal zone and that the Sudan be placed under King Farouk's full sovereignty.

Maher Pasha, although standing on Egypt's nationalist demands, was considered more moderate than his Wafdist predecessor. He was said to have pro-British feelings and was a close friend of the king's.

His resignation followed earlier reports today he had asked—and received—permission from King Farouk to suspend for a month the parliament, which still was ruled by a strong Wafdist majority.

Given Indemnity

Ottawa, March 1 (CP) —Four members of the Commons, returned in by-elections five days before the House ended deliberations in its first 1951 sitting, qualified for $1,400 in sessional pay.

A report tabled in the Commons yesterday showed that, under a Justice Department interpretation of the law governing sessional indemnities, the members were entitled to the payments and cheques were ordered issued to them.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, March 1— (CP)—Synopsis: A disturbance which moved rapidly eastward below the Great Lakes spread cloud across Southern Ontario last night, but the snow which accompanied this storm stayed to the south of Lake Erie. Early this morning most of the cloud had pulled out of southern regions and although temperatures will be somewhat below normal for this time of year March has made its entrance like a lamb.

A second minor disturbance is moving over Lake Superior this morning and spreading some light snow ahead of it over northern and central Ontario but it is weakening and little accumulation of snow is expected.

Lanoie Given Fourteen Years For Manslaughter

Pembroke, Ont., March 1—(CP)—Spr. Joseph (Frenchy) Lanoie, 35, today began serving a 14-year penitentiary term with the threat of a second trial for murder hanging over his head. He was convicted yesterday of manslaughter.

Lanoie, dressed in his uniform and wearing two rows of ribbons won in the Second World War heard Mr. Justice Wishart Spence tell him "it seems to me you were very, very close to conviction for murder."

His conviction was in connection with the death of Spr. James Wesley Caufield, 20, of Pine Falls, Man., one of two mess stewards shot to death following a New Year's Eve drinking party.

A second charge of murder against Lanoie in the death of craftsman Clifford E. Johannson, 19, of Saskatoon was ordered held over until the next assizes. The crown will decide then whether to proceed with it.

The defence contended during the trial that Lanoie was too drunk to know what he was doing at the time of the shooting. The only reason for the shooting, Defence Counsel J. J. Greene said, was "alcohol and lots of it."

Govt. to Fight Any Cut In Foreign Aid

Washington, March 1. (AP)—The Truman administration has decided to fight any cut in its proposed $7,900,000,000 foreign aid program.

State Secretary Dean Acheson told a country-wide radio and television audience last night this program "deserves our utmost support" and is "vital" to the success of western European defence plans.

Other officials, following up the Acheson appeal, said the program had been carefully worked out by the State and Defence Departments and the Mutual Security Administration, and the new money requested is considered essential to enable other countries to carry out defence plans.

Acheson appealed for the "utmost support" for the administration's new mutual security program with two arguments:

First, that it is in the interest of the security of the United States and therefore a good investment; and,

Second, the Europeans have been doing a good job against great odds and have gone a long way toward establishing unity and co-operation in military, economic and political matters.

ARMY NURSE SAYS WAS ACCOSTED, PUSHED INTO CAR

Lieut. Elizabeth Sansom Back in Stanley N.B.

Stanley, N.B., March 1 —(CP)—Lieut. Elizabeth Sansom, army nursing sister who turned up Tuesday after being missing since Christmas eve, says she was "Accosted and pushed into a car" at Montreal, Dec. 26 and after that her mind went blank, her father said last night.

She arrived back in this farm and lumbering town, 30 miles northeast of Fredericton, yesterday and her father gave the first information on her experiences. But there were still many questions left unanswered.

The 26-year-old niece of Lt.-Gen. E. W. Sansom, Canadian overseas corps commander, during the last war, was reported to have been the victim of amnesia when she turned up in New York Tuesday. She disappeared after leaving the army hospital at Kingston, Dec. 24.

Her father, Herbert Sansom, last night released to the Canadian Press a paragraph from the letter which had given the first news of her whereabouts. She had mailed it from New York, Feb. 21. He received it here Feb. 25th.

She had written him: "The last I remember I was on the way to the station at Montreal to return to Kingston when I was accosted and pushed into a car. Since then my mind has been a blank. As things cleared I realized I was in a Salvation Army shelter in New York City. I am writing this to let you folks at home know where I am."

Would Not Elaborate

Mr. Sansom who couldn't elaborate on the contents of the letter, said that following its receipt he got in touch with the army. The attractive nursing sister was soon located. She arrived in Fredericton Thursday.

Avon Jewellery Plant Entered, Loot $3,000

Entry to the factory was gained by breaking a window to the furnace room with the get-away apparently being made by the rear shipping room. The theft occurred some time during Friday night or early Saturday morning.

Mr. Abe Mazer, proprietor of Avon Jewellery said today that in addition to the jewellery some cash was taken from a desk drawer in the company office. The break-in was discovered at eight o'clock this morning when employees reported for work.

The break-in is being investigated by local police.

FO. Keith Christiansen of R.C.A.F. Arrested After Wild Plane Ride

Kenora, Ont., March 1—(CP)—An R.C.A.F. officer was arrested Friday after a Harvard training plane "beat-up" towns in this area, made a spectacular pass under the centre span of the 150-foot high Keewatin bridge, then crash-landed on a nearby lake. Officials said the flight was unauthorized.

The pilot, FO. Keith Christiansen, was alleged to have taken off from the air force station at Gimli, Man., 60 miles north of Winnipeg early yesterday.

At Kenora, Norman and Keewatin, residents told how the aircraft narrowly missed buildings as it "beat-up" the area. A quick pull-out over Kenora kept the plane from striking the Bank of Nova Scotia and the Notre Dame Church spire. At another point witnesses said the plane was below the top of industrial chimneys in the north end of the town.

The plane finally ran out of gas and Christiansen brought it down on Rabbit Lake, one mile north of here. The plane came down, wheels up, and skidded across the snow for more than 100 yards. Only apparent damage was to the propeller, possible damage to the bottom of the fuselage and centre section of one wing.

At Winnipeg, air force officials said the case is under investigation.

Howe Believes U.S. Will Rescind Ban on Import Of Certain Products from Canada

Ottawa, March 1 (CP) — Trade Minister Howe told the Commons yesterday he believes the United States will rescind a ban, imposed last August, on the import of certain Canadian dairy products.

He said there are "very encouraging" signs that the U.S. Senate will adopt legislation eliminating the restrictions, subject of a Canadian diplomatic protest when Congress put them into force last year.

For that reason, said Mr. Howe, the government does not plan "in the present circumstances" to retaliate by banning certain American farm products, even though the American act is a "direct" violation of the Canada-U.S. trade agreement.

Mr. Howe made the statement after Percy Wright (CCF-Melfort) asked if a Geneva dispatch, published by the New York Times and reporting Canada was planning such action, was correct.

The minister said the dispatch was erroneous and had given the government "much concern".

Mr. Howe spoke shortly before the Throne Speech debate opened with E. W. George (L-Westmorland) moving the traditional motion for adoption of an address in reply to the speech, read Thursday at the opening of the new session by Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey, the new Governor-General.

Andre Gauthier (L—Lac St. Jean), speaking in French and briefly in English, seconded the motion.

Mr. George, a Maritimer, called for federal aid to speed development of the Maritime provinces and suggested the government undertake power and navigation projects as an extension of the St. Lawrence seaway principle.

He suggested projects which would harness the Bay of Fundy tides for electricity and link Fundy and the Gulf of St. Lawrence for navigation. The projects would hasten the industrialization of the Maritimes.

Both he and Mr. Gauthier paid tribute to the King and pledged loyalty to the new Queen.

Well-Deserved Honor

Mr. Gauthier said the whole of Canada "rejoices of the well-deserved honor" conferred on Mr. Massey through his appointment as governor-general.

At the same time, he wished "every success" to Earl Alexander, former governor-general who now is British defence minister. He was a great soldier who had carried out his duties in this country "with so much tact and courtesy."

Mr. Gauthier said he welcomed the government's plans to establish a national library. This step would help in the development of culture and science among Canadians.

Tornado Batters Tennessee Town, Two Dead, 150 Injured

Fayetteville, Tenn., March 1 —(AP) — A tornado landed with blockbuster fury on this Tennessee town yesterday leaving two dead, scores injured, and a 300-foot-wide path of ruin in its wake.

The Tennessee highway patrol said 150 were either hurt by the crippling winds or burned in a rash of fires that followed the storm.

The high winds smashed into the centre of Fayetteville (pop. 6,000) at 5:30 p. m. est), ripping buildings apart, tearing up trees, and knocking out communications and power lines.

Charlie Vance, 56, a milk company worker, said he heard a roar and saw the "gray funnel" of the twister. Limbs of trees, parts of buildings and other debris swirled "as high as 500 feet in the air." Vance said.

The dead were identified as Williard McCown, 35, grocery clerk; and Mrs. Eugene McGehee, 55, a housewife. Both perished when their homes were demolished by the winds.

The tornado dispelled shirt-sleeve temperatures. Strong winds still howled over the city as thermometers neared freezing early today.

The blast hit first in the downtown area and swept away the Episcopal Church. Five other churches were badly damaged, as was the Lincoln County courthouse.

The tornado struck Donalson hospital for Negroes, tearing away the kitchen and dining room and scattering heavy equipment about the yard.

The wrecked hospital was left without heat and light as an emergency generator failed. Dr. L.M. Donalson, superintendent, said 25 to 30 persons were injured there.

The tornado also raked the Lincoln Memorial Hospital, sweeping the roof from the maternity ward. Mrs. Kenneth Olstrum, in labor when the roof was whipped from that section of the building, gave birth to a boy shortly afterward as attendants worked by lights from an emergency generator.

A number of fires were started by power lines ripped from their poles by the wind.

THREE LEAP YEAR BABIES

Niagara Falls, Ont., March 1—(CP)—Three one-in-four babies—all boys—were born here yesterday. The boys, sons of Mrs. Robert Rigg, Queenston, Mrs. Donald Naisbitt, St. Davids' and Mrs. Edward Porter, Chippawa, will not have an official first birthday until Feb. 29, 1956.

Faulty Design Not Cause Says Works Minister

Ottawa, March 1 — (CP) — Works Minister Fournier said yesterday he had been told that an accident at the new federal printing bureau in Hull, Que., could not have been caused by faulty design or faulty materials.

Replying in the commons to questions by George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, Mr. Fournier did not disclose the source of his information.

He said a coroner's inquest will undoubtedly fix responsibility for the accident which cost the life of one man and seven others to hospital. The accident occurred Wednesday when forms containin freshly poured cement suddenly collapsed.

Mr. Fournier said the construction of the building was being carried on by reputable firms. The responsibility for any damages rested with the contractors.

Works department officials have been instructed to conduct an investigation and to assist provincial authorities in every way they can.

Two Men Killed In Explosion

Royal Oak, Mich., March 1 —(AP) — Two men were killed last night in an explosion that struck like a "bolt of lightning" and crumbled a sporting goods store in this Detroit suburb.

Claude Parmalee, 58, an employee of the store, and Norman E. Friden, 48, of nearby Birmingham, lost their lives in the blast. Friden was a customer.

Both were found alive by rescue workers probing the ruins, but died later in hospital.

A search continued for other possible victims. Two men and a teen-aged girl reported in the store a short time before the unexplained blast had not been located.

One eye-witness, describing the explosion, said "There was a flash of flame and the whole place just lifted right up in the air."

PRAISES JUVENILE COURTS

Toronto, March 1—(CP)—Chief Justice J. C. McRuer of the Ontario supreme court said last night he hopes juvenile courts will be established in all Ontario municipalities "before too long." At present, they operate only in large communities.

QUEBEC TAKES DRASTIC STEPS TO PROTECT STOCK

Gardiner Hints Financial Aid Will be Liberal

Ottawa, March 1 —(CP)—Another set of restrictions was added yesterday to those of various governments seeking protection against foot-and-mouth disease among Saskatchewan herds.

Quebec announced that effective yesterday livestock and meats required the permission of the provincial veterinarian or his representatives before being moved into Quebec. The restriction applied to all points outside the province.

Meanwhile, in Ottawa agriculture minister Gardiner hinted at possible federal plans to expand financial aid to the livestock industry.

He said the Canadian government does not intend to let cattle producers bear the "whole brunt" of the consequences of the outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease near Regina.

"The situation is being watched carefully and as further measures to protect the intrests of producers are required these will be brought into effect.

"What form these measures should take, if they prove to be required, has been inquired into."

More Financial Aid

Officials disclosed that within the next few days plans will be completed under which farmers whose cattle must be destroyed may receive greater payment than that provided under the Contagious Animal Disease Act. The act provides for payment of commercial value on all animals destroyed.

It was learned later that farmers whose hay and straw piles may be destroyed may receive aid. Aid also may go to farmers who are unable to market cattle at normal prices because of interprovincial and international embargoes resulting from the disease.

These embargoes included one by British Columbia, a blanket closure of the border which Mr. Gardiner referred to in his statement to the Commons.

The minister said "We think we have a way of dealing with it which will be effective and at the same time will not interfere with reasonable actions by the provinces. I hope that we shall be in a position to make some announcement about that."

TENTS OUT OF FASHION

Toronto, March 1—(CP)—Tents have gone out of fashion for Ontario summer camps, delegates to the Canadian Camping Convention were told yesterday. John Hoyle, one of the delegates, said cabins get the vote from most camping officials these days because they are brighter than tents, stand up under prolonged wet weather and are much freer from insects.

Cape Cove, Que., March 1—(CP)—Fifty-eight passengers of a snowbound train had dreams of home during the night after being told they could resume their journey today.

Meanwhile, three men sat up on hard benches as a second train continued its Tracadie-Bathurst, N.B., run after being stalled 38 hours at Caraquet, N.B., on the south shore of Baie des Chaleurs. The train started at midnight, EST, and reached Bathurst, 45 miles away, one hour later.

Most anxious to get home from here was Mrs. Therese Lauzier of Chandler, Que., who is expecting a baby within a few days.

The 58 passengers, including 11 other women and two children, were put up at a hotel here and farmhouses after the train, en route from Gaspe, Que., to Campbellton, N.B. found its path blocked by a stalled wing snowplow Thursday morning.

A rotary plow was dispatched from Grande Riviere, Que., and moved in face-on on the snowbound plow before an emergency crew of 25 men began shovelling the snow off the track.

Canadian National Railways officials said the track would be cleared before morning when the train could continue its trip.

Mrs. Lauzier is the wife of one of 25 hockey players from Chandler who were returning home after two playoff games at Gaspe. During the stay here she was cared for by the wives of three other players.

The storm came while men were still clearing drifts from a long and heavy fall the previous week. Luckily this second storm was brief and was only the tail-end of a severe blizzard that struck the Maritime provinces late Wednesday night.

The Caraquet train, an all-electric local, was easily dug up from under the snow by a wing plow and its three passengers boarded the train after spending their leisure hours playing cards and catching up with their correspondence at a Caraquet hotel.

5,000 Participate In Savage Melee; Damage Extensive

Police Cordon Off Area, Use Batons, Tear Gas

Hong Kong, March 1 — (Reuters) — Five thousand yelling Chinese stormed through Kowloon today fighting police, burning cars, stoning Europeans and damaging stores.

A British soldier and a police officer, two Americans and several other Europeans were injured.

Police cordoned off the riot area in the British-leased mainland section and went into action with tear-gas bombs and batons.

They drove the rioters out of the busy business section into the Chinese quarter of Mongkok, where they dispersed two hours later.

The riot began when a Chinese communist "relief mission," bringing relief supplies for Chinese who lost their homes in a fire last November, failed to arrive at Kowloon station from the Chinese-Hong Kong district border.

Police said it had been unnecessary to call out British troops stationed in the colony. But one report said troops had been recalled to their barracks in case of further flare-ups.

Hong Kong island radio broadcast advice to people living in Kowloon —which has a large European residential area—to stay indoors.

Before the demonstrations started, the Hong Kong government stopped police leave, called out reserves and said the communist mission would not be allowed to enter the colony.

Welcoming Committee

A "welcoming committee" of Hong Kong Chinese which set off to meet the mission was taken off a train before it reached the border.

And then came a report from Canton that the mission—previously reported to have reached the border on the Chinese side—had "postponed" its trip. No reason was given.

A crowd estimated at between 10,000 and 20,000 waited for the mission at Kowloon Station, in British territory across the harbor from Hong Kong Island.

When the mission failed to arrive, about 5,000 of the crowd marched past the big British-owned Peninsular hotel and up Kowloon's main street, Nathan Road. Chinese and European stores and restaurants on Nathan Road hastily put up steel shutters and fire engines raced through the street to tackle vehicles set afire by the demonstrators.

Car Skids Out Of Control, Boy And Girl Killed

Owen Sound, Ont., March 1 —(CP) — Marjorie Louise Govier, 22, of Owen Sound, and Harold Miller, Jr., 21, of Wiarton, were killed last night on their way to a lake sailors' banquet when the automobile in which they were riding skidded out of control and overturned 10 miles west of here.

Truck driver Clarence Redfern, Jr., 31, of Owen Sound, said he was driving up a hill when the car went by, almost striking his truck.

It appeared to be skidding and he glanced in his rear-view mirror to see what happened to it. He saw a swirl of snow at the side of the road, stopped his truck and walked back to investigate.

"What I saw made my stomach knot up in a way it hadn't done since I returned from overseas."

The car had ripped out four guard rail posts, snapped off a hydro pole, plunged down an embankment and rolled over in a farmer's field. Turner was wrapped around a doorpost of the smashed car.

When enough persons arrived to lift the vehicle, he was taken out and driven to hospital in Owen Sound. Miss Govier was killed outright in the crash and Miller died a few minutes later.

Dr. C. Countryman Dies Suddenly After Operation

Well known in the Belleville district where he had spent most of his life, Dr. Claire J. Countryman, of Selma, Alabama, died Friday in Birmingham hospital where he had undergone an operation.

Dr. Countryman had gone to Selma from Leaside, Ont., to be a surgeon in a clinical hospital there.

Son of Mrs. Florence Countryman and the late George Countryman, Dr. Countryman was born at Tweed. He attended Belleville Collegiate and graduated in medicine from Queen's University in 1938, commencing his practice at Leaside.

During the last war he was a member of the Canadian Army Medical Corps and served in Canadian hospitals. After the war he resumed his practice at Leaside and did post graduate work as a surgeon in Edinburgh, Scotland.

While at Belleville he attended Bridge Street United Church.

Surviving are his wife, the former Floreen Watson of Toronto, and three small sons, Barry 6, Brian 5 and Paul 3.

Also surviving are his mother, and one brother, Alderman Wilbur J. Countryman, both of this city.

Fowl Prices Remain Steady On Local Market

For the first time in several weeks there was no change in egg prices on the local produce market today with vendors quoting 42 cents for firsts, 40 cents for mediums and 35 cents per dozen for pullets.

Fowl prices also remained steady with prices ranging from 50 cents for mature birds up to 55 cents for chicken.

Apples were in good supply on the outside market with fancy grade Delicious, Spys and Russetts bringing $2.75 per hamper. Fancy Talman Sweets were $2.50 per hamper; Snows were $2.25 and Greenings $2. Basket lots of eating apples were 55 cents.

Potatoes held at $1 per peck and $4.50 per bag with baskets of carrots, beets and parsnips selling at 50 cents. Sauerkraut was 25 cents per quart.

Major Carl Hiltz To Visit Local Salvation Army

Major Carl W. Hiltz, former area director with UNRRA and the International Refugee organization at Regensburg, Germany will visit Belleville Salvation Army on Saturday and Sunday, March 1st and 2nd.

Major Hiltz, a native of Halifax, N.S., studied at the Halifax County Academy and Dalhousie University. After graduation from the Salvation Army Training College in Toronto he held several important posts with the Army in Canada. In 1944 he was asked to join the UNRRA organization in its work of rehabilitating the millions of displaced persons in Germany.

After serving for some time as a Welfare Supervisor, he was appointed as an assembly centre director and later was made an area director with many camps, hospitals and other institutions under his jurisdiction.

While many national groups were included in the camps, the larger groups included Ukrainians, Poles, Jews, Latvians, Yugo-Slavs and Lithuanians.

On Saturday evening at 8 p.m. he will show his film "One Million Displaced Persons—Victims of World War 2." A documentary film of work amongst displaced persons and refugees. These pictures were taken in Germany under the direction of Major C. W. Hiltz. They are highly acclaimed all over Ontario where they have been shown. All are 16 m.m. pictures. Some black and white, others in technicolor. One reel is sound and two silent.

After his return to Canada in November 1947, Major Hiltz was attached to the Salvation Army Immigration - Colonization Department in Toronto. During the past two years, he has been chancellor of the Toronto Division of the Salvation Army.

History of Cement Told to Y's Men

The history of Portland Cement was the subject of a talk by Harry C. Brown, plant chemist of the Canada Cement Company when he spoke to the Y's Men's club at the Y. M. C. A. on Thursday night.

Tracing the earliest uses of gypsum to the building of the pyramids which were the most permanent structures in the world, the speaker indicated that these huge blocks were kept together by cement. Since this period in history all cement was made from the same materials, namely lime stone and clay. It was only the proportions and processes which had changed. Even though there has been no change in manufacture in the past 125 years, modern machinery had made it possible to produce cement in improved form in shorter time. The speaker was introduced by Ed Littlejohn and received the thanks of the club from Bryson Leslie. Bill Holway was chairman. Announcement was made of further steps being taken to improve the Y. M. C. A. auditorium. The work is under the supervision of Bert Hiles and will be completed in the next few weeks.

Ron Moorman was introduced as a new member. Following the regular meeting a bridge tournament was conducted by Bruce Bishop with most of the members participating. Plans are under way for the annual father and son banquet for members of the boys' department according to an announcement by George Wonnacott. The date has been set for April 18. Some 25 members attended the practice for the Y. M. C. A. Boys' Choir directed by Henry Lloyd.

Obituary

MRS. PEARL IRENE WHITE

Ill for the past ten days, Mrs. Pearl Irene White, 156 Bridge Street East, died in the Belleville General Hospital, on Friday.

Born in Belleville, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William P. Ruttan, Mrs. White had lived all her life in the city. She was a member of St. Thomas Anglican Church.

She is survived by her husband, John V. White, and two sisters, Mrs. E. A. Thomas, of Belleville, and Mrs. F. J. Birch, of Port Arthur.

MRS. ANNIE PRESTON (Stirling)

Stricken with a heart attack at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Walter Elliott, Stirling, on Friday afternoon, Mrs. Annie Preston, died suddenly. She was born at Coe Hill, 73 years ago, being the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Nugent and had lived in Stirling for the past 12 years.

For many years Mrs. Preston lived in Murray township and while a resident there took an active interest in Tabernacle United Church. She was a former president of the Women's Auxiliary of the church and in the Sunday School was an ardent worker, being a teacher for 25 years. Mrs. Preston continued her church work after moving to Stirling, taking an active interest in St. Paul's United Church. She was a woman of fine character and pleasant personality and made a wide circle of friends, who will sincerely regret her death.

Fraternally Mrs. Preston was a member of Belleville Chapter, No. 55 Order of the Eastern Star.

Surviving are two daughters Mrs. Walter (Audrey) Elliott of Stirling, Mrs. Joseph (Edith) Walmsley of Picton, two grandchildren, Bryce and Robert Philp. Another daughter, Mrs. Maude Philp died a short time ago. Also surviving are two sisters, Mrs. Maude Hoffman of Michigan, Mrs. Jane Cochems of Colorado, and one brother, Edward Nugent of Beverley Hills, Calif. Her husband, the late Warren Preston died in 1939.

ALY MAHER

There were some reports the king wanted to use his constitutional right to dissolve the parliament outright but that Maher asked only for temporary suspension so that he could devote his whole efforts to the impending talks with British authorities.

(Whether this was the reason for Maher's dispute with the palace could not readily be determined from Cairo dispatches, which undergo heavy Egyptian censorship).

It was believed here newspaper reports the Maher cabinet had asked for suspension of the parliament had in some way led to Maher's resignation.

No Date Set

No new date was set immediately for him to open discussions with Prime Minister Aly Maher Pasha. Points they seek to settle are Egypt's demand for Britain to take her 50,000 - man Suez garrison out of Egypt, Middle East defence problems spawned by that demand, and Egypt's desire for sole rule of the Sudan.

A cabinet communique denied reports that King Farouk has used his constitutional power to suspend the Wafdist dominated parliament for 30 days.

The communique took note of the published reports which had said the strongly nationalist legislature was suspended to give the independent prime minister full time for negotiations with the British.

The government "had thought" of suspension when the Wafdist majority appeared likely to block a £5,000,000 bill to aid merchants who suffered loss during the Jan. 26 fire riots, the communique said.

But, it added, the idea was given up when "an understanding" was reached with the Wafdists.

WITHDRAW MISSIONS

Athens, March 1 — (Reuters) — Britain is to withdraw her air and military missions to Greece, leaving only her naval mission, it was announced last night. A communique said the British and Greek governments had agreed that Greece should no longer bear the charges for the three missions

Formation of a farmer's co-operative dairy for the sale of milk products is planned for the Belleville district. It was learned today.

Option on a building site immediately to the north of the city has been secured and capital for the project has been deliberately offered. Distribution of bottled milk to city householders and the manufacture of powdered milk is planned, it was stated.

Stock of the proposed co-operative dairy would be principally owned by farmers now supplying milk to the local dairies, but capital had also been offered by city businessmen.

A spokesman for the group said that through a co-operative dairy milk could be delivered to the customer at considerably less per quart than the present price of 19 cents.

At the same time farmers would receive more for their milk than if it went into cheese, or if only part of their milk was now going to the city dairy.

Prospectus Must Be Sent With Offer of Sale

Toronto, March 1—(CP)— A new requirement for promoters of capital stock issues, designed to protect prospective buyers, is contained in a bill debated in the Ontario legislature yesterday.

The bill, an amendment to the Securities Act, would require that a summary of the prospetus of any now company selling stock be sent to prospective buyers with the first offer of sale.

The summary would be a simplification of the present type of prospectus, which has a complex legal form setting out a description of the company. Under present law the prospectus must be sent to the stock buyer before the completion of the sale.

Debate on the bill was confined to an explanation by Attorney-General Porter, and was adjourned until Monday when other government legislation will be debated.

The legislature yesterday also elected Wallace Downer (PC-Dufferin-Simcoe) as deputy speaker and chairman of the committee of the whole house.

Mr. Porter said the usual prospectus of a company often is not even read by a stock purchaser. The form and content of the proposed summary would be subject to approval by the Ontario Securities Commission and would aim at an easily understood description of the company selling stock.

It was not the duty of the Securities Commission to rule on the worth of speculative stock issues. The new plan was "the most a government can hope to do" to protect buyers.

Mr. Porter also commented on criticisms of brokers who push stock sales in the United States by letter and telephone, often against United States law.

There was the "utmost co-operation" between securities commissions in Ontario and the United States. Every complaint to Ontario from the United States was investigated and where necesary the licence of the offending broker was cancelled.

5,000 PARTICIPATE

Unconfirmed reports said there were also some incidents in villages in the new territories—the British territory between Kowloon and the Chinese border.

Police Attacked

Demonstrators began by attacking police and a police truck carrying a British inspector. They obstructed traffic and jeered at police officers. Then they set fire to a car and a motorcycle.

The rioters were armed with sticks and stones but had no firearms. They began to melt away when police fired tear-gas shells at them. Police said there were no deaths.

As they retreated, the rioters stoned Mongkong police station, breaking windows and littering the station courtyard with glass, stones and rocks.

Then violence broke out again in the teeming Mongkong quarter. Shots were fired and tear gas used.

Police had disconnected the coach in which the "welcome committee" was travelling to the border but one member was allowed to cross to the Chinese side of the border with instructions to tell the mission that it "cannot come in today."

In the new territories, police set up roadblocks and checked all passengers, buses, taxis and private cars. "Unauthorized travellers" were turned back from the border.

Paul Reynaud Accepts Post Of French Premier

Paris, March 1—(AP)—Dapper, 73-year-old Paul Reynaud, who was premier in the 1940 fall of France, bobbed back into the political spotlight today as the financial wizard picked to stave off threatening economic chaos.

Within an hour after flying from Britain at the call of President Vincent Auriol he accepted the job of trying to put together a new government.

Reynaud prepared to start talks at once with leaders of the warring factions in the National Assembly which tumbled the 40-day government of Edgar Faure by voting record defence funds, then refusing a 15-per-cent increase in taxes to raise the money.

Reynaud's hope is to set up a government of national union—a small cabin of technicians with greater powers from parliament to restore order and beat off bankruptcy. His task will be far from easy.

Reynaud leads an independent right-wing group. If he succeeds in forming a cabinet, he will head a government far to the right of the middle-roaders who— with frequent shuffles—have governed France since the war.

A government of national union presumably would aim to include all parties except the communists. If so Reynaud would have to take into his cabinet the leading followers of Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

The Gaullists' 117 votes are the largest bloc in the assembly. In the past they have turned thumbs down on coalitions because they could not get the leading role, but lately there have been hints they might co-operate.

TAKING STEPS

Toronto, March 1—(CP)—Suburban Etobicoke township is taking initial steps to fluorinate its water supply, acting on the advice of Dr. W. K. Fenton, medical officer of health. He will discuss the project with New Toronto from which Etobicoke obtains almost 50 per cent of its water.

Two Dead, Eleven Missing in Storm Across Maritimes

Halifax, March 1 (CP) —The search for three small fishing craft missing since Wednesday's blizzard continued today as another storm developed in the Atlantic south of the Maritimes.

The disturbance was moving rapidly towards the Maritimes and will bring snow late today, but the two to six inches forecast will hardly be noticed on the 12-18 inches that fell Wednesday and Thursday, making the snowiest February since 1918.

Two men died and 11 are missing The toll is expected to go higher.

One search plane yesterday reported sighting two small craft about 45 miles off Lockport but they could not be identified.

One appeared to be awash and was sighted by the pilot only for a brief time. He presumed it sank. The other vessel was making for land under her own power.

Last to See Ship

Capt. Jerome Noble of the Gloucester fishing schooner Mother Ann was probably the last to spot the Theta. He stood by the 50-foot Yarmouth craft Wednesday as the storm increased and saw her head away from his vessel—into the storm. He said she appeared to need no assistance.

The storm forced 18 U.S. airmen to parachute from their plane over Sydney Thursday. Fourteen left for their Torbay, Nfld., destination while the four crew members returned to the United States, presumably to attend a court of inquiry into the loss of the plane. None was injured.

Two elderly men died of overexertion and heart attack, one in New Brunswick and one in Nova Scotia, as they waded through drift filled roads.

Europe as I See It

By Raymond R. Canon

(Article 59)

Germany is finding itself in the middle of some epoch-making legislation, with events moving so fast that not even the Germans themselves are able to keep up with them. At any rate they are just beginning to realize the role that Germany is being groomed to play in the affairs of Western Europe. It is two plans which are causing them great concern at present, for they are of foreign origin and entail a complete change in the conception of Germany as a world power. These are the Schumann Plan, named after the French minister of foreign affairs who formulated it, and the plan for a western European army, which has been proposed by various countries as a step in the right direction.

These two projects have been drawn up mainly for two reasons. The first is that France still has a deep-rooted fear of German aggression — a fear that will not be stilled merely by soothing statements of good intentions by German politicians. It is not easy for the Frenchmen to forget that three times in the past eighty years the Prussians have swept into their country, and not without suffering heavy losses have the French escaped. This will account for the major role that France has played in advocation of the two plans as the best remedy for quieting their fears. French statesmen are alive to the fact that German might must be harnessed, not by reducing it to a land of farmers, as was suggested, but by incorporating German industry into a super-national organization with essentially peaceful aims.

Far-Sightedness Shown

At the same time there has been shown a far-sightedness on the part of these planners which is often lacking in European affairs. They realize that the day is past when one nation is large and powerful enough to take care of itself or to expand economically without the help of the others. European nations are dependent to a large extent on one another for raw materials or finished products, and the interchange of these has been greatly hampered by tariff restrictions or import quotas. It is by breaking down these walls and by pooling resources that all countries will benefit. The need for co-operation has been made even more urgent due to the menace of communism, and so it is doubly important that the statesmen have realized in time the necessity of working together, doubtlessly remembering the phrase, "In unity is strength."

Must Yield Sovereignty

But the most important fact to be remembered is that, in carrying out these plans, the countries involved will have to surrender to a higher authority a part of their sovereignty — something which has been extremely difficult for the at times fanatically nationalistic peoples of Europe to do. It is not too difficult to remember the time when the League of Nations collapsed partly on account of this unwillingness. This decision to give up part of their sovereignty is, I feel, one of the most important to be made in Europe in many years, and if the plans are able to be carried out without too many disagreements arising, it is bound to shape the policy of European countries for many years to come.

It is not the first time, however, that European countries have entered into such agreements, but it is the first attempt on such a large scale. Perhaps the best known example of such co-operation, which is still in effect, is Benelux, the customs union between Belgium, Luxemburg and Holland. This was an attempt to reduce the trade barriers between these countries in order to enlarge the area of free trade. The ground work for this agreement was laid during the war but was first put into effect in 1948, when trade duties between the three states were abolished, as well as the adaptation of a common tariff. The next step on the program is to be a unification of excise taxes. The agreement which exists at the present time has not been easily accomplished due partly to the existence of different languages, a dense population, different wage and tax structures, and above all a different balance of payments position since Belgium finds herself in much more favorable circumstances in this respect. However the three countries can congratulate themselves that they have been able to accomplish so much in so little time.

Pool Resources

Getting back to the present day problems, what the Schumann Plan proposes to do is roughly this. There is to be a pooling of all resources in coal and steel among France, Benelux, Italy and Germany. That is, each country will supply both know-how and materials so that there will be free movement across the border and so that any new developments will be at the disposal of all membership countries. When it is remembered that Germany possesses large deposits of coal in the Saar and the Ruhr as well as huge steel works in the Ruhr Valley, the importance of such a plan is at once made clear. An integration of these two industries into an organization which is above any one country will practically guarantee that neither Germany nor any one of the other participating countries can prepare for aggression. At the same time competition will be reduced to a minimum which fill result in a concentration of improvement of product and reduction in price.

Second Plan

The second plan, known as the Pleven Plan; after a former French prime minister, concerns the formation of a western European army with the slogan, "One army, one uniform." As I mentioned before, its formation is due partly for reasons of defence against any communist aggression, and partly to prevent any reformation of the dreaded German wehrmacht. It too is to be controlled by a super-national body which will draft its own plans and budgets and present them to the various governments who will have to provide the number of men and amount of money required. One must not forget that this army is to function under NATO, and will in no way detract from it. The main problem now is whether Germany is to be represented or not. If so, she will be expected to provide at least twelve divisions and pay for equipping them. To find money for this she would have to take the money currently being used to maintain the occupation forces. It will then be up to the ministers of finance of America, England and France to finance their own occupation forces, something which is bound to provide a few headaches.

Eyebrows Raised

Many eyebrows have been raised over here as a result of Britain's refusal to take an active part in these plans, although most British politicians are ardent advocates of both projects. I must admit that I too am rather puzzled at this attitude, and fail to see any real justification for it, for as far as a European army is concerned, England is in just as great a need for defence as any of the other countries. The channel is not as large as many Englishmen would like to think it. Perhaps this attitude can be partly explained by the fact that England has always felt herself a bit aloof from the continent and feels that she has commitments within the Commonwealth which make it impossible for her to take an active part. We cannot condemn her too harshly for she has undertaken a large rearmament program and has promised to supply an army in case of danger. In spite of this, the opinion over here is that England would do better to throw her lot in with the continent. If Britain is desirous of forming a super state out of the Commonwealth, most people say that she is making a big mistake, that the day of the British Empire is over, so that there is no use dreaming of past glories.

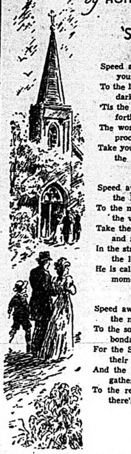
Whether or not Britain participates, the two plans are of vital importance to the rest of western Europe, and only by forgetting their likes and dislikes can Europeans push the plans through to their logical conclusion. The day when this is accomplished will be a red letter one in European history.

DIG LESS PEAT

Oslo. (CP)—Due to labor shortages less peat is being dug in Norway, despite government price support and loans to producers. Last year about 31,000,000 cubic feet of peat was dug, equal to about 140,000 tons of coal.

Stories of Famous Hymns

by HORACE B. POWELL



'Speed Away'

Speed away, speed away on your mission of light,
To the lands that are lying in darkness and night;
'Tis the Master's command; go ye forth in His name,
The wonderful gospel of Jesus proclaim;
Take your lives in your hand, to the work while 'tis day.

Speed away, speed away with the life-giving Word,
To the nations that know not the voice of the Lord;
Take the wings of the morning and fly o'er the wave,
In the strength of your Master
the lost ones to save;
He is calling once more, not a moment's delay.

Speed away, speed away, with the message of rest,
To the souls by the tempter in bondage oppress'd;
For the Saviour has purchased their ransom from sin,
And the banquet is ready, O gather them in;
To the rescue make haste,
there's no time for delay.

Written in 1890 when Ira Sankey, a popular gospel singer, wanted a poem to match a favorite tune, it ranks today with Isaac Watts' hymn, "Jesus Shall Reign Where'er the Sun," and with Bishop Heber's "From Greenland's Icy Mountains." For years it has been a favorite hymn at rallies planned for departing missionaries. Thousands of Christian leaders have been speeded to their soul-winning ministries in distant lands with its challenging message.

Fanny Crosby lost her sight in babyhood but she never allowed her affliction to conquer her spirit. Sometimes, rather, it seemed that her songs were sweeter for having been sung in the night. Even as a child she was composing poems — happy poems — and throughout her life she found solace in writing. Strangely enough, it was not until she was 41 that she turned out her first hymn. William Bradbury, the composer, chatting with her one day in 1864, urged her to try a hymn-poem. Her first composition opened with the stanza:

"We are going, we are going
To a home beyond the skies;
Where the fields are robed in beauty,
And the sunlight never dies."

Before she was called home, in 1915, she wrote several thousand religious songs. At one time her hymns far outnumbered those of any other author in the Sunday School song books of the day. Many of these, including such gems as "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," "Pass Me Not, O Gentle Saviour," and "Blessed Assurance, Jesus is Mine" have won a permanent place in the hymnals of all the leading church groups.

LEADING PROBLEM

Cornwall, Ont. (CP) —The increasing magnitude of the traffic fatality problem was stressed in a speech here by Inspector Arthur Witts of the Ontario Provincial Police, veteran safety expert. "When we commenced this horseless carriage business little did we realize we were fashioning a terrific juggernaut of sudden death," he said.

THEY'RE BIG SPENDERS

Downey Rice, counsel for a United States Senate "watchdog committee" conducting a Washington investigation into the spending proclivities of the American military authorities, has dug out a few of the reasons that wars are costly ventures.

Mr. Rice's enquiries have disclosed that mechanics employed in building a far northern base for the American armed forces were being paid at the rate of $17,000 a year for their services. Laborers on the same project were receiving $13,000 a year. The same group of workmen — their number not stated — had received more than $1,000,000 in pay before they even reached the job.

Lieut.-Gen. Lewis A. Pick, chief of the U.S. army engineers, defended these expenditures and gave what he probably regarded as good reasons why they were advisable, even necessary.

High-ranking military officers may differ widely in their abilities and capacities, but they nearly all seem to have one point in common — they seem to be good spenders; good spenders of other people's money, that is.

MANY IMMIGRANTS COME

According to a Canadian Press dispatch from Ottawa last Tuesday, Canada imported 194,391 immigrants during 1951, an increase equal to one and a half per cent of the country's total population. This was the largest influx in any one year since 1913, when about 400,000 new settlers arrived.

The largest single group admitted during 1951 were Germans, of whom there were 32,395, as compared with 5,825 during the preceding year. Since the word "German," as used in these statistics, means "of German nationality," and not "German by ethnic origin," these 32,395 "Germans" may, or may not, be what is ordinarily meant by "German."

From Great Britain came 31,370 of the new arrivals. The Netherlands supplied 19,130 and Italy 24,351.

Of the total number of immigrants, more than half, or 104,842, came to Ontario.

WANTS FREEDOM PRESERVED HERE

Statesmen who have a great desire to defend freedom in faraway parts of the world but who apparently care little about preserving and extending freedom at home were criticized the other night in a speech made in Pembroke by M. Grattan O'Leary, associate editor of the Ottawa Journal.

Mr. O'Leary, who is considered one of Canada's greatest newspaper editors, stated: "Some statesmen have a greater passion for distant freedom than for freedom here at home. We must show our capacity to set our own affairs in order before we try to set in order the affairs of Europe and Asia."

He continued, in part: "If we wish to make democracy work, we must send to parliament, and to our legislatures, and to our town and city councils, the men with the best brain and the best conscience that the country can produce. We must get men of integrity, of heart, and of intelligence, to write our laws and we must be alert to see that they carry out our mandate."

Many thoughtful people will agree with Mr. O'Leary's contention that we should insist on preserving and restoring freedom in Canada just as much as we try to preserve or restore freedom in remote parts of the world. They will also agree with his suggestion that the best men available should be elected to make our laws and see that they are administered properly.

WORTH WATCHING

It is going to be interesting to see how the five-day week works out in banks located in centres of population having 50,000 or more population.

The banking companies stated, in making the change, that its purpose was to enable them to get and keep satisfactory help in competition with other firms, most of which were already working only a five-day week.

Now that bank clerks in the larger centres have a five-day week, while those in the smaller places still work six days, will all the younger bank employees in the smaller centres start clamoring for jobs in one of the big cities?

Will today's youngsters be willing to embark on a banking career when they know they will be liable for transfer from a place where the five-day week obtains to a community where there is a six-day week?

The whole plan may boomerang, or force the banks to adopt the five-day week entirely.

FRIENDSHIP'S LIMITS

My father once told me, "A friend is a friend.
But never on friendship for favors depend;
And never, whatever may happen to you,
Ask for a favor a friend shouldn't do.

"There's much that a friend will be happy to do,
But still there are limits for him and for you.
And if you get in trouble, as some day you may,
Don't ask him to settle the fine you should pay.

"Never ask of a friend to do something for you
Which you know he has taken a vow not to do.
For that isn't friendship. Now heed what I say:
That's asking a good friend his oath to betray."

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

March 1st., 1932.

Mrs. Euretta Watson, Catherine Street, yesterday reached the advanced age of 88 years. The day, however, was her 21st birthday; she was born on Feb. 29th, 1844, which was leap year, and thereby missed three out of four birthdays besides the one at the turn of the century; 1900 was not observed as a leap year. She was born in Prince Edward County, the daughter of William and Nancy Thompson. For 65 years she has lived in this city and many friends will be pleased to extend to her congratulations and good wishes.

Mr. F. H. Henry is spending a few days in Toronto.

Mrs. Peter Cote is spending a few days in Odessa.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Doran and Miss Stella Ford spent Sunday in Kingston.

Mrs. R. H. Stiver and daughter, Doreen, have returned to their home on Charles Street, after spending some time in Pembroke.

March came in like a lamb. The heaviest snow storm of the season, which fell yesterday, is now only in small patches.

March 1st., 1922.

Belleville Intermediates outplayed the Niagara Falls team here, but failed to score more than seven goals to their opponents five which tied the round, but the game was the most thrilling seen here this winter and one of the most desperate struggles in years on local ice. Belleville players showed the highest kind of courage in never giving up fighting for a moment and finally they were rewarded by goals enough to decide the right to play Kitchener. The following composed the Belleville team: Boland, Holway, Green, Arnott, Whalen, Weir, Goyer and Hagerman. Belleville and Niagara Falls, now tied with 11 goals each on the round, playing in the semi-finals of the O.H.A. series, will play the game necessary to decide the winners, in Toronto on Wednesday. Manager Ed. Thomas of the local team received this information from the O.H.A. this morning.

40 YEARS AGO

March 1st., 1912.

Mr. James Skinner, Front Street barber, has sold his block adjoining the Intelligencer office to Mr. Chesher, formerly in business in the nearby burned Cronk Block. He will take possession April 1st. Mr. Skinner will continue in business elsewhere on Front Street.

Large stocks of ice are now in store for the coming summer. The ice is of excellent quality and upwards of two feet in thickness.

Mr. Charles Bishop, Jr., has left on a trip to Western Canada and may decide to locate in Saskatchewan.

50 YEARS AGO

March 1st., 1902.

Wheeled conveyances were on the streets today; the sleighing is shot.

Owing to the bad condition of the roads the Trenton stage did not reach the city today and other stages were very late in arriving.

Mr. W. J. Moore, barrister, Madoc, was in town today.

Mr. W. McGregor has returned to Madoc after spending several days here.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Rankin of Campbellford are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Mills in this city.

CHEER UP!

Sometimes as we read modern novels we come to the conclusion that human life is essentially filthy and degraded. I have just been reading a certain well-written novel which involves a most interesting plot. The book pleases me very much in many ways, but just about the time I get interested in it, the author opens one of the main trunks of the city sewer and for a few minutes lets the sewage engulf his readers. After an hour or two of this sort, one comes to the conclusion that there is no decency in the world.

But of course that is a mistake. The decent people in the world far outnumber the indecent. For every houschold in which carousing drunken parties are held over the weekend, there are hundreds, and perhaps thousands, of households where people are quietly enjoying themselves and in which no unwholesome type of entertainment is ever permitted. Alcoholism and problem drinking have reached alarming proportions in this country, yet those who drink to excess are at most about four per cent of the population. About one third of the people of the United States do not drink at all.

Most people are well intentioned and decent, the modern novelist to the contrary notwithstanding.

Letters to The Editor

JUST TO KEEP THE RECORD STRAIGHT

Dear sir:-

In view of the fact that "The profit of the earth is for all," and that the King himself is served by the field, it should be clear that full production of our idle land is of first importance, despite what seems to be the contrary and which is infered in the following:- As of date July 24, 1951, 350 members and their wives of the combined "American Farm and Canadian Agricultural Associations," met at Guelph, Ontario, in convention to discuss the shape of things to come. At that convention it was pointed out that should the output of cheese be reduced to a basis of domestic requirements, it would result in the price of all dairy products rising to much higher price level, these are high thoughts, and they were coupled with the announcement "that extensive agricultural expansion in Canada, had been replaced by intensive expansion and that as between 1941 and 1946 there had been a decrease in the number of Canadian farms by nearly 27,000 resulting in a decrease of land under cultivation of nearly 2,000,000 acres.

It was further pointed out that this condition invested with office and authority, what they were pleased to call "Supply Contraction," and that it was the great white hope of "Price Improvement." To the casual observer, the slogan that day seemed to be "Plan your work and work your plan," kill a flock of birds with one stone, create demand and high price through the medium of scarcity, and control production, since there is no other way whereby we can have without production.

The following statistics taken from "Market Information Service," Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, will be helpful to show readers at a glance how this slogan "plan your work and work your plan" has worked, and the figures should be authentic. Dealing with our meat supply the output decreased considerable in year 1951, as against the output of 1950. Primary movement of all livestock to all stockyards, to all plants direct, and all export, number of cattle shipped decreased in 1951, by 14.2%, number of calves decreased by 23.3%, number of sheep and lambs decreased by 24.9%, number of hogs increased slightly by 2.5%. Dealing with prices these figures disclose that a new record high price for all Canadian livestock was established in 1951, and the figures represent the average price raise per head received in 1951, as against 1950. Cattle price increase 33.3%, calf price increase 34%, hog price increase 13.2%, sheep and lamb price increase 23.9%.

These figures combine to indicate beyond a possible doubt that agriculture expansion in Canada as affecting the production of meat has been considerably curtailed and the contemporary fractitious agents largely responsible have at last been dragged into the open, and they now parade under the camouflaged name of "supply contraction," this combination has created a high price level, now largely responsible for our present profitless economy. Most people will agree that distribution and profits should be classed as secondary problems, since they are not insolvable if the right approach is employed, the thing that we question most is the approach or method employed. I wish to refer briefly to those 2,000,000 acres of idle land and the 27,000 farms which they say have disappeared since 1941. Since that date a great number of our farmers have added to their acreage, and it is common knowledge that most of those 27,000 farms disappeared in that manner in the development of their contraction policy as a consequence more and more of their holdings have grown up to weeds.

Not all farmers are in this class, but why are large tracts of land left in the control of such ruthless inefficient operators, in view of the fact that world population is increasing in excess of 23 million souls per year. I think that the disposition of this idle land contains the answer in part to "our immigration and displaced person problem." Productive land and law abiding, self sustaining D.P.'s would be an asset whereas the reverse (which we have here in Canada at present) is both a libability and a dangerous menace to organized society. I am quite sure that a five year probationary period served on the land should be one of the major deciding factors as between granting them full citizenship and franchise otherwise deportation. Most of our own and best Canadians served a much longer period than the above on the land and are much better because of it. Who will question that we as Canadians have not the right as well as the responsibility to seriously question the management angle relative to this idle land. This should be the concern of parliament a more satisfactory adjustment of the above should be their immediate responsibility.

It is not a question of forcing the land or the farmers, neither is it a question of further assistance to farmers, most of this double taxation subsidy manna is literally stinking in the peoples nostrils, we are compelled to state these hard facts, since we can do nothing against the truth, only for the truth. What we must have is new leadership, not the variety which debate to confuse, and after thinking they have accomplished their purpose, prorogue and walk around the block only to convene again and vote themselves double pay, imagine such leadership two years pay for one short years work. We want leadership unselfish in principle, we want efficiency, we want lowered production costs we want volume and a chance to live. The only thing that I can think of that we can have without greater production is a parliament like we have at Ottawa. Our farmers must be strong to survive such muddling, I am glad that they are strong, it is my wish even their perfection.

Yours sincerely,
I. G. Sexsmith.

Horder Denies Agene Harmful In Making Bread

London, (CP)—Lord Horder, physician to the Royal Family and adviser to the minister of food, has assured the British public that bread made from "agenised" flour has had nothing to do with the outbreak of nervous or other diseases in the country.

His assurance followed an attack in the House of Lords against the use of agene, a chemical agent employed by British bakers for more than 25 years to give a whiter and larger loaf.

Charges had also been made by Dr. John Coghlan, a Hull practitioner, that thousands had died and the health of many more had been endangered by eating the chemically-treated bread.

Replying to those who demanded instant abolition of agene, Lord Horder said: "We don't say, because chromium has been used in motor car manufacture for the past 20 years, that therefore the increase in road accidents is due to chromium."

The same "fallacy" in elementary logic entered into the current bread-whitening controversy.

"I am satisfied," he said, "that we cannot trace any nervous complaints prevalent in this country to the use of agene as an improver in bread."

When Lord Chorley remarked that the practice of using agene had been discarded in the U.S., Lord Horder retorted: "But Americans change from day to day. They have a very sensitive administration. They discard something, then go back to it, and do not always tell you."

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

It will be interesting to see the statistics, presently, on the number of Canadians who have gone to the States this past winter for a holiday in California, Florida and the other winter resort areas. With the restrictions lifted, the number must have been extremely large. My branch bank manager says it is a phenomenon; and a service club which I lately attended for lunch with a friend had a turn-out so small that, on a casual count, it was figured that 17 of the membership of around fifty were away south for a winter holiday.

This is the start of a year that will be remarkable for travel among Canadians, by all the signs. Even without the prospect of the coronation, travel facilities to Britain and Europe are said to be extremely congested, and were so long ahead of the normal booking. Many people who were loth to leave their business during the recent years of lively prosperity have apparently decided that this is the year to relax.

A Newfoundland friend, aware of the travel trends, has written to suggest that, since this is definitely a travelling year, it ought to be the one in which mainlander Canadians might very well choose to visit the new province. "Anglers, especially," he says, "and people interested in boats and small craft, amateur artists looking for unusual landscapes to paint, those attracted by genuine handicrafts, will be glad, ten years from now, that they made the acquaintance of Newfie before it lost its individualistic qualities."

He says it may look far away to a British Columbian or a Westerner: but not so far as England, and, some ways, not as far as the palm belt where so many Canadians now battle for a night's lodgings. He enclosed a sample of the travel material on Newfoundland one can get from the Canadian Government Travel Bureau, Ottawa.

WHO KNOWS ANYTHING ABOUT PYORRHEA?

I believe I know as much about the condition commonly called pyorrhea as—oh, well, I can afford to be modest about it and say I know as much as the average physician or dentist does about it.

That isn't much.

In the first place the very name, pyorrhea, which means flow or dischage of pus, has no specific significance. It sounds more imposing to say pyorrhea alveolaris, which means flow of pus from tooth sockets. If there is little or no evidence of suppuration (pus formation)) some dentists use another term, such as gingivitis, which means inflammation of the gum, and still doesn't specify any specific disease.

Many dentists or dental authorities have set forth their views of the cause, nature, prevention and treatment of so-called pyorrhea, each his own, like the numerous techniques for brushing the teeth, leading us a little farther in to the woods and leaving us no better off than we were before.

It seems that patients who seek treatment for pyorrhea must continue treatment from now on. If a dentist or a periodontist had the temerity to dismiss a pyorrhea patient as cured his or her colleagues would raise their eyebrows and question the accuracy of the diagnosis.

I hate to mention it so abruptly but I believe all of the mouth conditions usually ascribed to pyorrhea are manifestations of physical degeneration due to nutritional deficiencies in prenatal life, infancy, childhood and youth.

The degeneration process was regarded in the past as atrophy (wasting, shrinkage) of gums, teeth, jaw bone.

The process may be retarded or arrested even in mature individuals by correcting the nutritional deficiencies not for weeks or months but from now on.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Singers, Beware The Tonsil Snatcher

My 16-year-old daughter has infected tonsils. Her singing teacher advises against their removal. . . . (Mrs. L. M.)

Answer—This is good advice—in his zeal to "get every bit of tonsil" the ever ready operator may include chunks of throat muscle in the bite of his snicker-snee. If any physican of standing questions this I'll be glad to cite the source. If your daughter requires any treatment for infected tonsils let it be electrocoagulation (diathermy).

Navel Rupture

Grandson aged 10 weeks has a navel rupture and I feel that something should be done about it, although the doctor says that if it doesn't heal by the time the child is two years old they can operate . . . (Mrs. D. C. B.)

Answer—Being just a plodding home town doctor he naturally doesn't understand such things as well as the all-round "specialists" in the city, eh? The umbilical hernia, breach, rupture, bulge will very likely heal spontaneously in a year or less. If not, then the doctor knows best.

Psoriasis

The iodin ration has cleared up my psoirasis—of long standing. I can't begin to tell you how grateful . . . (G. M. W.)

Answer—Thank you for your report.

Asthma From Parrot

Every time I sneeze my family blames it on my parrot. Could any one get asthma from a parrot? (Mrs. L. W.)

Answer—Yes. Send stamped self-addressed envelope for pamphlet on Asthma.

Red Chinese Believed Sending Military Advisers, Technicians To Aid Rebels in Indo-China

By LARRY ALLEN

Hanoi, Indo-China — (AP) — Communist Chinese military advisers and technicians appear to be coming into Indo - China in steadily increasing numbers to back up the Communist-led Vietminh forces.

French and foreign intelligence sources now estimate there are about 10,000 Red Chinese aiding the soldiers of Moscow-trained Ho Chi Minh in his war against the French and Viet Namese. This figure represents an increase of 4,000 within five months.

Intelligence officers say the Red Chinese work behind the Vietminh lines, keeping tab on the communications network and teaching the Vietminh how to direct artillery and mortar fire.

Whenever and wherever the Vietminh take territory in the north Tonkin area of northern Indo-China, they are reported quickly followed by Red Chinese establishing themselves in key control points.

The Chinese however, seem to be clever in keeping out of the way, in all the fighting in northern Indo-China, neither the French nor Viet Namese have ever found any killed or wounded who could definitely be identified as Red Chinese.

There is still nothing to indicate that Communist China is at any time soon going to move bulk forces into North Tonkin to aid the Vietminh, but the threat of invasion is ever present. The Chinese have a concentration estimated at 250,000 troops and strong air forces in southern China provinces not far from the Indo-China border.

They could cross the border without opposition at any time since practically all of North Tonkin is in the hands of the Vietminh, with the exception of the French-held perimeter around Hanoi and a northeastern strip in the Moncay area.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

SENDING OUT A BOOK.

Only that one who has written a book, and had it published, can understand the thrill or expectation that is connected with such an event. Many of the great books of the world were sent out with hardly a ripple of attention or appreciation following them.

Henry D. Thoreau's first book, "A Week on the Concord and Merrimack River" was published in 1849 and less than 300 copies were sold. The author gave away 75, and the rest of the original 1,000 copies were returned to him, which he stored, remarking: "I have now a library of nearly nine hundred volumes, over seven hundred of which I wrote myself!"

Thoreau's only other book, published during his lifetime, was "Walden," now recognized as one of the great books of the world, yet there was recorded only these words in his journal of August 9th, 1854: "To Boston. 'Walden' published. Elder-berries. Waxwork yellowing." Thoreau died at the age of but 45, not knowing he had written one of the greatest nature books ever written.

George Gissing, the English writer, also died before he reached his fiftieth birthday, leaving some thirty or so volumes behind, yet only two are scheduled for immortality—his "Ionian Sea" and his "Private Papers of Henry Ryecroft." Neither of these did he think outstanding, yet they are among the literature treasures of today. In life Gissing knew of heartaches and poverty as few authors ever have.

Michael Fairless (Margar Fairless Barber) wrote a lit book, called "The Roadmender Shortly after she had finished it she died, never having lived to hear of its reception. It was first published in 1903 and I understand that half a million copie have been sold, and it has brought comfort and hope to millions I am sure. It is one of my prized books. How very wonderful t have written a book that keep living year after year!

A great book is deathless. Montaigne, the French writer, onc said: "If you want to know me buy my book and read it." Grea books are among the significan events of history.

New British Budget Expected To Undertake Economies To Avert National Bankruptcy

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, March 1—(CP)—Postponement of Britain's new budget adds another week of tingling suspense to an event that already has politicians palpitating in anticipation.

The budget always causes excitement and apprehension, but this time it is something special. It is the first Conservative peacetime budget in 13 years. It marks the first decisive, thought-out stroke of policy under the new regime and it comes at a time of critical importance in the affairs of the country.

From the economic point of view, the budget to be presented March 11 may well determine whether a new devaluation of the pound will be needed during the summer. That is when the sterling area's gold and dollar reserves will be depleted if the drain continues at the present rate.

Politically, the proposals of Richard Austen Butler in his first term as chancellor of the exchequer are equally touch-and-go. All signs are that the Labor opposition is in a sour mood. The communists, small in numbers but influential in some trade unions, have already launched a campaign to use government economies as a trigger for strikes in industry.

Britain Going Broke

By now, everybody knows that Britain is going broke. Nearly everybody agrees something should be done about it. The problem for Butler, in broadest terms, is how to do it without providing an obvious signal for industrial unrest in a country where the social climate sometimes tends to be tricky.

Leaving aside abstruse calculations, one example illustrates the point. Britain is spending more than she earns. The three main items of government expenditure are defence, social services and food subsidies. Of these only the subsidies afford prospect of substantial saving.

The hitch is that Labor regards these as inviolate and that the effect of abolishing them would be dynamic. While posters which helped the Conservatives win the last election still wave on some billboards, promising lower prices, removal of the subsidies would have an impact on every housekeeping budget. Price tags on bread, milk, meat and butter would show a sharp increase.

Not Committed

The Conservative argument would be that the change has to come, that the subsidies come out of taxes anyway, that it would only affect each individual by a sum roughly equal to that paid for a weekly package of cigarets. The question may be whether the public is sophisticated enough to listen to such arguments.

Butler is not committed to any change. At an election meeting last October, he became wrathful when hecklers taunted him with proposing to clip the subsidies. In the Conservative election manifesto, it is stated although the subsidies had risen to "alarming proportions, in present circumstances it would clearly not only be unwise but impossible to make any radical change."

The key word may be "radical". It seems as good a guess as any that the subsidies will be modestly trimmed, come what may on the political front.

wan, promised that the government will not let cattle producers bear the "whole brunt" of the consequences of the American embargo against imports of Canadian livestock and meats.

Announces Embargo

He also suggested that quarantine measures should be left in federal hands. British Columbia has announced an embargo against prairie livestock and meats.

Mr. Howe, in his statement on Canada-U.S. trade, said the situation "has not developed to the point where retaliatory measures would be either appropriate or effective."

"The Canadian government," he added, "deplores the fact that, by introducing these new import controls, the United States government has taken action in direct contravention of her trade agreement with Canada."

Through the controls, the U.S. had "seriously impaired" the value of tariff concessions which she negotiated with Canada at various international trade conferences.

But Canada had been "greatly encouraged" by support being given in the US. Congress to repeal the restrictions.

"Our relations with the United States are cordial on both sides and the Canadian government did not consider it appropriate to threaten retaliation, as reported, on a subject which is at present receiving the constructive consideration of the United States Senate"

Move Portraits Of Borden, King During Repairs

Ottawa. (CP) — Portraits of two of Canada's former Prime Ministers— W. L. Mackenzie King and Sir Robert Borden—have been moved from the main entrance of the parliament building.

Speaker Ross Macdonald ordered that the pictures be moved from the entrance where stone carvers have started work that will keep them busy for at least two years.

Mr. Macdonald said Mr. King's picture, although covered, had already suffered some damage since the work started. Earlier, he ordered the removal of a picture of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, taken during their tour of Canada in 1939.

The picture of the royal couple was placed in the spacious railway committee room of the Commons. The pictures of Mr. King and Mr. Borden were moved to a spot at the entrance to the House of Commons, in the west end of the building.

Ranged alongside Mr. King and Sir Robert were portraits of most of Canada's prime ministers since Confederation.

A portrait of Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Conservative prime minister for a period following the First World War, was moved from the caucus room of the Progressive Conservative party to the entrance of the Commons.

The only portraits now missing from the collection are those of Sir J. J. Abbott, prime minister in 1891 and 1892; Sir Mackenzie Bowell, prime minister from 1894 to 1896 and Viscount Bennett, prime minister from 1930 to 1935.

Plans have been made to obtain portraits of the three men.

CHARGE IS LAID

Hamilton, Mar.1 — (CP) — A charge of criminal negligence was laid Friday against G. H. Chambers following a fatal train-automobile collision Thursday in which Alex Minigan, 63, of Saltfleet township was killed.

The charge was based on claims that the crossing's guard rails were not lowered in time to prevent traffic from proceeding onto the crossing.

10 CENTS A COPY

Montreal, March 1 — (CP) — Le Devoir, French - language daily, Friday announced that effective March 3 the price of the paper will be raised from seven to 10 cents a copy.

The paper said the increase was necessitated by high production costs.

Many Pondering How to Extend Holidays

By JOHN LEBLANC
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, March 1—(CP)— It's never too early for summer holiday talk, so there are people putting a warm touch into these chill days by trying to figure out how to make the vacation season last longer.

They want to break Canada of the habit of putting a fairly definite stop to the holiday season in the early part of September. It would involve uprooting some strongly-entrenched traditions.

The idea is to push back Labor Day, and necessarily the school re-openings, by a fortnight or so into the second half of September. The two events are seasonal landmarks that have become largely accepted as meaning the end of summer for vacations.

By long custom, the first Monday of September has been fixed as the holiday on which labor celebrates the progress it has made over the years. Right afterwards, the youngsters head back to school.

Concurrently, there is a mass exodus from the vacation spots. That is what the holiday-minded people—chiefly those interested in tourist promotion—are trying to halt. They contend it is costing Canada many a tourist dollar, besides depriving Canadians of the full benefits of balmy early-fall weather.

For the last four years, the Canadian Tourist Association has been working quietly to extend the recognized summer season by moving Labor Day back to the third Monday of September. It has not been getting far.

Intensified Drive

This year the association—made up of 190 organizations interested in the tourist trade—is planning an intensified drive. It is hoping to get together a conference with heads of big labor bodies and with education authorities, and the idea also will be stressed during the C.T.A's tourist service week campaign May 25-31.

Many obstacles would have to be removed before the change could be made. The biggest is the attitude of labor, and the federal government already has told the C.T.A. it will not shift the date without the full support of organized labor.

The Canadian Congress of Labor, Canada's second-largest worker organization, has been non-comittal on the idea so far, though its official publication has been lending some editorial support to it.

But Percy Bengough, president of the bigger Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, is dead set against the change. He takes the view that it is the school re-opening that closes off the resort season, rather than Labor Day, and suggests concentrating on the later school date only.

Another big factor, from the standpoint of tourist dollars, is the situation in the U.S. to get the full effect of the later date, it would have to be on an international date. Some sentiment for it is developing in the U.S.

Any change will come slowly, though. "The idea has definite merit," says Norman Dowd, executive secretary of the C.C.L., "but it may take a generation to bring it in."

Indo-China Gets Big U.S. Help To Battle Reds

Saigon, Indo-China — (AP)— United States military aid to the French union forces fighting the Communist-led Vietminh in Indo-China now is close to the $500,000,000 mark — and there's more on the way.

An average of one ship daily—often two or three—is unloading in the ports of Saigon and Haiphong everything needed to fight a war.

Donald R. Heath, U.S. minister to the three associated states of Indo-China — Viet Nam, Cambodia and Laos—said the war the French forces are fighting against the Vietminh is the same cause for with the U.S. is helping all freedom-loving countries.

Heath told a gathering of French and Indo - Chinese officials at the Saigon docks as ship No. 100 arrived to unload U.S. supplies that "We are sending you not only the tools of war but the implements of peace."

No official announcement has ever been made here by American sources on the value of the war equipment which has been delivered, but from information available and based upon what the French themselves have estimated, the figure now is around the $500,000,000 mark.

American interest in deliveries to the French union forces doesn't end with the arrival of supplies here.

U.S. army, navy and air officers, attached to the U.S. military advisory group for Indo-China follow the equipment right up to the front lines to see what the French union forces are doing with it.

SOAR TO HIGHEST PEAKS

Paris, Mar. 1—(Reuters)—The dollar and pound sterling soared to their highest peaks since 1949 on the Paris black market Thursday. Reason was increased buying of foreign currencies by persons fearing the national assembly would pass a bill providing sliding wage scales. The dollar was at 483 francs compared with the official rate of 350, and the pound was 1,110 francs—official rate 972 to 988.

12 NOW DEATH TOLL

Rio De Janiero, Mar. 1—(Reuters) — Death toll in the crash of an airliner in the Minas Geraes diamond - mining area of Brazil rose Friday to 12 when four of the injured died.

The twin - engined DC-3 carrying 27 passengers and a crew of four crashed and exploded while trying to land in foggy weather yesterday afternoon.

Injuries of the 19 survivors were described today as serious.

QUEBEC TAKES

Federal authorities questioned whether the provincial bans were constitutional since under the Canadian constitution international and interprovincial trade generally is under federal jurisdiction.

The B.C. government was reported to be reconsidering its position and is checking to see if its restrictions can be eased without danger.

200 Head Slaughtered

Meanwhile, work continued in the quarantined areas surrounding Regina to eradicate the easily-spread disease. First slaughtering of infected herds took place.

Two hundred cattle of a diseased herd were led to a burial pit and shot by R.C.M.P. constables with rifles. The carcasses were covered with unslaked lime and covered deeply.

That was the first of a number of such shootings which will see 650 more cattle killed at other sites during the next few days.

The search also was unabated for the origin of the disease which never before struck Canada. The possibilities were raised that it came from Mexico which suffered a disastrous outbreak in 1946 or from the United Kingdom.

The United Kingdom was written off as a point of origin because of a six-month embargo placed on cattle from there and a close watch for entries from this source.

Of Mexico as a source, it was pointed out that Canada buys no cattle from there and all Mexican motoring tourists must pass through the U.S. which enforces rigid inspection as a precautionary measure.

One suspected source, German immigrant Willi Bruntjen, arrived here by air from Vancouver. The 29-year-old farmer will be examined at the agriculture department's Hull, Que., laboratories.

Bruntjen worked on the farm of Lenonard Wass near Regina where the outbreak of foot-and-mouth occurred Nov. 26.

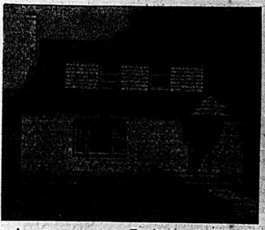
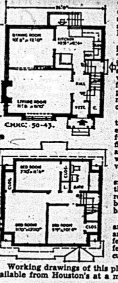
HOUSTON'S HOUSE-OF-THE-WEEK





There is a clean-cut look about this one-and-a-half storey house with its simplicity of design and trim exterior suitable to any residential neighborhood.

Several features enhance the "living area" of this well-planned house. There is a large dining room and, in addition, space in the kitchen for a table and chairs or built-in nook which would be ideal for informal family snacks. This arrangement is particularly useful when small children have to have supper earlier than other members of the family.

Window space is arranged so that rooms are bright but there is enough open wall space for tasteful furniture arrangement. The open fireplace and built-in china cabinet are other interesting features which will add to the comfort and convenience of the house.

The second floor area is slightly smaller than the first floor area but this does not detract from the roominess of the three comfortable bedrooms and conveniently located bathroom.

The house is 24 feet by 26 feet and for estimating purposes the area of the first floor is 633 square feet and the second floor is 555 square feet. The cubic contents are 17,598 cubic feet.

Working drawings of this plan, known as Design 50-43, are available from Houston's at a minimum cost.

World Day of Prayer Attended By Many Women, Far and Near

Yesterday, the women from the various Protestant churches of the city and surrounding localities met in St. Thomas' Anglican Church for their World Day of Prayer, commemorating the Saviour's forty days of fasting, known as 'Lent', making one unbroken chain of prayer the world round from dawn on the Figi Islands to dusk on the Arctic Island of St. Lawrence.

As the nave of this lovely church was steadily filled with serious faced women, who came to join their prayers with those of the women of one hundred and four countries of the world, soft music, played by the organist of the afternoon, Mrs. H. W. Dillnutt, combining with the lovely, Bible scenes of its beautiful windows, added to the deep reverence of the occasion.

Christ, Our Hope

Mrs. John Watson, of St. Thomas' Church, led the call to worship, the theme of which was, "Christ Our Hope," which was followed by the hymn, "Praise My Soul, The King of Heaven." Mrs. W. Mantle, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church led the "adoration," Mrs. M. Mollison, of the Salvation Army, that of "Penitence;" then the singing of "My Faith Looks Up to Thee," and "Assurance," by Mrs. Fred Wilson, of Holloway Street United Church, and Mrs. W. A. Watson of Bethel Gospel Hall, followed by the hymn, "O God, Our Help in Ages Past."

The "Intercession," was taken by Mrs. J. S. Spearman from the Wesleyan Methodist Church, and the "Dedication" by Mrs. Robert Gray, of the Christian and Missionary Alliance Tabernacle, while those who led in the intercessory prayers included Mrs. J. S. Spearman; Wesleyan Methodist, Mrs. J. Watson, St. Thomas' Anglican Church, Mrs. D. Stewart, Christ Church, Mrs. R. Rowley, Tabernacle Church, Mrs. Duncan McTavish, Bridge Street United, and Mrs. K. Danial, of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church.

Power of Prayer

The address of the afternoon was given by Mrs. Arthur Smith, of St. Thomas' Anglican Church, who spoke of the tremendous services just concluded under Dr. A. E. Cliffe on 'faith, the power of prayer,' and of healing, stating "if we want help, we must pray regularly and frequently."

Mrs. Smith also mentioned the wide variety of Christian experiences, that the many, denominations might be likened to a wheel, whose spokes all centre toward the axle, God; "that the fundamental facts of Christianity which unite us are much stronger than those which divide us" in which connection she quoted the promise found in Matthew 18:19, "...if two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in Heaven." How much more might be done by the many times two working together in united prayer, asked Mrs. Smith, quoting also the well-known lines, "More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of...the whole wide world is bound by golden chains of prayer about the feet of God."

Various Allocations

In closing her address, Mrs. Smith referred to the allocation of the collections received at the 1951 World Day of Prayer offertories which amounted to $23,500. The countries assisted through these offerings in Christian literature, missions, Bibles, Christian research; and various other Christian activities included Africa, India, Japan, Korea, Latin America, Pakistan, as well as International Missionary Council, London and New York, Division of Foreign Missions, National Council of Churches of Christ, in the United States, Committees on Christian Literature for Women and Children in the Mission Fields, World Council of Churches Geneva; Canadian Council of Churches; Co-operative Work in Canada; Christian literature, Canada.

Following the presentation of the offering received by Mrs. W. D. Saunders, Mrs. S. Morton, Mrs. F. Clarke and Mrs. Alker, the repetition of The Lord's Prayer in unison followed by the singing of the hymn, "The Day Thou Gavest Lord, is Ended", and the benediction, brought to a close an unforgettable meeting where all may gather "around one common mercy seat" of one accord in a bond that naught can sever.

Shalom From Israel

AFFIKIM AND DEGANIA

Jerusalem, Israel — (Special to the Ontario Intelligencer) — In the northeastern part of Israel lies a body of clear water. This body of water is mentioned often in the Bible and at the present time it is called by three different names. These are Lake Kinneret, the Sea of Tiberius, and more popularly, the Sea of Galilee.

This body of water is fed by the River Jordan and provides a summer resort location for the people of Israel, a fishing industry for some of the settlements on its banks, and irrigation water for the surrounding agricultural area. The settlements around the Sea of Galilee are quite prosperous and interesting to visit. While travelling in the area we visited the settlements of Affikim and Degania Aleph.

Crossed Jordan

We crossed the Jordan River to visit Kibbutz Affikim on the southeastern shore of the Sea of Galilee. Much activity seemed to be going on all over the settlement. Some of the people were doing agricultural work in the fields and orchards, others were building new homes, but the majority were working in the factory which has made the settlement well known in Israel, that is, the plywood factory.

The factory was originally built 20 years ago for the purpose of fruit and vegetable canning but was converted during the war by the British into a wooden box factory. Following the cessation of hostilities the settlement acquired materials for making plywood and the factory was converted again. Because of the lack of trees in Israel, most of the logs had to be imported from Canada and Brazil, but today they are imported from Africa.

Make Good Plywood

The plywood is of excellent quality and is used mostly for domestic purposes, it being in great demand in this country. This industry is an important source of revenue for Affikim, and the plywood factory is the only one in this country.

On the southwestern shore of the Sea of Galilee there exists one of the oldest and most famous settlements in Israel — Degania Aleph, founded 41 years ago. The name Degania is an Arab name meaning fruitful crops and also is the name of a type of corn-flower.

It was one of the first settlements of the Jordan valley. Because of the extreme heat there, the Arabs did not settle there and thus, when the first pioneers came in 1911 they found nothing but uncultivated vegetation. Due to the lack of finance the fields could not be irrigated until 1921.

Single Annual Crop

Prior to that time, only one crop a year was planted, that during the rainy winter season. Water is now pumped at the rate of 1,500 cubic metres per hour, compared with 10 cubic metres prior to the beginning of irrigation. The settlement received a serious blow in 1926 when an earthquake destroyed most of its buildings.

During the Israel war of independence, Degania was attacked by Syrian forces using artillery, infantry and tanks over an eight day period. The settlers, lacking in proper defences, withstood the attack with the aid of "Molotov cocktails," (a bottle of gasoline and chemicals which ignite upon contact with force). Two tanks and many of the buildings of the settlement were destroyed, damage to the settlement being estimated at $150,000.

Now Prosperous

Degania is in a prosperous condition, with modern houses and beautiful flowers and palm trees to beautify the settlement. Agriculturally, dairy farming, poultry raising, banana groves and grapefruit orchards constitute the main employment, with fish raising in artificial ponds being carried on as well.

Degania has a modern museum, a public school and an agricultural secondary school which serves the settlement and surrounding area. The settlement is the product of the initiative and determination of the Israeli pioneer.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

By
WINIFRED E. WILSON

ROYALLY DRESSED

According to the encyclopedia, one Canadian songster is truly royally dressed. Several of our birds wear some purple — but none other the real, royal color. The male purple martin, largest member of the swallow family, is not actually purple, but black, with blue and purple sheen. The well-known starling in spring attire has a purple tint to its head and throat, though the main effect of the entire bird is black. In autumn, the brown head of the male cowbird has a purplish appearance.

However, the purple finch, which everybody declares is not purple at all, but raspberry red or magenta, wears the color that, though not purple by modern standards, was the ancients' true purple, and sign of great importance. This is the original Tyrian purple, a color distilled by the ancient Phoenicians from the juice of a certain shell fish. The saying "born in the purple" denotes a person of imperial rank, while "raised to the purple" means made cardinal. Therefore, judging the male purple finch by the original application of the word "purple," we come to the conclusion that it must be a bird of great importance.

Some species more than others show individual differences in plumage. Females and young purple finches, dressed demurely in brown and grey, might easily pass for a kind of sparrow with distinctly streaked underparts. The illusion is helped by the fact that these finches are of average sparrow size. But their bills are stouter.

ven males differ considerably. For the first year or two, though they are breeding birds, their plumage is still much like the females', but there is a more yellowish tinge, especially on the rump. The experienced bird watcher can tell about how old these finches are by their looks. As they age, their spring coloring becomes more and more intense; until they have acquired wonderful shades, from pale pink to deep crimson, brightest on the head, breast and rump. In clear sunshine the brilliance of a male purple finch in its very best costume is amazing to anybody who has previously seen one only in cloudy weather or against the sun.

As the summer advances, still another change is noticed. The bird's brightness seems to fade because the feather edges have become dull. Though yet beautiful, it is not as gorgeous.

Port Stanley, Ont., March 1 — (CP)—A two-hour battle against heavy harbor ice ended in victory yesterday when three fishing tugs combined forces to smash a passage between the inner harbor and the open water of Lake Erie.

PREMIER OPENS ARENA

Tamworth, Ont., March 1—(CP) —Premier Frost last night opened the new Sheffield community centre built almost entirely by voluntary labor last year. The arena, which will seat 2,500 persons, cost $30,000. Tamworth is 30 miles northwest of Kingston.

Baroness Sophie De Rohmer, Once Mistress of Mansions, Now Painter in Montreal

Montreal (CP) — Baroness Sophie de Romer, former mistress of large estates in Lithuania, has started life anew for the third time — as a portrait painter in Montreal.

Madame de Romer, as she prefers to be called, was known for her artistic talent long before the Russians swept away her home, family, her art treasures and her way of life.

Daughter of a Polish surgeon and wife of Baron de Romer, she studied art in Munich and Paris. Her work is exhibited in London, Warsaw, Versailles, Cairo, Tehran and in the United States.

Paints Portraits

Madame de Romer has been earning her living painting portraits since her escape from Russia. She has painted princes, diplomats, and society people in London and Cairo where she has lived since the war. In Montreal she has painted a portrait of Msgr. Olivier Maurault, rector of the University of Montreal.

Art has always been an important part of the baroness' life since her childhood in Poland and the years in Lithuania where she raised five children, three girls and two boys.

Her youngest son was 20 when the Russians moved into Lithuania in 1941. Her home, filled with paintings, antiques and art treasures so impressed the Russians that they turned it into a museum and made her curator.

Later the baroness and her husband were seized and sent to northern Russia to work in factories. For seven years she never heard from her children.

Finally Escaped

After three years of hunger and hard work a relative helped the Romers to escape, but the baron died en route to Cairo.

After another four years of working and painting in Cairo, Mme. de Romer finally found her children. Some were in London and she joined them there. Her daughters were married and living in Argentina, Australia and Poland.

She came to Montreal to be near her son who is a construction engineer here. Her other son is in the United States.

Miss Betty Redner Presents Colorful Scottish Travelogue

An event of considerable interest to the residents of Massassaga and Rossmore was an "Open House" recently sponsored by the school board, on the occasion of the official opening of a new additional classroom.

There was a large attendance of visitors who were loud in their praise of the board members, namely, Mrs. Alfred Hillman, chairman; Mr. Frank Belnap, Mr. Albert Wallbridge and Mr. George Flower, secretary, who had given support to Mr. W. A. Watson, the architect, in planning many modern features, linked with progressive educational trends.

Steel Construction

The artificial lighting system is adequate, while special lights serve the green sight-saving boards. Fire-proofing has not been neglected for the addition to this former two-room school is of steel construction, with walls of cement blocks, veneered with brick. Sound-proofing is provided by acoustical plaster.

Special congratulations were extended by the St. Lawrence Contracting Company, and Mr. W. A. Watson, M. Arch., each of whom presented a beautiful basket of spring flowers; by the proprietors of Walker Hardware and James Texts, who donated a stool and a classroom globe, respectively in honor of the occasion.

Mrs. Hillman called the assembly to order and after the singing of "The National Anthem", explained that the "Open House" should have the threefold purpose of displaying the new classroom, meeting the teachers, Miss B. Philp, Mrs. C. H. Phillips and Mrs. H. G. Bates, and of enjoying a social evening.

A timely film "The House of Windsor", was shown, followed by a sing-song led by Billy Cook. A second film, "Holiday in Manitoba", was beautifully colored and provided a contrast.

Fine Address

The highlight of the program was an address by Miss Betty Redner, who teaches in Campbellford Public School. She related her experiences when she was an exchange teacher in Scotland in 1950-51; picturing vividly the differences between the antiquated classroom in which she taught in Scotland and the modern classroom in which she was speaking.

Miss Redner described food rations, language peculiarities, and the generosity of the Scotch people, with whom she worked and lived. It was her privilege to be one of the guests at a "Garden Party", at Buckingham Palace and to travel to the continent of Europe, where she attended the "Passion Play".

The appreciation of the audience was expressed by Mr. Howard Adams, to Miss Redner for her impressive travelogue.

While refreshments were being prepared, the parents were invited to visit their children's classroom, after which, everyone partook of sandwiches, cake, doughnuts and coffee in the new classroom.

SISTERS ALL

There is to be less chrome on many of the new model cars because the metal is being used for defence industries, the car people tell us. In its place, comes stainless steel which is being featured in the rims around the headlights in low-priced cars. More expensive cars will use stainless steel for window frames, bumpers and all trimming. - - - Low-priced cars are using ordinary steel for bumpers covered by a very thin coating of chrome which has no durability and looks cheap beside the heavy chrome of earlier models. - - - Though not as bright, the expensive stainless steel will wear longer than chrome and resist rust to the end. It is a pity the stainless variety isn't cheap enough to use on all cars.

Some of the new cars are fitted more conveniently for families with small children. The back of the rear seat can be pulled forward and made to lie flat, thus forming a play-floor or a bed for the youngsters. This would be an ideal arrangement for families who attend drive-in theatres. There is no danger of the children falling off the back seat while resting. The rear children's section will be helpful to families when travelling any distance.

An acquaintance of ours, himself, made a contraption for the engine of his car which, in 15 minutes, will warm the baby's bottle to the required temperature as they drive along the highway. To our knowledge, no manufacturer has ever built-in such a unit.

As it is with home electrical appliances, the makers pay little attention to the actual needs of the people who buy their products. It would seem as though the designers are either all bachelors or single girls. What we need more than anything else these days is some practical minded married women in our industrial designing departments.

Little Bouquets

With even daffodils selling from 22 cents a-piece and up, it is expensive to have any fresh flowers in the house at this time of year when flowers are most enjoyed. If they are having a big home party, most women would like to be able to buy some kind of pretty floral decoration for around a dollar.

This is impossible for any bouquet of a dozen flowers. One way of getting around the situation, is to buy the flowers a la carte. For instance, instead of the conventional dozen of daffodils, order five. Now what can you do with five little daffodils? For one thing, they are more artistic than an even number, like four or six. With ingenuity and a little time, you can make a centre-piece of these which will bring you many compliments.

Using a 15-cent glass flower holder immersed in a bowl of water, stick the daffodils in separately after cutting them at different lengths from very short to longer stem. Stand different lengths of leaves in the same holes and the others. Arrange the flowers like a clump you might see growing in a garden. They will look natural and gay either as a table centre-piece for tea or as a side bouquet.

Your little bouquet will symbolize at once to your guests that magnificent scene Wordsworth described when he said: "I wandered lonely as a cloud," and "Ten thousand saw I at a glance." How often something small and simple and genuine will remind a person of great beauty.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

She called his bluff

Sometimes it seems to me that more marriages are wrecked by the sheer stupidity of wife or husband than by any one thing either actually does to the other.

This, I think, is particularly true in the case of the woman who discovers that her man has been unfaithful to her. For—unless all feeling between them has been utterly destroyed and there is no point whatever in trying to salvage the situation—success or failure in saving the marriage depends more than anything else on whether the wife attacks her problem with cleverness or stupidity.

One woman who showed instinctive shrewdness in the way she handled a problem of this kind is hovering on the verge of sabotaging her own efforts by one final move that almost certainly would spell disaster.

The story, as she tells it, is this:

"My husband and I have been married 17 years, and have two young sons.

"Some time ago, I caught my husband with another woman at a bar, drinking and petting. They told me that they have been going out together for over three years, and the woman insisted that she loves my husband very much. I learned that they work in the same office, that her own husband was killed in the last war and that she has a young son. She lives with her people, and she begged me not to tell them about this affair as they are very strict.

So I simply told my husband and her that if he wanted his freedom I would not stand in his way if he would sign our house over to me, as after all I have our two sons to think about. Oddly enough the girl suddenly wanted 'time to think it over.' I told her to keep in touch with me and that I would see my lawyer. She called me up once, a little later and I told her I wanted to see her to talk things over.

"At this point, my husband suddenly seemed to have some second thoughts on the matter, too. He told me that he wanted to stay with me, and that he did not really mean a lot of the things he had said the night I found him and the girl together. Since then, I had had no second call from the girl.

"In view of all these circumstances, do you think I shall take it for granted that my husband has really had a change of heart, or to make sure the affair will be broken off, do you think I should tell the girl's mother about it after all?"

Now, whether she realizes it or not, it was a smart move for this wife to offer to stand aside and make it easy for her husband to marry his mistress. Her failure to show antagonism and resentment toward him; her lack of opposition to the idea of divorce; her readiness to give him his freedom if that is what he wishes—all this, when he probably expected none of it, may well have startled him into the realization that, actually, there is nothing he wants less than the opportunity to turn his illicit affair into honest marriage.

By assuring her husband that she will not stand in his way, the wife of the letter has thus called his bluff. By holding out for their home, she seems likewise to have tipped the girl friend's hand. To go to the girl's family about the affair at this point might well be only to stir up muddy waters that already show signs of settling. I think she should hold her advantage by letting well enough alone, at least until the shape of things to come reveals itself.

C.G.I.T.-EXPLORERS

The weekly meeting of the C.G.I.T. and Explorers, Foxboro, was held on Tuesday evening in the S.S. rooms. The meeting opened with a playlet entitled "Newfoundland Missionaries".

Doris Gough read the Scripture, and Marlene Derry a short story from "The Upper Room".

Mrs. Arthurs reported having received cards which she wished to be sold.

Work of making shell brooches was continued and the meeting was closed with 'taps'.

Readers' Saturday Column

QUESTION:

The paper is sent to me daily by my father although I have been away for a period of years.

I would like to tell you how much I enjoy your column, in fact it is practically the first item I look for. I do think your recipes are splendid and so helpful. I would greatly appreciate it if you would send me a recipe for oatmeal cookies. I have made several kinds but I find they are all very sweet. Perhaps it is more like the old-fashioned oatmeal cookies, not the crisp kind. I would also be grateful . . .for a real good date and nut loaf recipe . . . Dorothy mentioned to me that you had been one of her guests last summer.—Irene B.

ANSWER:

Small world isn't it? Full of nice people too. I loved being Dorothy's guest too and will never forget her beautifully laid table.

OLD-FASHIONED OATMEAL COOKIES

One cup fine oatmeal, 1 cup coarse rolled oats, 2 cups flour, 1-4 cup sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon soda, 1-4 cup lard or good shortening, 1-2 cup hot water. Mix first 6 ingredients. Melt shortening in water and add to first mixture. Roll out as thinly as possible on lightly floured board—1-16th inch thick is not a bit too thin for these wafers. Shape with floured cutter or cut into strips as some Scottish cooks do. Bake on buttered sheet at 325 deg. Fahr. to bake and dry out but not brown. These should be biscuit-colored.

OATMEAL COOKIES NO. 2

One egg, 1-4 cup sugar, 1-4 cup thin cream, 1-4 cup milk, 1-2 cup fine oatmeal, 2 cups flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt. Beat egg until light, add sugar, cream and milk; then add oatmeal, flour, baking powder and salt, mixed and sifted. Roll out on floured board, cut into desired shapes and make at 350 deg. Fahr.

DATE AND NUT BREAD

One-half cup coarsely broken walnuts (or pecans), 1 1-2 cups stoned chopped dates, 1 teaspoon each baking soda, salt, baking powder and vanilla, 1 1-8 cups boiling water, 2-3 cup brown sugar, 1 egg, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 3-4 cups flour. Add soda and boiling water to cut up dates and stir. Let stand covered while you proceed. Cream butter into sugar then beat in egg and vanilla. Sift the flour with the salt and baking powder. Stir the date mixture into the sugar mixture, then sprinkle flour mixture over and stir in. Stir in nuts. Pour into greased loaf pan—I like to line mine with buttered paper—and bake 1 1-4 hours in slow oven of 275 deg. Fahr.

QUESTION:

Three years ago I wrote for help with a dieting problem, also the calorie chart. Both chart and suggestions helped as I lost over 40 lbs. However I am gaining weight again. Will you please send me another calorie chart? A friend from "South of the Border" begged mine, as she said she could not find one to equal it—I agree with her.

I have been using a reducing mayonnaise made with mineral oil—1 cup mineral oil, 3 tablespoons vinegar, 2 egg yolks, 1-2 teaspoon each salt and paprika, 2 teaspoons mustard, which my doctor recommended.

Now a nurse tells me it is not wise to use it, as mineral oil interferes with the digestive process, preventing vitamins being absorbed into the system. Is this correct?

Is finnan haddie (smoked) high in caloric value? Have you any idea how many calories there are in a teaspoon of ——— or other such coffee substitute? I have been using skim milk in tea, and am told tea should be always taken clear, and milk taken alone, on reducing diets. Why is that? From what fish is chicken haddie produced and what is its calorie value.

This is a lot to ask . . .but you never seem to mind helping. . . my family does not care for liver but pronounced your recipe for liver sauce with spaghetti excellent (Popular Savoury Liver)—and asked for more. . . .Frances R.

ANSWER:

I was glad to hear you had heard Mrs. Bates speak. Anyone who knows her or who has heard her speak has had an enriching experience.

I'll answer your questions in order: (1) I have heard what your nurse friend said about mineral mayonnaise. I do not think your doctor expects you to use it every day. My advice to reducers is to limit themselves to 1 teaspoon vegetable-oil mayonnaise per day and then use such pleasant moisteners as cottage cheese, and skim-milk-cheese boiled dressing with their salads. Skim-milk-cheese salad dressing is merely boiled dressing with 1-2 to 3-4 cup skim milk cheese added while it is hot. (2) Judge for yourself about the haddock: Fried fresh haddock measuring 3x2x3-4 inches has 100 calories; Creamed Finnan Haddie measuring 2-3 cup has 255. (3) No—I do not know caloric count of the instant coffee you mention. It is so infinitesimal it is not worth worrying about. I will not contradict your adviser, but always advise using skim milk in tea where reducer, is, a tea drinker. Drink 1 pint milk (skim) besides this. Chicken Haddie is young haddock, canned 3 1-2 oz.—71 calories.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Her aunt lacks the grace to appreciate the spirit-of-the-gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When I went to see my aunt in her newly-purchased home, I brought her an expensive bone china cup and saucer of the kind she particularly likes. She opened the present, admired the cup and saucer very much, and thanked me enthusiastically. Since I live out-of-town my aunt telephoned my mother a few days later to say that she noticed a crack in the cup and asked mother to return it. We had bought the cup and saucer at an exclusive, reputable shop, but when my mother brought the gift to them, they refused to exchange it, saying that they carefully scrutinize every article that leaves their store, and it is not their policy to exchange merchandise of that type. So mother brought it back to my aunt with this explanation.

A few days later my aunt brought the gift back to mother saying, "Thank Betty very much, but tell her I do not accept a cracked gift." When I returned here, mother told me what had occurred, and of course I am distressed. When I inspected the cup I found only a thin hair-line crack along the inside, scarcely noticeable on the inside, and not at all noticeable on the outside. My husband and I had thought it to be perfect in every way, had spent so much time and effort in choosing just the right design and shape to please my aunt, and had spent a good sum for the gift. The cup is still usable and extremely decorative, especially for display in her china closet where, she said when I gave it to her, she planned to keep it.

My husband, most of the members of my family, and I think that my aunt's returning the gift to us was a breach of etiquette. Other members of the family feel that I should buy her another gift to replace this one. This of course would mean extra expense, which I cannot easily afford, and besides I wonder if this really is the thing to do after I chose the gift with such devoted care and in good faith. What is your opinion and advice?—Betty.

Your aunt's ridiculously immature behavior was of the "spoiled child" pattern . . .complete lack of consideration for the feelings of another person, even when that person has tried so lovingly to please, to be kind and generous. . . complete lack of tact or grace or appreciation. Don't buy her another present in place of the one you so devotedly and thoughtfully chose for her. . no reason for this.

My suggestion is that you write her a graceful little note, telling her you're sorry about the outcome of your so-tenderly-chosen present, explaining about the store's point of view, and perhaps adding that if she ever changes her mind about welcoming your present, you will be so happy and proud to send it to her to add to the collection in her cabinet. Then, as soon as you possibly can, forget the incident. . . and enjoy again the pleasant features of your aunt-and-niece relationship! (Even now she may, and I hope so, be regretting her impulsive and childish attitude and words . . .. and she may be willing to make amends by telling you she is sorry for her awkward and unkind behavior.

Not flower girl and ring bearer at informal wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My daughter is to be married in June. A simple, early-afternoon (2:30) church wedding; matron of honor as attendant; bride and matron of honor, also "the mothers", to wear street-length dresses. If it is not out-of-order I would like to have two little 5-year-olds as flower girl and ring bearer. But my daughter, the bride-to-be, thinks it would be entirely out-of-order to have them since we are not planning a formal wedding. Who is right about this?—M. W. B.

I would agree with your daughter. Generally speaking we associate flower girls and ring bearers with church weddings of some degree of formality. When a wedding is to be as informal as the one your daughter is planning, usually the bride has one attendant, either maid or matron of honor, and the groom has a best man.

BEAUTY

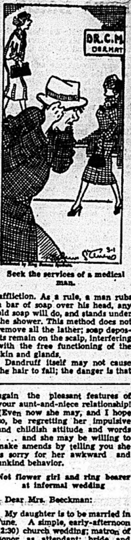
DANDRUFF IS A GOOD-LOOKS ENEMY

Surveys show that more men than women have dandruff, which it has been said by medical men, is a fungus growth that appears on the scalp. Because women give their hair better care than men, they are fairly free of this minor affliction. As a rule, a man rubs a bar of soap over his head, any old soap will do, and stands under the shower. This method does not remove all the lather; soap deposits remain on the scalp, interfering with the free functioning of the skin and glands.



Seek the services of a medical man.

Dandruff itself may not cause the hair to fall; the danger is that this flaky condition is a perfect tenement for bacteria that may cause serious trouble.

There are several varieties of dandruff, the most common among them being dry scales, and those that carry an oily quality. The sensible step, of course, is to seek the services of a medical man who specializes in diseases of the skin and scalp. At single visit, one will be advised as to care and treatment. Certain ointments often will clear away the cutaneous debris that falls on coat collars and makes a man look untidy.

Home care requires frequent lubrication of the scalp, followed by thorough shampoos. Hot mineral oil is often effective. The hair should be parted at various places, the oil trickled along the partings with a medicine dropper. After the entire area is oiled, there should be a five minute friction to force the lubricant into the flesh. A brisk massage will tend to loosen the scales. The oil should remain on over night.

For the next - morning shampoo a liquid soap, diluted one half with warm water, should be used. As it is a bit difficult to wash away the oil, the hair should first have a rinsing with a bath spray, the water being as hot as the flesh can endure. There should be two soapy applications, each one followed by a prolonged rinsing.

It is necessary that combs and brushes should be scrupulously clean. As the father of the family seldom attends to this little duty, the mother will have to get into action. The proper step is to have a double set of combs and brushes, so that one set will be clean. The oil treatments should be given once a week, until the scalp is in normal condition.

Shirley Douglas Planning Career As Actress

Regina (CP) — The ambition of 18-year-old Shirley Douglas, the daughter of Premier T. C. Douglas of Saskatchewan, is to do her life work on the stage.

But diminutive Shirley has no hankering for the political stage. Ever since childhood she has wanted to be an actress.

Shirley, five feet two, weighing less than 100 pounds, took an important step in that direction recently when she won the "best actress" award in the annual Saskatchewan regional drama festival. She will attempt a repeat in the Dominion finals.

Her first part was at the age of five when she played an angel in a Sunday school Christmas pageant in Weyburn, Sask., where she was born.

Shirley's first lead was as a fairy in a school play, also at Weyburn. She was in Grade 2 at that time.

Since then she has taken many parts in school plays, first at Weyburn and later in Regina when the family moved here.

Last summer she attended the Banff School of Fine Arts and took part in two Shakespearean dramas, "Midsummer Night's Dream" and "Comedy of Errors." She likes this type of role exceptionally well.

Her success in the regional drama festival is made all the more remarkable by the fact this is her first year in the Regina Little Theatre. She won the award while playing only her second role in a little theatre production.
girl in "Tomorrow the World."
girl in "Tomorrow the Worl."
Adjudicator Pierre Lefevre said she "sustained her role with variety and was in character throughout."

Mr. Lefevre said he thought a 12-year-old girl had been exceptionally well cast for the role and was amazed to find that it was taken by a "young lady of 18".

"Never for a moment did she step out of character," he said.

Shirley has also done extensive modelling in Regina fashion shops, taken on deliberately to help her poise in walking on stage.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

ALL OVER BUT THE "PLAY-OFFING"!

Well, the Hawks at least didn't lose that one. Neither did they win it, but they had the thing in the bag twice and then blew it because of penalties. At least they played a very important part in the affair since the Sacs scored twice within seconds on each occasion to tie the score while our men were cooling their heels in durance vile.

The Hawks hit their old-time scoring form in that rambunctious third period when they ripped home three goals in two minutes and appeared headed for the long-time-no-see pastures of victory. Then Jackie Wardhaugh drew a cheap penalty and he made no bones apparently about telling Referee Pete Nigh about it, and that gentleman, as is his right, waved him to the sidelines for ten minutes. Captain Vern Goyer appealed but you know these gentlemen in white. No soap. The Hawks appeared a trifle disorganized and the opportunist Sacs swept in and before you could change gum they'd fired home three quickies to knot the count. And we had the game in the jolly old bag with less than eight minutes to go.

Jackie Wardhaugh's dipsy-doodle stickhandling had the crowd on its feet cheering at one time when our side was short of manpower. The fleet-winger grabbed the puck near centre ice, circled backwards and weaved, dodged and sidestepped Sac foemen until he was through to the goal. He flipped a pass to a mate, who pulled the trigger but the shot missed the net. A right neat piece of stickhandling.

Meanwhile up in Peterborough the Petes edged their bosom pals the Eagles 3-2 in what was a close battle. The Sacs gained a point by virtue of the tie here last night and that is sufficient to give them second place in the group final standing. It means only that Sacs will have an extra home game in the playoffs, (less travelling expenses).

While no dates have been released for the playoffs it is more than likely they will get under way early next week. The Petes meet the Hawks and the Eagles tangle with the Sacs in a best-of-five series with the Hawks at Peterborough and Eagles at Sacs for the openers.

WHAT NEXT?

The junior "B" group semi-finals series between Lindsay Kinsmen and Kingston Vics developed a new twist after last night's three-all tie in Lindsay. The series now stands, Vics two wins and one loss; Lindsay one win and two losses and the teams have played to ties twice. Just what that means only the OHA can decide. It all depends on how they will consider two ties. Ordinarily they do not count as games, but from this corner, it would seem that by virtue of two victories and two ties, the laurel wreath should go to the Vics. It's some sort of evidence of superiority.

However there are some strange things done neath the midnight sun of this game called hockey. This is being written as the cocks are crowing, but we'll try to get a definite standing on the matter before deadline.

Meanwhile the Hawklets are cooling their hockey heels awaiting developments. Since this is the case, and with playdowns looming ahead, we believe the OHA should settle the Lindsay-Kingston series as quickly as possible, if it does not decide to award it to the Vics after last night's draw.

There were squawks loud and long last season, if our memory serves us correctly, about hockey playoffs running well into spring. This dashing from a ball-game to a hockey rink is not our idea of a night's fun, nor do we, after six and one half months of watching and writing puckchasing, have any yen to spend July 1st in a hockey arena.

THE LIGHTER SIDE

John (Sports Centre) McNab will love this one. We warned him about it a few months ago but he waggled his third chin and guffawed when he heard it. Like the Irishman looking at a giraffe for the first time, Fatso remarked, "Sure 'tis a dam lie. There aint no sich thing."

Anahoo, according to a news despatch from Montreal one Rocket Richard and a partner have gone into the hockey stick manufacturing business. They will make an unbreakable stick and the Canadiens will try it out in practice. The blade is made of fibre and silk. And tis claimed you can fire a shotgun pellet into the handle and it won't even crack the hickory. Then Frank Patrick has another "unbreakable" on the market. His flail is making headway among the younkers.

Twill be good news for the ilk of the Cooks and bad for the McNabs, but how about the players? Anybody come out yet with an unbreakable noggin, arm, or leg?

We thank Stratford's Chick Appel for this one. He claims he saw it in the column of an "Eastern Ontario sportswriter". In any event the bloke did a neat job of adjectiving his favorite player on the local senior hockey club. Some of his chief eulogistic phrases include "green in the grass of Emeral Isle" . . . "space-devouring strides carry him over the ice like a meteor skimming the earth" . . . "brilliant in action is a masterpiece of understatement" . . . "so delicately tuned that he is almost dazzling" . . . "His every movement on the ice is executed with a spectacular but apparently unconscious flourish" , , , "evades bodychecks like a will o' the wisp" . . . "more than slightly sensational rookie" . . . And this one the blue ribbon description of them all, "a spurting, scampering, scuttling, scudding, darting, swooping, skimming, sailing, streaking nemesis." . . .

Mebbe the bloke got his inspiration when he dropped in town a few weeks ago and got a look at the Oldtimers game. Only you figure out to whom he was referring.

Listening to players yelling at one another at a game here the other night recalls the story they tell of one Frank Hill, basketball coach at Seton Hall. Frank's pet hate was the practice of players calling for the ball. It was his theory that a smooth-working quintet, like a properly oiled machine functioned silently. One night Seton Hall was playing Yale and taking a beating. At halftime the team trooped into the dressing room. Coach Hill took them to task for the yelling they had been doing, telling them this was why they were trailing.

As he sent them out with a pep talk for the second half, he concluded, "Now, I don't want none of youse guys to be doin' no hollerin' for the ball out there. I want youse to be silent. Not silent but mute. That's what wins basketball games, mutiny!"

Hawk Penalties Prove Costly; Lose Three-Goal Lead in Third In Rugged Overtime Battle

Belleville Hawks gave the Kingston Sacs an involuntary assist to second place in the senior B group final standing here last night, battling them to a swashbuckling 9-all overtime tie while the Peterborough Petes were edging their "blood-brothers" the Eagles by a 3-2 count.

The tie gave the Sacs a single point enough to vault into second position over Eagles and have the advantage of an extra home game in the group playoffs.

What started out to be a rather tame affair with the Hawks icing their best strength in six weeks, having a decided edge in play, deoped in a rugged second period affair climaxed by a boisterous third heat in which they blew a three-goal lead with less than eight minutes to play.

Costly Penalties

Two costly penalties robbed the Hawks of their first victory in 10 starts. Leading 2-0 early in the first Bastedo got the gate and the Sacs swept in for two lightning goals in 26 seconds. Again in the third they were leading 8-5 when Wardhaugh drew a minor and misconduct at 12.15. Sensing their advantage, the Sacs led by Murray and Tinkess struck swiftly, hitting the hemp for two goals in 56 seconds. Two minutes later McGregor took Murray's pass close in to tie the score.

The game developed into a hard-hitting rugged affair with some less than ordinary officiating by referee Pete Nigh of Peterborough. Sixteen penalties, one of them a misconduct were handed out, 11 of them going to the Hawks.

Eleven of the toss-outs came in the swashbuckling third when almost everything happened. Nine goals were scored. Sacs came from behind twice to knot the count. It wasn't high class hockey just fast rugged stuff garnished at times with doses of shinny.

The Hawks grabbed an early two-goal lead in the first four minutes of the game. Then Bastedo got the gate and came the Sacs two swift tying counters They led at the period end by 3-2 on McGregor's goal.

The second period produced the best hockey of the night with the Hawks having a decided edge and outscoring the Sacs 2-0 on Jones and Barrett's goals.

Three Goals in Two

Huck Reeves added another early in the third, but Gerry Wagar got that one back from Sweetman's pass. Then the Hawks struck their best stride of the night. They swept the Sacs back, ripped home three goals in two minutes by Moher, MacDonald and Jones, and appeared headed for their first victory in weeks. Then came Wardhaugh's penalty and the Sacs took over. They rushed to the attack and hit the hemp for a trio of markers by Murray, Tinkess and McGregor and the jolly old pastime was all tied up again.

Both teams narrowly missed during the remainder of the period but there was no score and the first overtime game of the season here was the last as far as the schedule goes.

Sacs took an early lead in the extra time, Bender racing in to score with Sweetman before the Hawks got settled, to take the lead at the 29 second mark. Jones again tied the count midway through the period taking Day's pass to score as the crowd of 722 stood up. Play was even until the last minute or two when the Hawks hemmed the Sacs in and missed two easy chances. With three seconds on the clock big Vern Goyer fired the rubber a few inches past a post.

Peter Jones paced the Hawk attack with three goals and an assist. Keith MacDonald scored a pair while Day and Red Doran were credited with three assists each. Barrett, Wardhaugh, Reeves and Moher got the rest.

The prettiest play of the night was that of Jackie Wardhaugh who stick handled his way from centre ice back behind his blue line then turned, weaved and dipsy-doodled his way through the entire Sacs team to the goal. He flipped a pass to a mate, but his shot missed the net by inches.

McGregor and Murray shone for the Sacs with each getting two goals and two assists. Bender got a pair and Larmer, Wagar and Tinkess the latter with two assists, got the rest.

Anderson, Kingston goalie was injured near the end of the second period and had to leave the ice for repairs.

The teams.

Vics Win Series, Meet Hawks In Junior Finals

Belleville junior Hawks will meet the Kingston Vics in the finals series of the junior "B" group, Ontario Hockey Association convener Frank Buckland, Peterborough, said today.

The Vics won the semi-finals series from the Lindsay Kinsmen by virtue of the three-all tie played last night in Lindsay. The series finished with Vics winning two, losing one and tying two.

The finals series will be a best-of-seven with the first game scheduled for Belleville probably Tuesday night pending confirmation of the Vics management.

Gord Simpson Defeated In Badminton Draw

Toronto, March 1 (CP) —Events in the Granite Club Invitation Badminton tournament will go into the semi-final rounds today with the completion of all events last night.

Last night's feature event was the match between Gordon Simpson of Kingston, Ontario men's doubles champion and member of the Thomas Cup team, and Jack Muir, of the Carlton Club. Muir's perseverance and powerful smashes brought about the defeat of Simpson by scores of 15-11, 9-15, 15-9.

The semi-final battle this afternoon between Jack Muir and Ontario champion Don Smythe, also a member of the Thomas Cup team should be the highlight of the day.

In the ladies' singles semi-finals high-favored Marjorie Shedd of Carleton will meet Ruth Jett of Philadelphia in the top half of the draw and Patsy Stephens, Baltimore, will meet Marjorie Mapp of Montreal.

MARMORA

Wellington Trims Marmora 4-0 To Lead Series

Marmora—Wellington shutout Marmora 4-0 on the Marmora arena on Thursday evening and having won at Wellington in ten minutes overtime the previous night, have two wins to Marmora's one in the 3 out of 5 series to decide champions of the central section of the T.V.L.

The visitors were full value for their win. Apart from the actual score Killian, home goalie, kept hot shots out while Marmora players missed easy chances to beat Parks, who on the whole, gave a fine exhibition of goal keeping.

Istead scored early in the first on Scott's assist and that was the only goal until the last five minutes when Dumais rapped in two in quick succession and Cole scored the final goal. Scott getting two further assists.

About six hundred viewed the encounter. The fourth and crucial game will be played in Wellington on Monday evening.

Marmora — Goal, Killian; defence, Maynes, Gray; centre, Forestell; wings, Lavender, Trumble. Alternates, Stewart, Mantle, Jones, Brown, Darrah, Smith, Doyle, Kerr. Spare goalie, Drummond.

Referees: W. Leggitt, Peterborough; C. Puffer, Norwood.

Boston-Toronto Twin Clashes May Effect Final Standing

By CRAIG SWAYZE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Boston Bruins, two full games out of the National Hockey League's fourth and final playoff slot, clash twice this weekend with Toronto Maple Leafs in games that loom as the most important of the five scheduled during the two-day interval.

The Bruins currently trail New York Rangers by four points while weekend opposition is a game out of second, two points behind runer-up Montreal Canadiens. A single victory on either side of the fence could shape up the six-team standings and tighten the final stretch drive to Stanley Cup play.

Boston Confident

With but 12 more games on their schedule, the Bruins could use a victory or two during the weekend to close that gap between themselves and the Rangers. By collecting even a single point, they might gain on the Blueshirts who have no easy task in facing Montreal Canadiens tonight and Detroit Red Wings at home tomorrow.

Boston coach Lynn Patrick who has been confident of his club's chances all season long, is still sure it will make post-season play. He looks for the Bruins to collect at least half of the 24 points available to them over the rest of the schedule.

"If we can do just that," he said last night, "I'm sure we're in. My club's not beaten yet. Just watch us from here on in."

In Toronto, the Leafs have shown signs of stir after the would-be experts had tagged them for third place and the alarming fate of meeting Detroit in the first round of Stanley Cup play.

With the return of their inspirational manager, Conn Smythe, the players turned in one of their best games of the season Wednesday at New York when they downed Rangers 3-1 for their first victory in seven starts.

The Leafs are out after all they can get in their two games against Boston, knowing full well Canadiens can draw even further away on their weekend schedule. Rangers have never been too potent in Montreal and then the Habs have never had much trouble with the tail-end Black Hawks whom they meet tomorrow in Chicago.

TWO OCCUPANTS KILLED

Montreal, Mar. 1 — (CP)—Reports reaching Montreal airport Friday said that a plane operated by the De Havilland Company of Toronto crashed near Goose Bay, Labrador, killing its two occupants.

The plane was being ferried by Fleetway Incorporated of Burbank, Calif., en route from the United Kingdom to Burbank.

Reported killed was Pilot Bert L. Reed Gilbert, Burbank, and Navigator G. Monk, of no given address.

New York, March 1—(CP)—Chico Vejar, 20-year-old welterweight, came off the canvas as he often does to win a split decision over indestructible Fitzie Pruden of St. Catharines, Ont., in the 10-round main bout at Madison Square Garden last night.

Pruden, a ring-wise veteran of 24, started off as if he were going to confound the odds-makers who made him an 11-to-5 underdog. He dropped Vejar for a six-count as the first round ended. But he lost out to Vejar's strong finish.

Pruden weighed 147 1/2, Vejar 149 1/2. A crowd of 6,846 paid $23,431 to watch the rousing bout which was also seen by a national television audience.

Referee Ruby Goldstein voted eight rounds to two for Vejar, judge Harold Barnes called it 5-4-1 for the battler from Stamford Conn., and judge Charley Shortell voted each fighter five rounds and six points.

Vejar Down in First

Vejar, a freshman at New York University, was fighting his fourth bout since he started boxing as a pro on March 25, 1950.

He had to put on a strong finish to keep his latest winning streak intact. Pruden dropped him with a long left to the jaw in the first round and staggered Vejar several other times.

But Chico roared back with flying fists each time after he was hurt and made Pruden break ground. In the final round, Vejar's best, he chased Pruden all over the ring, battering him with left jabs and short rights to the head.

Vejar was bruised about both eyes, cut over the left, and was bleeding from the nose. Pruden, who had a reputation for cutting badly until he took recent brine treatments and had scar tissue removed, suffered a cut over the left eye. It wasn't nearly as bad as cuts which have hampered him in past bouts.

Many of the rounds were extremely close and it wasn't surprising that the officials differed widely in their scoring.

Pruden's blows were menacing to the end but Chico's youthful stamina carried him through the rugged test. He outjabbed the expert jabber, Pruden. Besides the first, Pruden's best rounds were the sixth, seventh and eighth during which he battered Vejar with right crosses.

Collegiate Girls Trim Napanee

(By BETTE)

In a basketball fixture in Napanee on Thursday night B.C.I. seniors defeated Napanee 36-21.

The game was close with the score 18-14 in favor of B.C.I., at the end of half time and went on to outscore Napanee and take the game. With another win to their long list of victories and one more game to play in the schedule B.C.I. are almost sure of taking the Bay of Quinte championship and going on to compete with C.O.S.S.A. in Toronto.

The top scorer for Belleville was Barbara Bennett with 21 points. Sylvia Langford was the big gun for Napanee scoring 12 points.

B.C.I. juniors and seniors play their last game in the schedule Tuesday when they meet O.S.D. at B.C.I.

Everyone wants to have a Belleville team go to Toronto so come on kids lets come out and support our school teams so they can go to Toronto.

TO HEAR APPEAL

Karlsbruhe, Germany, March 1 — (Reuters) — The West German federal court has set April 22 as the date for hearing an appeal on behalf of the "Witch of Buchenwald," Ilse Koch. Ten years ago a proud, beautiful red head, now homely and haggard, the widow of Buchenwald's Nazi commandant was sentenced in January, 1951, to life imprisonment for inciting the murder of Buchenwald prisoners.

Manitoba Out To Regain Curling Title

By AL VICKERY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, March 1—(CP) — Manitoba will be out to break its longest losing streak—two successive years — when play opens Monday in the five-day Canadian curling championship.

Since the championship started in 1927 when Nova Scotia's Murray Macneill of the Halifax Curling Club was victorious, Manitoba rinks had never lost in two straight years until 1950 and 1951. Northern Ontario won in 1950 and Nova Scotia last year.

And Billy Walsh, bespectacled from Winnipeg's Fort Rouge Club, this year will be out to gain Manitoba's 13th victory. The province has rolled up a record of 12 wins in the 22 competitions — there were no matches in the war years of 1943-45—including three victories by Ken Watson of Winnipeg Strathcona. Watson is the only three-time winner on record—1936, 1942 and 1949.

Alberta ranks second with four wins, followed by Ontario and Nova Scotia, each with two and northern Ontario and British Columbia, with one apiece.

The draw for the 1952 classic will be held Sunday night. Times already have been set. Thursday is the big day, with draws morning, afternoon and night.

Play gets under way at 3 p.m. CST (4 p.m. EST) Monday, following a motor parade to the amphitheatre rink, normally a hockey arena. The second draw is at 8 p.m.

Two draws will be held Tuesday—9.30 a.m. and 2.30 p.m. Wednesday, will see the rinks take to the ice at 3 p.m. and 8 p.m. Rounds are at 9.30 a.m., 2.30 p.m. and 7.30 p.m. Thursday.

Sport in Brief

(By The Canadian Press)

The refusal of Ray Ross to sign a contract with Seattle Ironmen of the Pacific Coast Hockey League today threw a snag in the deal which was to send Ron Stewart from Barrie Flyers to Guelph Biltmores of the Ontario Hockey Association.

Stewart was in Guelph yesterday and was expected to play against the league-leading Toronto Marlboros last night in a game Marlboros won 4-2. However, Bill Hanley, O.H.A. Secretary, informed the Biltmores management that Stewart was not to play until the Ross situation was cleared up. The Biltmores had received permission to obtain a replacement when Ross was ordered to the Seattle team. But until he signs a professional contract, the Biltmores are denied a replacement.

Hap Emms, Barrie coach, made no report of the amount of money involved in the deal but said the Flyers would have rights to a Guelph goaltender, excluding Marv Brewer and Doug Lessor.

Meanwhile, nobody knows where Ross is. Rumor is that he is on his way back east and may return to Guelph.

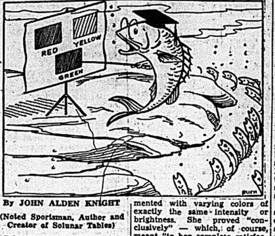
Top-rank skiers from Ontario and Quebec will compete at Mont Tremblant, Que., this weekend in the Quebec Kandahar, one of the most historic events of its kind in North America. Skiers have competed for the Canadian replica of the original British trophy, the name of which dates back to a 12th century Afghanistan city, for the last 18 years.

Race driver Lee Wallard said yesterday he will not defend the crown he won in last year's 500-mile Memorial Day race at Indianapolis because he does not feel he would have strength to withstand in the grueling grind.

Clinton D., owned and driven by Don Murphy of Elmont, N.Y., and Frisky Frisco, owned and driven by Cam Wannamaker of Consecon, Ont., each won a heat to divide the sixth and featured harness race at Toronto's Dufferin Park yesterday.

Single F., owned by G. Kingston of Napanee, Ont., and driven by Alan Pacey and Resolution, owned by the Cruise Stable, Shepherdville, K.Y.; handled by Jimmy Cruise were the heat winners in the fifth and secondary feature.

Can Fish Differentiate Color



By JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT
(Noted Sportsman, Author and Creator of Solunar Tables)

Color perceptions of game fish long has been the subject of many and varied arguments among the fishermen of this world. Some folks claim that fish can distinguish between primary colors. Others deny it, claiming that fish differentiate between colors only in terms of black, white and the in-between shades of gray.

The late Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania had in his writings some interesting observations on the color perceptions of fish. He was of the opinion that they were quite color conscious.

For several weeks he experimented with a school of small fish which stayed near the dock at a fishing resort. Through the medium of certain foods, which were colored variously, he found that these little fish soon learned to avoid the red bits of food which had been unpleasantly flavored.

Other colors were taken avidly, the entire school scrambling for the choice tidbits, but in a surprisingly short time the little fellows learned to avoid the bitter red pieces.

Some years ago a friend and I were asked to investigate the sport-fishing possibilities of the brackish waters of Albermarle Sound in the vicinity of Kitty Hawk, North Carolina. These waters are alive with largemouth bass. We fished for them entirely with fly rods and top-water bass bugs.

The wind blows almost constantly around Kitty Hawk. That is why the Wright brothers chose these sand dunes for their early experiments in aviation. However, the marsh grass grows quite high, affording a wind-break behind which we could cast to the shore line.

My companion fished with yellow bass bugs exclusively. Some were trimmed with red and some with black and white but the color in all of them was predominantly yellow.

We noticed that the bass evidently preferred yellow. When I fished with a yellow bug I caught about as many bass as the other fellow. When I changed to any other color, production fell off decidedly.

To see what would happen, we would fish the same shore lines at the same time, keeping the boats about fifty feet apart. When my boat was in the lead, giving me first chance at undisturbed water, my bugs, in other colors than yellow, caught fish. He, fishing a yellow bug, would come along behind me and take just about as many bass as I had, from water which I had just fished.

Then we would reverse the order and his boat would go first. He would catch plenty of bass while I, coming along behind him, caught almost none. Over a period of ten days we learned that there certainly was no question that those bass preferred yellow.

European scientists, particularly Germans, have done a great deal of work on the color perceptions of fish. In 1884 a scientist named Graber found that fish showed preferences for foods of certain colors.

Not long after that another scientist named Hess refuted these findings by announcing that fish were color-blind and that they gauged their preferences by the intensity of color and not by its hue.

Following on this a woman scientist, a Miss Reeves, experimented with varying colors of exactly the same intensity or brightness. She proved "conclusively" — which, of course, meant "to her complete satisfaction" — that her fish could tell one color from the other quite readily.

In 1937 Dr. Frank A. Brown of the University of Illinois published the results of 15,000 experiments on the color perceptions of largemouth bass. He was curious to know whether the fishermen of the country were justified in spending vast quantities of money on variously colored bass lures.

In one of his series of experiments, he lowered a glass tube, wrapped with a colored band, into the tank where the bass lived. When one of them swam near the tube he was rewarded with food. It did not take the bass long to get the idea about these free handouts.

When all his fish were educated to that particular tube, another tube, wrapped with a different color, was lowered into the tank. When the fish swam near this one, instead of receiving food, they were subjected to a mild electrical shock. All soon learned that one color meant food while the other color meant unpleasantness. Even though the positions of the tubes were reversed from time to time, the bass could select the proper color every time.

Incidentally, Dr. Brown reports that his bass were most attracted by red, yellow, white, green, blue and black, in that order of diminishing importance.

The evidence, as we have it from the scientists, certainly indicate that fish can distinguish between colors and select one color from many. Far be it from me to add personal comment. Knowing fishermen fairly well, I am content to pass these things along as we have them, and then let the fishermen form their own conclusions.

Brockville Edges Cornwall 6-4

Brockville, Ont., March 1. — (CP)—Brockville Magedonas eked out a rough-and-tumble 6-4 victory against Cornwall Falcons here last night in a penalty-studded opener of the best-of-seven New York-Ontario Senior Hockey League finals.

No less than 64 minutes in panalties were handed out during the game which saw Brockville leading 2-0 at the finish of the first period and 3-2 at the end of the middle session. Fourteen of the penalties went to the Falcons.

Redmen Scalp Stratford 3-2 For Second Win

(By The Canadian Press)

Brantford's rugged Redmen survived a frantic last-period Stratford assault last night to coast home to a 3-2 victory—their second straight triumph in the best-of-seven senior A Ontario Hockey Association semi-finals.

The penalty-sprinkled third frame saw the desperate Indians haul their goalie out with 40 seconds to go—and almost score. But the Redmen coasted home on three second-period goals despite seven penalties in the final against the Indians' four.

Juniors Finish

The junior season ended at Barrie and St. Catharines, with both teams celebrating their final home games with wins. Barrie Flyers defeated Kitchener Greenshirts 8-6 and St. Kitts trounced Oshawa Generals 5-1 for their sixth straight victory over Larry Aurie's crew.

In the north, South Porcupine Porkies came from behind three times to win 6-4 over Abitibi Eskimos of Iroquois Falls in the seventh and deciding game of the Porcupine Mines Senior Hockey League semi-finals. Porkies now enter the finals against Noranda Copper Kings.

North Bay Black Hawks roared back into contention in the Northern Ontario Hockey Association senior semi-finals by beating Sudbury Wolves 4-2 before a capacity house at Sudbury of 6,000 fans. It tied up the best-of-five set at two games apiece.

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT

Phoenix, Ariz., March 1 (AP)—The New York Giants are a cocky baseball camp, dead certain they'll run away with the coming National League race, and one of the main reasons for their confidence lies in the fact that catcher Wes Westrum is at least free of injuries and full of fire in the spring.

Wes has been a real hard luck guy since he took over the first string backstopping job two seasons ago. He has at one time or another broken all but three of his fingers, and when he wasn't doing that he was suffering painful leg hurts which would have kept a less determined figure on the bench.

This time, though, there isn't a thing wrong with Westrum, and the entire camp feels the difference. His teammates believe he has it in him to displace Roy Campanella of the Dodgers as the league's top receiver.

"I think this is the year when I might finally make it," Wes says. "Always before there's been something to hold me back, but maybe I've finally turned the corner."

In the back of the sturdy catcher's mind probably was the rankling memory of the several years he was forced to spend as Walker Cooper's understudy before the latter was traded to the Boston Braves. Westrum felt in those days that he should have been playing regularly for some club, and at times it appeared to prey on his disposition.

In his first season as the team's No. 1 backstop— Westrum set a major league record for his craft by committing only one error and finishing with a .999 fielding average. He led the National League again last year with a .987 mark, though he was able to play in only 124 games as compared to 140 the previous campaign.

Although his batting average fell off to .220 last season, he hit 20 home-runs, including three grand-slammers, and drove across 70 fat runs. He represents no club handicap up at the plate, even if not quite the terrifying slugger that Campanella is in the right spots.

Training Camp Briefs

Sarasota, Fla., March 1—(AP)—Today is more than the official starting point of the training season to Boston Red Sox general manager Joe Cronin—he's going to talk turkey with his three unsigned stars, Ted Williams, Billy Goodman and Johnny Pesky.

Of the trio, the slugging Williams probably will be the easiest to sign. With Ted scheduled for his physical examination to decide whether he'll go on active duty as a marine pilot, the main question will be the salary arrangements for a possible part season's work. Utility man Goodman and infielder Pesky are apt to be a bit harder to deal with, since both want pay hikes.

Bradenton, Fla., March 1—(AP)—Veteran catcher Walker Cooper of the Boston Braves was regarded today as a definite "holdout" along with third baseman Bob Elliott.

General manager John Quinn talked by telephone Thursday night with Cooper who is at his home in Buckner, Mo. The tribe official's only comment was that there was "nothing to report."

Clearwater, Fla., March 1—AP—Shortstop Gran Hamner has signed a 1952 contract to trim the number of Philadelphia Phillies holdouts to three—third baseman Willie Jones, relief hurler Jim Konstanty and infielder Connie Ryan.

Vero Beach, Fla., March 1—(AP)— Brooklyn Dodger second-baseman Jackie Robinson said today that the condition of the legs and not age or weight determine the length of a baseball career.

"What difference does it make what age you put on the roster," Robinson asked. "Numbers don't mean anything. It's how you feel that counts. I don't drink or smoke. Some fellows are as good or better, at 35, than a lot of others at 40. "It's the legs that count."

GIVES SPEEDY APPROVAL

Ankara, Turkey, March 1 (AP) — The Turkish parliament gave speedy approval yesterday to a national budget of more than 1,800 million lire, (about $600,000,000). More than a third of which is for the armed forces.

Hill Prince Favored to Win Rich Classic

That was the consensus today as thousands of race fans flocks here to watch the 15th running of the classic $100,000 Santa Anita handicap on an off track, slowed by rains.

Eighteen horses were entered in the mile-and-a-quarter race, the grand climax each year of the winter racing season at Santa Anita, and 16 were taking dead aim at the heavy favorite, Hill Prince.

The 17th contender, Bryan G., is Hill Prince's running mate under the silks of Christopher T. Chenery of Virginia.

Given the best chance of upsetting the favorite were Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's Bed O' Roses and Next Move, the finest mares racing in America; the Brookfield Farm's Intent, winner of the recent rich Santa Anita Maturity; W. C. Martin's Little Phil D., which whipped some of this same field in San Antonia handicap two weeks ago, and perhaps the King Ranch's Black Douglas. Hill Prince and Phil D. are superior mudders.

Others in the field were Moonrush, winner of the race a year ago but a longshot bet today; Lights Up, Pet Bully, Be Fleet, Count Lahey, Stormy Cloud, Interpretation, Pur Sang, Simonsez, Sudan and Miche.

Post time for the feature was set for 7:50 p.m. E.S.T.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

When an expert starts to tottle that his judgment outwits facts, all my arguments are futile. He belays me in my tracks.

We have been talking about this deal:

♥Q 8 6 4 2
♦Q 8 6
♣10 4 3 2

WEST	EAST
♠Q 9 6 5 4 2	♠10 3
♥J	♥A 10 9 7 5
♦9 5 2	♦None
♣A K 5	♣Q J 9 8 7 6

SOUTH
♥K 3
♦A K J 10 7 4 3
♣None

South opens with two diamonds. Say that west passes. The north reply is two no-trump; first denying a sure trick before showing his other values, if any. Now what about east?

The lowest bid he can legally say is three. Does he have what it takes for a bid of three hearts or three clubs? A bid of three requires the taking of nine tricks by this pair. Where from?

Partner is assumed to have two tricks until he announces more. East has six; an ace, a queen, three shorts in diamonds, a short in spades. This total of eight is not quite enough to bid three.

From the opening two bid, east least a game; maybe a slam. If they make it a gob of points will go to them. It may pay to take a loss of several tricks.

This is what an expert player in east will consider. In most cases he will stick in a bid of some kind in this spot; three hearts or three clubs; even if he expects it to do down.

If so, what would south do? To bid spades here would not be so good; giving partner wrong ideas about the diamonds. Rebidding diamonds would not be bad. But pass would be better.

The opening two bid was forcing to game or its equivalent. Its equivalent means penalty points for defeating opponents for an equal or bigger amount if their neck is out too far.

So, a pass is not bad. Partner must either double the foe for penalty or keep the bidding alive. The worst it can do is get some information from partner.

Some bidders are more aggressive than others.

Bruins, Hawks Rangers Win Peewee Playoffs

The Pee-Wee section of the Belleville Minor Hockey Association played the second game of the first round playoffs on Saturday morning with Bruins, Black Hawks and Rangers winning their way into the next round.

Bruins won a 5-1 victory over Canadiens in the first game played to win the round bya 7-2 total. Scorers this morning were Elmer Alyea, Dennis Kerruish, Melvin Alyea, Jack Caddick and Jack Bolter. Larry Rowbotham tallied for the losers.

Rangers and Red Wings played to a 1-1 deadlock on scoring by Frank Howard and Richard Young but the Rangers eked out a 1-0 win the previous week on Eric Dies tally to carry a 2-1 edge and win the series.

A draw was made for positions in the next round and Bruins drew a bye while Hawks and Rangers play a sudden death encounter at 8.30 next Saturday morning for the right to advance into the finals.

Red Wings and Maple Leafs will play the first game next week, starting at 7.30 a.m., with Bruins Canadians following at 8 o'clock.

Victoria Whips Leading Royals

(By The Canadian Press)

Victoria Cougars kept in the play-off fight in the Pacific Coast League last night by defeating the league-leading New Westminster Royals 7-4.

Doug Anderson paced a bustling Victoria attack with three goals and assisting on a fourth.

In other league games the rejuvenated Seattle Ironmen edged Vancouver Canucks 2-1 and Saskatoon Quakers whipped Edmonton Flyers 7-3.

Water Street Wins Over Area G

Water Street won the first game of the best-of-three semi-finals of the Northern Electric Hockey League last night edging the Area G squad by a 6-5 score.

The Areas led at the end of the first 1-0 and increased the lead to 3-1 in the second.

The Streeters outscored the Areas 3-2 to tie the score late in the third and O'Brien fired home the winning goal at the 15 minute mark.

Stephens and Jones scored twice for the losers with Thornton getting the other. McCabe with two led the winners with Holland, Hurst, Locke and O'Brien also tallying.

Record Field Splits Rich Flamingo Stake

Miami, Fla., March 1 (AP) —A record-busting field of 22 horses split Hialeah's $50,000 Flamingo Stake into two divisions today, thus dimming the amount of light this important feature for three-year-olds might be expected to throw on the Kentucky Derby.

White Oak Stable's Blue Man, the horse many handicappers had figured as the best derby prospect running in Florida, was placed in the first division Several other top contenders, including Myhelen Stable's Master Fiddle, landed in the second.

This doubtless will result in more confusion among the experts who had looked to the Flamingo for a clear-cut line on Florida's best three-year-old campaigners.

Each section of the mile and a furlong winter classic will be worth $50,000 added.

If the 11 thoroughbreds assigned to each division of the Flamingo go to the post, the two winners will net $47,450 each.

Movie Column

Hollywood, March 1 — (AP)— Producer Stanley Kramer plans to go ahead with filming the best-selling "Caine Mutiny" whether the U. S. navy approves or not.

The producer has had several conferences with navy brass over the story, which is an account of a fictional mutiny aboard a U. S. ship in the Second World War. So far, the navy has turned thumbs down on co-operating on such a project.

"We're working on a script now and I'll show it to them," said Kramer. "I hope they will approve it, because I am convinced that the story is pro-navy. I would like their co-operation, because they could provide me with the ship I need — an old four-stacker destroyer.

"But right now I am of a mind to go ahead with the picture, whether the navy approves or not. What convinces me is watching the best-seller lists. I am informed that 'The Caine Mutiny' is approaching the sales made by 'Gone With the Wind'."

The writers always put on a sprightly show exposing the foibles of Hollywood. Highlight of the program was a panel discussion in which actors described their methods of work. Alan Young declared he was a pebble-kicker, the Gary Cooper - Jimmy Stewart type who kicks imaginary pebbles as he tells the gal he loves her.

Edmund Gwenn testified that he was a chin-chucker, the lovable old rascal who was nice to children but had a penchant for larceny.

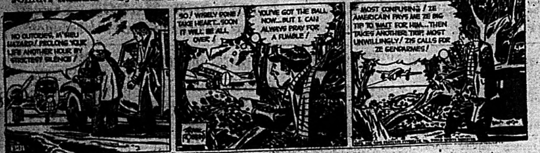
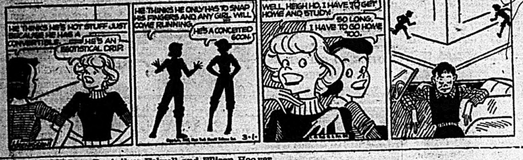
JOHNNY HAZARD — By Frank Robbins



NO OUTCRIES, M'SIEU HAZARD! PROLONG YOUR LIFE ANOTHER HOUR BY STRICTEST SILENCE!
SO! WISELY DONE! TAKE HEART... SOON IT WILL BE ALL OVER!
YOU'VE GOT THE BALL NOW... BUT I CAN ALWAYS PRAY FOR A FUMBLE!
MOST CONFUSING! ZE AMERICAIN PAYS ME ZE BIG TIP TO WAIT FOR HIM... THEN TAKES ANOTHER TRIP, MOST UNWILLINGLY! ZIS CALLS FOR ZE GENDARMES!

PENNY — By Harry Haenigsen



HE THINKS HE'S HOT STUFF JUST BECAUSE HE HAS A CONVERTIBLE.
HE'S AN EGOTISTICAL DRIP.
HE THINKS HE ONLY HAS TO SNAP HIS FINGERS AND ANY GIRL WILL COME RUNNING.
HE'S A CONCEITED GOON.
WELL, HEIGH HO, I HAVE TO GET HOME AND STUDY.
SO LONG, I HAVE TO GO HOME TOO.

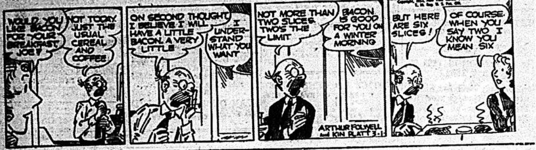
MR. AND MRS. — By Arthur Folwell and Ellison Hoo ver



WOULD YOU LIKE BACON FOR YOUR BREAKFAST, JOE?
NOT TODAY. JUST THE USUAL CEREAL AND COFFEE
ON SECOND THOUGHT, I BELIEVE I WILL HAVE A LITTLE BACON. A VERY LITTLE I UNDERSTAND WHAT YOU WANT
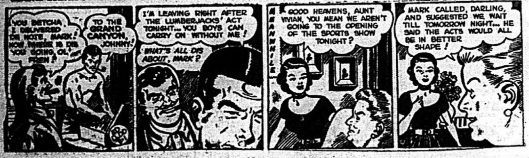
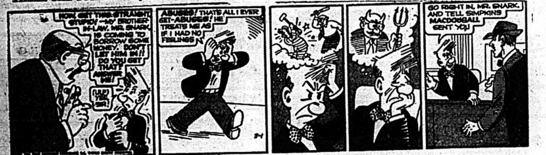
NOT MORE THAN TWO SLICES. TWO'S THE LIMIT
BACON IS GOOD FOR YOU ON A WINTER MORNING
BUT HERE ARE SIX SLICES!
OF COURSE. WHEN YOU SAY TWO I KNOW YOU MEAN SIX
ARTHUR FOLWELL and KIN PLATT 3-1

MARK TRAIL



YOU BETCHA, I DELIVERED DE NOTE, MARK! NOW WHERE IS DIS YOU GOING, OL' FREN?
TO THE GRAND CANYON, JOHNNY!
I'M LEAVING RIGHT AFTER THE LUMBERJACKS' ACT TONIGHT... YOU BOYS CAN CARRY ON WITHOUT ME!
WHAT'S ALL DIS ABOUT, MARK?
MEANWHILE
GOOD HEAVENS, AUNT VIVIAN, YOU MEAN WE AREN'T GOING TO THE OPENING OF THE SPORTS SHOW TONIGHT?
MARK CALLED, DARLING, AND SUGGESTED WE WAIT TILL TOMORROW NIGHT... HE SAID THE ACTS WOULD ALL BE IN BETTER SHAPE!

TILLIE THE TOILER — By Russ Westover



NOW, GET THIS STRAIGHT, STUPID! — MY BROTHER-IN-LAW, MR. SNARK, IS COMING TO BORROW SOME MONEY. DON'T LET HIM IN!! DO YOU GET THAT? ANSWER ME!
(ULP) YES, SIR!
ABUSES! THAT'S ALL I EVER GET — ABUSES! HE TREATS ME AS IF I HAD NO FEELINGS
GO RIGHT IN, MR. SNARK, AND TELL SIMPKINS MACDOUGALL SENT YOU!

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is according to the stars.

For Sunday, March 2

March 21 to April 20—(Aries)—Very practical tasks, home and personal affairs honored, as are religious services, charity and government interests. Be prompt at duties and include prayer, relaxation.

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus)—Definite influences prevail—on one hand those that favor delicate matters, religious and social service interests; on the other hand some restricting rays that say: "Care, tact!"

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—Note Taurus, same obtain here now. Be aggressive only in those activities that require it, in the military, dealing with people and things that need a firm hand.

June 22 to July 23—(Cancer)—Your Venus auspicious encourages you to go about quickly whatever your schedule demands, and that schedule should include attendance at church, and some healthy relaxation if possible.

July 24 to August 22—(Leo)—Homey matters, artistic professions, all interests concerning home and family are honored. Be cheerful, patient about necessary work, and don't neglect your soul's needs. Relax, too.

August 23 to September 23—(Virgo)— Your Mercury and the Moon today stress care in all matters requiring your signature, contracts and conferring. Avoid unnecessary tiffs and money deals. Pray, rest.

September 24 to October 23—(Libra)—Benefic, stimulating influences. Can be important day for military, naval, air force interests, for all urgent and essential activities. Do make time for prayer.

October 24 to November 22—(Scorpio)—Saturn's benefic rays stress thoughtfulness, diplomatic moves, extra care in all plans and activities. Day will return rewards for sincere, intelligent efforts. Pray, recreate healthily.

November 23 to December 22—(Sagittarius) —. Progress in all worth while matters can be steady and sure today but this does not sanction unnecessary activity or strained attitude. Today is God's day, and should be treated as such.

December 23 to January 21—(Capricorn)—Very favorable for you today, your Saturn and the Moon splendidly aspected. Fresh impetus in the air. Make the most of all encouraging and refreshing incidents and assets.

January 22 to February 20—(Aquarius)—A day for far-seeing deeds and plans, wise attention to essential duties, family interests. May not be all one would desire for pleasure but it does bless prayer and good living.

February 21 to March 20—(Pisces) —Carelessness tabu in any important matter, but especially in activities connected with the sea, beverages, chemicals, etc. In free time, enjoy a pastime. Go to church first of all.

YOU BORN TODAY: Idealistic, open-minded and talented. Inclined at times to be indolent, to overindulge pleasures. You have such admirable characteristics and kindly ways it behooves you to stir yourself into consistently ambitious action for you can attain a really enviable niche in your occupation, perhaps in world affairs. Artistic, and very likely literary ability. Develop your God-given gifts and show the world what you can achieve. You can be a shining example of goodness, too. Ask God's help always.

Birthdate: Pope Leo XIII; Sir Thos. Bodly, scholar, diplomat; Desi Arnaz, musician, TV star.

More Precious Than Rubies

By Nina Wilcox Putnam

Tommy Conroy looked thoughtful. "Maybe this does hook up with those thefts at The House, Alma," he said. "What do you think?".

"I think it's very strange in all that you've done for Bright there has never been any official contact with the financial department" Alma pointed out. "I think it's a whole lot stranger that the first thefts in years have occurred since Bright got into power. And that it's a good deal more than a coincidence that Higgins sent a package for appraisal to Mrs. Denton an hour or two after the annual sweepings had been salvaged, particularly since she is about to leave on a trip to Mexico. I realize that anything Mrs. Denton stole she would slip through the workroom floor so that it could not be pinned on her —because in that way it wouldn't be in her possession if she were suspected and her apartment searched!"

"Alma!" Tommy cried "are you mad? What are you trying to say? Why, Mrs. Denton couldn't possibly be the thief! It's a physical impossibility!" She stared at him grimly.

"Mrs. Denton is no more crippled than you are!" she said.

Tommy grabbed her by the wrists and forced her to sit down.

"Be careful what you say, Alma!.. he said severely. "You're making a very serious assertion. Take it easy now, and tell me exactly why you think this."

She pulled herself together and lowered her voice. And then she told him the whole story of her going to Joe's apartment, of Mrs. Denton's visit to the workman at Trumbull's and lastly, how she, Alma, had unwittingly spied upon Mrs. Denton at the old woman's rooms.

Even as she told it she began to feel as though her voice was unconvincing that she herself scarcely believed the whole fantastic experience. But her husband's mobile face finally expressed a reluctant conviction. The world he had taken on trust was crumbling about him, but he was not crumbling with it.

He heard her out and as he listened she could see that something she had said made a powerful impression on him.

"Look here, Jewels!" he began when she was through. "What you tell me about Mrs. Denton is bad enough — it hooks in somewhere with Bright, no doubt. But what's even worse is that it looks bad for Joe too. How can he possibly not know what's going on? Taking her to Mexico and all that?"

"It's pretty sickening!" Alma admitted huskily.

"But not as bad as what you've been thinking of me!" Tommy stood up and looked at her with a new sort of pain in his eyes. "You've done something to me, Jewels—something I can't describe."

"Try to describe it, Tommy." He shook his head distressedly.

"I don't believe I'm able to! This —well, this is the first time I've seen clearly the status I've been acquiring in your eyes. I know that at times you've thought I was a heel—and I guess I have been. But I didn't know I'd sunk so low that you would suspect me of being capable of murder!"

"Tommy! I never did really."

"Yes you did!" he interrupted. "The way it came out naturally just now—that was why you went to Joe. You can't explain it away, and I don't want you to. It's a sledge hammer blow, Alma, and it's hit me just about where I live. I guess my conscience must have become pretty numb. I needed a blow to wake it up again. Well, it's awake all right!"

She couldn't speak but her eyes must have been eloquent for he leaned over and gave her a solemn kiss on the forehead.

"I'm going to prove to you I'm a man," he said quietly. "Starting right now. This is my mess and it's up to me to clear it up. I'm taking over from here on and that means a real clean-up! Believe me?"

"Oh, Tommy darling, I do. But how do you start?"

"First of all I'll get hold of Bright and bring everything out in the open."

"But suppose he asks for the balance of the money? We haven't got it!"

"I'll tell him the truth and Bright will give me time to replace it. He'll have to. And Alma, we'd better not jump to any conclusions about what he's done before. I've talked to him. There may be some perfectly simple explanation."

"I hope to heaven there is."

Tommy picked up the telephone. But it developed that Bright had not been at his office and his home number did not answer.

"I'll have to call Mysti," Tommy decided. "He's usually there at about this time." Alma experienced the twinge of mingled curiosity and repugnance which the mention of Bright's girl always aroused in her.

"What(s she like Tommy?"

"Mysti? You've seen her. She's just like she looks!"

Alma recalled the woman she had seen at the Blue Cat Club. Mysti, with the lines about her mouth, the hardness in her eyes, the dark sleek hair, the oval face and the low cut dress.

"Is she going to marry Bright?"

"Not unless he comes across with a fat cash settlement first! That's why Bright's been working overtime—he's so crazy for her he'd give her anything she asked for, even if he had to steal to get it. . ."

Suddenly realizing what he was saying, Tommy broke off abruptly and began a frantic dialing of the phone.

While Tommy telephoned, Alma Conroy glanced at the clock. She had been home nearly an hour. By this time the Dentons might be on their way to Mexico. Somehow they ought to be stopped. But how could they stop them, what pretext? After all, only Alma knew that Mrs. Denton was not a cripple. Even so, this fact, in itself, was no grounds for arrest. And as for Jae Denton, Alma's suspicions about him were based wholly upon her discovery about his stepmother. Still something ought to be done about the Dentons and done quickly.

"Tommy!" she began. "What about Joe?"

He waved her to silence and spoke into the telephone. "Hello, Mysti!"

Alma broke off and watched in straining silence, trying to sense what was being said at the other end of the wire, attempting to read Tommy's face. Mysti Marchand was evidently being voluble and gay, scarcely giving Tommy the chance to ask his questions.

"Is Bright there? . . . When do you expect him? . . . Have you any idea where he is? . . . Sure I want to find him!" Finally he hung up, shaking his head.

"No luck!" he said. "She claims she doesn't know how to reach him. Maybe I'd better go look around the bars. Now what was that you were saying about Joe?"

"Yes," said a voice from behind them, "what about Joe?"

She must have left the front door open, Alma thought swiftly, and Joe Denton had walked in without knocking. How long had he been standing there and how much had he heard?

"Joe!" she said faintly. "I — we—thought you'd gone! You look awful! What's happaned?"

"Plenty!" He sank heavily into a chair and stared at them for a moment without saying anything further.

"Snap out of it, old man, and tell us!" Tommy broke the silence anxiously.

"I feel like I'm going nuts!" he said slowly. "Something's happened that just can't have happened—but it did. And I've come to you for help, because I don't know what to do. It's my stepmother, Mrs. Denton. She's disappeared—gone."

A queer cold thrill ran through Alma's taut body.

"There! I told you!" she cried triumphantly to Tommy. Joe stared at her open mouthed, while Tommy put a restraining hand on her shoulder.

"Let Joe tell his story first," Tommy warned.

"I'll have a try at it," Joe began with an effort at calmness. "We were practically all set to leave for the train. My things were packed and I'd done Mrs. Denton's earlier —all but for throwing a few last-minute things into her suitcase. Then I remembered I hadn't paid the paper bill and went on down to the corner to take care of that and get a few things from the drug store. I took my time coming back and when I was about half way down the block I saw a car in front of the house. Mrs. Denton was being helped into it by two men."

"Helped into it!" Alma exclaimed. "Who were the men?"

"One was a fellow I'd never seen before."

"And the other?"

"The other was Brighton Muncie!" There was a moment of stunned silence.

Then Tommy spoke. "Bright — are you sure it was Bright?" Tommy's voice was hoarse with anxiety

"Positive. It was his car and besides, I got a good look at him as he drove off."

"Didn't you stop them? Didn't you ask them anything?" Alma demanded wildly.

"I ran after 'em and yelled but it didn't do any good. She saw me and said something to Bright and he stepped on the gas. The light was with them and they were out of sight by the time I reached the corner."

"And then?" Alma asked.

"I went upstairs to her apartment. I couldn't believe I'd seen straight. My good sense told me I must be mistaken. But she was gone, all right. She'd left her wheelchair behind her and all her luggage except one bag. And anyone could see she'd left in a hurry. What do you folks think it means?"

"I think you're already beginning to guess, Joe," Alma said. "There is only one reason why she and Bright would have left together. And Mrs. Denton wasn't being helped into that car—She was getting in. She doesn't need any help! Didn't you know that wheelchair was a blind?"

Five Children Burned to Death In Newfoundland

Boy Carries Baby Brother To Safety, 2 Others Rescued

St. John's, Nfld., March 3 (CP) — Five children, ranging in age from three to 11, were burned to death at Nicholsville in western Newfoundland Saturday night. Their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Cross, and the eldest child of the family, Vaughan, 15, were absent when fire destroyed their frame bungalow.

Marvey, 13, carried his nine-months-old brother, Hughie, to safety. Henry, 8, and Elsie, 13, also managed to get out in time.

The victims: Roland, 11; Stirling, 9; Wavey, 7, Allan, 4, and Valetta, 3.

By the time residents of nearby Deer Lake reached the scene the house was destroyed.

The charred remains of the five children were recovered by police.

It was the second fire tragedy in the Cross family. About 9 years ago, Chesley Cross, brother of Jack Cross, his wife and seven children were burned to death in a fire that destroyed their home in Reidsville, another small settlement near Deer Lake.

Truckers Have Serious Problem On Their Hands

Toronto, March 3 (CP) —United States and Ontario trucking officials meet here tomorrow to discuss regulations under which transport firms use highways in both countries.

American truckers want the use of Ontario highways—particularly No. 3 from Detroit to Buffalo. If they are refused, Michigan may retaliate by refusing to let Canadian trucks use its state highways John M. Veale of the Michigan Public Service Commission said yesterday.

Mr. Veale, also chairman of the United States Association of Railroad and Utilities Commission, will be in Toronto tomorrow with representatives from Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, New York, Michigan, Illinois, Idaho, Minnesota, North Dakota and Washington. They will meet with Ontario officials at the parliament buildings.

The Michigan trucking said that the run from Detroit to Buffalo, N.Y., is 110 miles shorter by Ontario highways than around the south shore of Lake Erie, a distance of about 260 miles.

American truckers were permitted to use the Ontario roads during the war but that privilege was discontinued after the war. Three years ago the federal government signed a treaty to allow American trucks to use Canadian roads, but Ontario has not agreed to the proposal.

Ontario officials last night declined to comment on the Tuesday conference/ The province's attitude has been to move freight over a regular Ontario route, an American operator would have to take out a public commercial vehicle licence. No American applications have been received.

Ontario officials are worried that if U.S. trucks were allowed to use the province's highways, damage would result to highways. Ontario limits of weight are 18,000 pounds an axle; American limits are considerably higher.

Mr. Veale suggested that mutual agreement could be reached between Michigan and Ontario on either of two bases:

1. Foreign truckers would be required to take out licences for trans-border operation and pay road fees to equal or nearly equal amounts.
2. Licence and road fees could be waived.

BURNED TO DEATH

Welland, March 3 — (CP) — George Roy Hodgkins, 63, was burned to death today in his home at Allanburg, five miles north of here.

He is believed to have suffered a heart attack and slumped across a stove. Tenants in his house smelled smoke and extinguished the flames consuming his body.

QUEEN'S DEFEATED

Buffalo, N. Y., March 3 (CP) — Buffalo State teachers Saturday night swamped Queen's University 92-57 in an exhibition basketball game. Don Griffin with 17 and Ken Atwood with 14 paced the losers.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, March 3—(CP)—A developing storm in Oklahoma has spread an extensive precipitation area over eastern United States and southwestern Ontario. So far reports would indicate the precipitation to be fairly light and there appears to be a good chance that no more than an inch or two will fall in the lower lakes region and proportionately less further north.

Warmer air is moving over southern regions fom the southwest but cloudy skies will prevent the thermometer from rising much above 35 today, but with the temperature hovering close to the freezing mark what snow falls will be damp and will probably become mixed with drizzle or freezing drizzle during the day.

RCAF Gives Up Search for Ten Men Lost at Sea

Halifax, March 3—(CP)—The R. C. A. F. today gave up the search for 10 men lost at sea after last week's blizzard

A dragger left Lockeport meanwhile to examine the derelict Idella and Theta, sighted yesterday about 65 miles off Nova Scotia's south shore. There was no sign of her four-man crew.

The battered Erma Rog, out of Port Latour, N. S., was found grounded at Sea Island off Yarmouth Saturday but there was no sign of her three-man crew.

The vessels were hit by near-hurricane winds that struck the Maritimes last Wednesday and Thursday.

Five inches fell at Sydney, N. S. The deepest fall was at Charlottetown where 11.5 inches was added to the foot or so that fell during last week's blizzard.

Canada Toy Industry Turned Into Tremendous Business in Ten Years

(By The Canadian Press)

The next time you trip over a toy automobile that junior has left conveniently on your stairway, you may derive some doubtful sonsolation from the knowledge that you have just came in contact with a multi-million-dollar business.

The men who make everything from marbles to life-like doll carriages are meeting in Montreal this week. And one of the things they will hear is that their business has increased ten-fold since 1936.

In that year, the Canadian toy industry produced goods worth $3,000,000. This year the figure for output alone is estimated at $30,000,000, provided materials required for defence don't drain off the toy-maker's needs—wood, metal, rubber, plastics, textiles and paper.

The magazine Foreign Trade tells of some of the plans of the toy-makers of Canada. Export markets are beginning to interest them, foreign trade says in its current issue.

"Among the markets currently offering limited opportunities to Canadian exporters of toys are the United Kingdom, British West Indies, United States, Venezuela, Domincan Republic, Peru, Panama, Hong Kong and Switzerland.

Foreign Trade says there are few controls on toy export to worry the trader. With the exception of destinations in the Far East, toys may be shipped under general export permit.

Although manufacturers are beginning to look abroad for markets, Foreign Trade says the domestic market still is the basic outlet for toys.

One of the colorful features of the toy industry is the annual toy fair which gets under way in Montreal today. At this fair, the 115 Canadian toy manufacturers will display every conceivable kind of toy.

And these toys won't be aimed at the youngsters only. There are toys "suitable for people of all ages," says Foreign Trade, listing everything from dolls to pool tables.

Manufacturers have gone as far as to break down into tables the age groups of Canada's population. With their eye on the statistics, they "have beeen devoting serious thought to the type of citizens Canada will have in, say, 20 or 30 years, and are working more closely with educationalists to design toys that are durable and functional for each stage in a child's development."

FESTERING SORE IS COMPOUND 62 ON KOJE ISLAND

More Violence in This Camp Than Any Other

Koje Island, Korea, March 3 — (Delayed by Censor)—(AP)—Compound 62, a barbed wire enclosure housing some 5,900 communist led troublemakers, is a festering sore in the huge United Nations prisoner-of-war camp on this South Korean Island.

More violence has erupted in 62 than in all the other 82 compounds for Korean civilian prisoners.

Two weeks ago, the inmates of 62 attacked United States soldiers who had been sent in to prevent trouble, while prisoners were interviewed. The riot was quelled only by rifle fire. Fifty-five Korean prisoners were killed and 159 were wounded. Twenty-three of the wounded died since. One American soldier was killed and 39 were wounded.

Antagonism was apparent in 62 as long ago as last June. Information specialists and teachers said the prisoners often were deliberately rude, scornful and insulting. The education problem had to be abandoned in that compound last December.

Anti-communist inmates were scorned, tried in mock courts and beaten. Several months ago about 300 inmates were moved out of 62 at their own request.

Officials Deny Report

Camp officials have been unable, or unwilling, to explain how the communist element has been able to take over control of the internees. Some observers suggest that by accident or design prisoners with violent communist affections have been concentrated in 62. Officials deny any such plan.

Other observers expressed amazement at the lack of inspection inside the compound in recent months. When the inmates attacked American troops Feb. 18, they obviously were well prepared. Minutes after the soldiers entered the compound, they were showered with a rock barrage. Shortly thereafter, prisoners poured from their buildings and tents armed with crude but effective weapons.

Camp officials admitted the compound had not been searched for weapons since December, when the compound spokesman had warned the U.N. camp authorities he "could not guarantee the safety" of any unwanted persons who entered the compound.

The interviewing was resumed this week only after the men of 62 had proposed it and after their condition that a minimum of armed guards be used was accepted by camp officials.

Cairo, Egypt. March 3—(AP)—Egypt's new prime minister, Ahmed Naguib Hilaly Pasha, announced suspension of parliament for 30 days and headed into a reform regime dedicated to purging corruption from the government today.

He also began preparing for new talks with Britain on control of the Suez Canal zone and the Sudan.

Announcement of the parliamentary suspension, which his predecessor Aly Maher Pasha had refused to approve, was the first major action of the 60-year-old jurist and independent last night following swearing in of his cabinet.

The government also suspended indefinitely operation of Egypt's biggest school, Faud University in Cairo, after students began a sit-down-strike protesting continued martial law and any agreements with the west.

Maher Pasha resigned unexpectedly Saturday. Some political leaders had wanted him to dissolve parliament and call new elections. This was sought as a move against the strongly nationalist Wafdist party, which now dominates the legislative group.

Suspension of parliament was first announced Saturday morning. But Maher Pasha, after a hurried cabinet meeting, announced his government did not approve the action. Shortly afterward he resigned.

(The Cairo dispatches, which are strictly censored, did not say who issued the first suspension decree, but presumably it came from King Farouk's palace.)

Hilaly said he was starting at once to study Egypt's position in relation to Britain, but that he would need time before he could begin new talks aimed at settling the Anglo-Egyptian dispute.

The weekend political upheaval came just as such talks were due to start between Maher Pasha and British ambassador Sir Ralph Stevenson. Sir Ralph postponed the first meeting Saturday, however, with the announcement that he had a sudden chill.

In a letter accepting the king's mandate, Hilaly pledged he would wipe out disturbances and clean up the government. He would, he said, crush "corruption in politics which has become a trade used for a sources of income."

Promise Support

The new cabinet appeared assured, at least temporarily, of the support of all parties except the Wafd. Declarations of support were issued by the Saadists and the Liberal - Constitutionalists. Hassan El Hobeidi Bey, "supreme guide" of the Moslem brotherhood, which claims a membership of more than 2,000,000, was quoted on the Wafdist organ Al Misri as saying he wanted "to give the new cabinet a chance" before passing judgment on it.

The independent and well-informed newspaper Akher Lahza said the new government had blueprinted a sweeping "internal purge" comprising these points:

1. Cancellation of all "exceptional promotions" through which some officials had greatly enriched themselves.
2. Commissions to investigate cases of corruption.
3. Enforcement of the recently-adopted "fortune law." This empowers the government to investigate the origin of ministers' and high officials' fortunes.
4. Issuance of a new electoral law requiring each party to give particulars on the source of its funds and inflicting heavy penalties "on whoever sells or buys votes."

France Gropes for Solution To Deepening Political Crisis

Paris, March 3 (CP) —Antoine Pinay, 60-year-old moderate Conservative, today accepted President Vincent Auriol's invitation to try to form a new French government.

"My first impulse was to refuse" he said, "but when the president insisted I consented to consult my friends and make an effort."

Pinay is the third political figure approached in an attempt to relieve the crisis which deepened following failure of Paul Reynaud to patch together a National Union Coalition cabinet.

After Reynaud gave up trying to form a new government to succeed Edgar Faure's administration, Auriol called on another former premier, Rene Pleven. But he refused to try to cope with the manifold divisions within the French national assembly.

Then Auriol approached Pinay, out-going transport minister. Pinay is a slightly right-of-centre member of the Independent Republican party.

Pinay would be expected to try to form another government in the image of its predecessor's middle-of-the-road coalition. Whether this can be done now is highly doubtful.

France's financial and ministerial crisis has stalled development of Western European defence may mean that much of the west's defence planning will have to be reshaped. The muddle even has caused some officials to think seriously about dropping the costly anti-communist fight in Indo-China.

The French socialist party lashed Reynaud's hope when it refused to join a government with followers of Charles de Gaulle—the reassemblement du Peuple Francais. Socialist leaders accused de Gaulle of "anti-republican tendencies" and implied that his followers would enter such a coalition only to seize outright powers for themselves.

Reynaud had proposed that leaders of all parties except the communists join him in the cabinet to map out a common program for salvation of the country's currency and equilibrium of the country's finances.

Spokesman for de Gaulle agreed. So did leaders of other parties although some, like the Mouvement Republicaine Populaire, attached conditions which in effect would have excluded the Gaullists from cabinet posts.

With runaway inflation staring the country in the face, some way must be found for France to meet the obligations for western defence which she assumed at the North Atlantic Treaty Organization conference at Lisbon last month.

Before Faure was forced to resign Friday, the National Assembly overwhelmingly voted his record $4,000,000,000 defence budget, including France's share of NATO European defence.

But the assemblymen then defeated Faure's plan for a 15-percent tax increase to pay for defence and other expenses.

OutnumberedU.S. Jets Shoot Down Two Red MIGs

Seoul, Korea, March 3—(AP)—Outnumbered United States Sabre jets today shot down two communist MIG-15 jets today and damaged five others as an estimated 250 red fighters swept south of the Yalu River.

Allied losses, if any, were not announced.

The Sabres tangled with the MIGs in four separate battles. The two red jets the air force said were shot down boosted to 200 the number of MIGs destroyed by Fifth Air Force planes in Korea a spokesman said.

Some of the communist jets streaked far south of their usual haunts, almost to the battle line. Two MIGs attacked a pair of propeller-driven F-51 Mustangs south of the north Korean capital Pyongyang, but both Mustangs hedge-hopped safely back to base, the air force said.

It was the first time in two days that the red combat planes ventured across the Yalu River boundary from their sanctuary in Manchuria.

Along the battlefront, allied forces restricted action to patrol scouting. Sunday an Allied tank force muscled a two-pronged squeeze on Chinese hill positions northeast and northwest of Chorwon in western Korea. The tankers reported 25 communist bunkers wiped out and eight damaged. No tanks were reported lost.

In the east, the reds tossed in another 45 artillery and mortar shells carrying propaganda leaflets.

Believed Plane Hit Flock of Sea Gulls

Nice, France March 3—(AP)—Thirty-seven persons, including an American ballet dancer, were killed today when a four-engine Air France airliner crashed just after ing off.

The dead American was Joan Katzman, 21, of Brooklyn, who danced under the name of Harriet Toby with the Marquis De Ceuvas company. Last night at Cannes she had danced in the ballet "La Muerte"—Spanish for death.

Employees at the Nice airport said pieces of sea gull's wings and feathers had been found in the air intakes of the plane's engines and that this might have caused the crash.

Air France officials in Paris said they could not confirm this.

The plane—a French-built Languedoc with 34 passengers and a crew of four aboard—plummeted into an olive grove at 9:05 a.m. (3:05 a.m. EST). One woman, an Italian, was pulled out of the wreckage alive but died en route to hopsital.

Air France released an official casualty list which gave no nationalities of the victims. All were listed from French, Italian or British home addresses.

The dead included the wife of the pilot, Theau Farrugia, 29, a veteran of 4,500 hours flying time.

On taking off, the plane circled and turned back to the airport, losing altitude, and crashed only a few feet from a group of houses inhabited by 20 families.

All the bodies were badly burned.

An unconfirmed report in Paris said the airliner had run into a flight of birds just before the engines cut out.

French actress Lise Topart was among the victims.

One Not Expected To Recover Sight After Explosion

Kingston, March 3. (CP) — James Perrin and Frederick Dougall, both of Delta, Ont., injured Friday morning in a dynamite explosion at an Ontario hydro project 20 miles north of Brockville, were reported resting comfortably in hospital here Sunday.

Dr. G. W. Bingham said Perrin is not expected to recover his sight and suffered a broken elbow while. Dougall's eyes were injured, but not as severely. He also suffered a broken arm.

The men were working on a power line extension in the Charleston Lake area and were blasting pole holes.

It is thought a power drill struck some dynamite which had not exploded.

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE

Cincinnati, March 3—(AP)—An X-ray merry-go-round has knocked out cancers in dozens of apparently-hopeless patients, the second national cancer conference was told today.

Some have no signs of cancer two years later. But it's too soon to call any of them cured.

The merry-go-round is a revolving chair. The patient sits in it while a 2,000,000-volt X-ray beam is aimed at the hidden cancer. As the patient spins slowly, the beam concentrates on the cancer. The spinning means less damaging X-rays on his skin and healthy tissues, and thus a bigger dose hitting the cancer.

The merry-go-round method was developed by Dr. John G. Trump and associates of Massachusetts Institute of Technology in research supported by the American Cancer Society.

So far, 286 patients have been treated. The great majority had advanced cancer that couldn't be cut out or treated with ordinary X-ray methods.

Today, 157 have no signs of cancer, and some have been clear for one to two years. But cancer isn't considered cured until at least five years have passed with no recurrence.

Forty-seven have died, some of other diseases; 19 have cancers that spread, 12 have persistent cancers and in five the cancers returned. Another 46 are under treatment still or finished it too recently to be called free of the disease.

Forcing Provinces To Lift Barriers Said Objective

Gardiner Says Europeans To be Decontaminated

Ottawa, March 3 — (CP) — The Canadian government. in an apparent effort to break Quebec and British Columbia restrictions on interprovincial livestock and meat shipments, today imposed rigid import controls to block buying from foreign suppliers.

As a result of this step taken under the Emergency Powers Act and announced by Agriculture Minister Gardiner, the provinces either would have to reopen boundaries or face the possibility of a meat shortage. Provincial restrictions were implemented in an effort to prevent spread of the foot-and-mouth disease outbreak in South Saskatchewan.

Mr. Gardiner, in a 2,500-word speech over a Trans-Canada network, also announced that losses by farmers whose livestock must be destroyed will be covered by increased federal payments up to any amount considered "fair and reasonable."

He said details of payments will be worked out by a board set up in Regina.

Extra Precautions

At a press conference held later he said the government is taking extra precautions against the possibility of the disease being carried into Canada by new immigrants.

Instructions have been issued to have a boatload coming from Europe go through a decontamination station at Montreal. It was possible that a new sterilization centre may be set up at Halifax and changes made in the Canadian Immigration Act.

To prevent a flood of beef and pork to Canadi anmarkets resulting from the U.S. embargo on Canadian livestock and meats, Mr. Gardiner asked all farmers to hold animals on farms for longer periods and announced that premium payments on hogs will be changed to cover heavier weights.

Normally, Canada is not a heavy importer of livestock and meats but there would be a heavy movement of American and other foreign products into British Columbia, for example, if the action had not been taken. That province produces only about 10 percent of its requirements.

Quebec has a plentiful supply of hogs but does not produce all the beef it needs and plants normally buy from Ontario. Under the Quebec permit system, this movement might have been restricted and some plants either shut down or started buying from the U.S.

New Steps Taken

Mr. Gardiner's broadcast covered these new steps:

1. As a result of the embargo placed by the United States on Canadian livestock and meats, the government, under the Emergency Powers Act, will restrict imports in order that the Canadian market may be retained for domestic production.
2. Payments to farmers whose animals must be destroyed to prevent the disease from spreading will be paid for the animal destroyed and all losses which may be "fair and reasonable", including feed and equipment.
3. The government is throwing up a buffer zone as a second line of defence against possible spread of the disease. Until further notice all animals which come from within 50 miles of the 10-municipality south Saskatchewan quarantine area "will be slaughtered at the nearest available packing plant."

A. The federal government will not ask any province to take live animals from the Prairies, even though the extra buffer-zone protection is being provided. But if any province wants to admit the live animals, "we do intend to set up an inspection which makes it perfectly safe for them to do so."

Quotes Regulations

"If any province asks to have live animals forwarded, they will be able to obtain them with a certificate which makes them as secure against the disease as it is possible for them to be when obtaining animals from anywhere in the world," Mr. Gardiner said.

"They will not, however, be permitted to go unless the province in question asks for them."

The emergency restrictions on imported livestock and meats appears to be the federal government's reply to provinces which have put restrictions on interprovincial trade on livestock and meats to safeguard against the spread of the disease, and possibly also to avoid "dumping" of surpluses from other provinces into their own.

British Columbia, whose producers supply only about 10 per cent of the province's requirements in livestock and meats, has banned imports from Alberta and other prairie provinces.

Quebec Places Quotas

Quebec has placed imports of meats and livestock from all provinces under a permit system. The outlook resulting from the Federal government's announcements is that either these provinces will lift restrictions or face a possible meat shortage.

Mr. Gardiner said the scourge is in an area about 50 miles square in 10 municipalities around Regina. The disease has not spread, but inspectors are watching the area outside the 10-municipality quarantine.

"I make a special appeal to all those reached through this broadcast," he said, "that they do not hesitate to report any suspicious cases. We require the co-operation of everyone in our efforts to confine the disease to this small area and stamp it out completely there."

DEER IS SEEN AT O'BRIEN'S BRIDGE

A curious fawn exploring Highway No. 37 near O'Brien's Bridge yesterday afternoon gave Police Constable and Mrs. William Evans a thrill before it finally leaped a fence and disappeared from view.

Constable and Mrs. Evans were returning from a trip north when they saw the fawn walking in a ditch. It gazed curiously at the car for a moment then crossed the road and walked in the opposite ditch for about twenty yards before it again scampered across the highway and leaped a fence.

FOUR CALLS ANSWERED BY FIRE DEPARTMENT

Four calls were answered by the local fire department over the weekend.

Sunday firemen spent six hours at the local dump extinguishing a blaze in the dump. Saturday they were called to a West Moira Street address where an elderly lady had turned in what turned out to be a false alarm. The woman had put the tea kettle on and then took a nap. She woke to find the tea kettle dry and the stove going full blast. She became frightened and turned in the alarm.

Firemen also extinguished a rubbish fire at a Dunbar Street address and were called to the Lanning Leathergoods Ltd., where the sprinkled system was found to be giving trouble.

CUSTOMS RETURNS SHOW DECREASE

Customs returns at the Belleville office for the month of February showed a decrease from the corresponding month in 1951, it was stated today by customs collector Gordon Miller.

Returns for the month totalled $484,708.03, as compared with $691,858.50, a decrease of $207,150.47.

HYDRO EMPLOYEE OUT AN OVERCOAT

A meanest thief who added insult to injury was reported by city police today.

Mr. W. Morton, a hydro employee with rooms at a local hotel, was eating his dinner at a restaurant when some person carried off his new overcoat leaving an old one in its place. In his overcoat pocket was the key to his hotel room.

PROVINCIAL POLICE LOOKING FOR DRIVER OF STOLEN CAR

Provincial police are looking for the driver of a stolen auto which went into a ditch on the Belleville-Trenton highway Saturday night. The car was damaged when it bumped into a tree. The driver had disappeared when police arrived on the scene.

The car had been stolen from Graham's used car lot at Trenton earlier in the evening. Provincial Constable McBride said the car was not reported stolen, until after police were informed of the accident.

A car owned by Joseph Leveck Tweed, was badly damaged when it went off the highway at Corbyville and struck a hydro pole. The driver told police that the car went out of control when it struck something on the highway. The accident was investigated by OPP Robertson.

FIREMEN WILL USE PROCEEDS TO BUY NEW SPORT EQUIPMENT

Winners of the Belleville Fire Department Sports Fund draw were announced today by Fire Chief Gerald Vance. Winner of the lazy boy chair was Wilber Lathangue, 312 Bleecker Ave., while Mrs. Keith Bertrim, 7 Pine Street held the lucky ticket on a silver tea service. Proceeds from the draw will be used to purchase sports equipment for use of children at the Firemen's Park playground.

POLICE BLOTTER

Damage amounting to approximately $225 resulted Friday evening in a three-car collision on Dundas Street, East. A westbound car driven by Elmer Lloyd of Point Anne crashed into the rear of a parked truck which in turn bumped into a car immediately ahead.

Driver of the truck, Joseph Wood, Moira Street, had been pushing a car owned by Earl Mossman, North Front Street, and had stopped to disengage the bumper, when the Lloyd car crashed into the rear.

Two younben Joseph Burshaw, Holloway Street and Jack Tripp, Bloomfield, were charged with disorderly conduct following a fight in a local beer parlor. Burshaw suffered severed tendons in his right hand when cut with a broken glass and was taken to hospital.

Car Crashes into Residence, Two Other Vehicles go Through Guardrail, One Woman Injured

Two cars and a residence were damaged extensively and one woman was injured early Sunday morning in a freak accident which saw three autos careen off the road on a Cannifton Road curve, one auto crashing into a residence, where six persons were sleeping.

In hospital is Mrs. Maurice Reid, R.R. 4, Belleville, driver of the car, which crashed into the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Markle, just outside the city limits on Cannifton Road. Several other persons had narrow escapes from what might have been serious injury.

Shortly after midnight Saturday a southbound auto driven by Mrs. Reid crashed through the guardrail on a sharp curve, went over a four-foot enbankment, through a picket fence and crashed into the house, where the Markle family was sleeping. The front verandah was completely demolished and a big hole punched in the front of the house.

Mr. Markle and his six-year-old son Jackie were sleeping in an adjoining bedroom and although showered with plaster and debris, escaped injury as a partition was dislodged and their bedroom left a shambles.

Mrs. Markle and the other children were sleeping in another room.

Only a miracle saved the stove in the living room being overturned and the house set afire. As it was the dislodged partition knocked the stovepipes askew. Glass from the broken front door was thrown completely across the house and into the kitchen.

Hardly had the dust settled after the Reid car crashed into the house, when a second auto driven by Seymour Maracle of Shannonville sped through the hole in the guardrail fence, skidded across the front yard and crashed into the wrecked Reid auto.

Minutes later still another car driven by Jack Wilson, 4th Street, followed the same route through the guardrail fence and came to rest in the Markle front yard.

Mrs. Reid suffered head cuts and bruises when her car crashed into the Markle house and was the only person hospitalized although at least one other person was struck with flying splinters.

Had to Jump For Life

Sidney Galpin, a neighbor of the Markles, had to jump for his life to avoid being struck by the Maracle auto as it careened into the Markle front yard.

Galpin was bandaging Mrs. Reid's head as she sat in her damaged auto, when the Maracle auto headed directly toward him.

"I saw the car coming right at me and had to jump fast," Mr. Galpin said, The Maracle auto crashed into the left side of the Reid car.

A taxi driver, who stopped to assist said he had been struck in the leg by a splinter which flew from a guardrail.

Constable Ivan Tinkess of the O.P.P. investigated the accident and had his hands full as he endeavored to determine the sequence of the crashes. When he arrived on the scene there were three cars in the Markle front yard, one of them almost inside the Markle house and the front verandah demolished.

Miracle No One Killed

"It's a miracle that someone was not killed," stated the officer.

Before Constable Tinkess could question all drivers involved, Wilson, driver of the third car, jumped into his auto, manoeuvred his way back onto the highway and drove away. He was brought back by Inspector J. C. Hayes of the city police department who had arrived on the scene.

Police said the highway was dry at the curve where the three cars left the highway and went through the guardrail.

Occupants of all three vehicles had been to a dance at Cannifton and were returning to the city when the accident occurred.

Queen Mary-Prince Charles H-S. Association Clears $50

The Queen Mary-Prince Charles Home and School Association held a dance recently in the Prince Charles School. The greeting committee at the door and the beautiful decorations of balloons and pink and blue streamers in the auditorium added a pleasant feeling of friendly welcome to the guests.

General convener, Fred Symons, to whom goes great credit for the success of the dance, had everything wonderfully organized and all went smoothly to the strains of Mr. Walter Asseltine's orchestra, "The Night Owls," a promising young orchestra composed of a group of collegiate boys. Fred Beeby was the jovial Master of Ceremonies who called out many special dances.

Prize Winners

Those who won prizes were: The Hansens, the Waites, the Portlocks, the Moffats and Mrs. O'Neill and Mr. Reeve.

Especially enjoyable were the square dances for which Cy Middleton, caller, and Bruce Gorrill, fiddler, kindly gave their voluntary services.

Students from Queen Mary school, Patsy Simpson, Nancy Oliphant, Sheila Ladoucier, Geraldine Navin, Ruth Findlay and Beverly Ashman were in charge of two check rooms. The $13 collected by them is to be divided between the Junior Red Cross funds of the two schools, Queen Mary and Prince Charles.

Prizes for the evening were donated by various city firms and one dairy.

Gracious Compliments

Many gracious compliments were passed on the delicious refreshments served by the social committee and the executive.

It was particularly pleasing to the dance organizers of the dance to welcome such a fine crowd with a goodly number of visitors from other home and schools in the city.

Over $50 was cleared for the work of the Home and School Association and everyone enjoyed a pleasant evening.

HEAVY CASUALTIES

Cyclists are advised that the 1952 issue of Licence Plates are now on sale, and should be secured at once. This system of Bicycle Licence or Permits is issued to give legal status to bicycles on the streets of Belleville as well as to assist in recovery if lost or stolen. The fee is small —25c —but often the chore is overlooked or forgotten, so just to pep things up and make all cyclists friendly with the Police Department, we will have a number draw on the first of each month this summer, beginning with APRIL 1st.
The cyclist with 1952 Bicycle Licence to match drawn number will be entitled to THREE DOLLARS ($3.00) in CASH
OR
Choice of Merchandise in our Store — Bicycle Supplies — Sport Goods — Fishing Tackle — Meccano — Model Aircraft, etc., to the extent of FIVE DOLLARS ($5.00),
OR
The amount of TEN DOLLARS ($10.00) when applied to the purchase of a New Bicycle in our Store.
NOTE — We do not sell the permits mentioned above—they must be secured at the City Hall.
Send no box tops — cash — or enclosures to us, just watch our Windows for Winners after the first of each month.

Obituary

MRS. R. C. CHOWN (Toronto)

Toronto, March 3—The death occurred here Saturday of Mrs. R .C. Chown, in Toronto Western Hospital, after a brief illness. She was in her 74th year.

The former Alice Maude Elvins, Mrs. Chown was born in Belleville, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Elvins. She lived in Belleville until 1912, at which time she and her family moved to Edmonton, Alta., where they remained until 1922, in which year they came to Toronto.

Mrs. Chown was active in church and social affairs in both eastern and western Canada. Her husband, Russell C. Chown, a past city councillor of Belleville, and a life member of Masonic Lodge, predeceased her in 1941.

She is survived by two sons, Ernest R. of Montreal and Howard E. Chown of Toronto; and four grandchildren, Bruce E. Chown, Mrs. Douglas Tate (Beverly), and Roger Chown of Toronto, and Russell David Chown of Montreal.

The funeral service will be held at the Thomspon Funeral Parlors, Dupont Street, Toronto, Tuesday, March 4 at 2.30 p.m. and burial will take place in Mount Pleasant cemetery.

Mrs. Bertram Docler and Mrs. E. B. Robbins of 39 Bertram Blvd., Belleville, are sisters.

GERMAN B. VANDERVOORT (Wellington)

German Blakely Vandervoort, well known resident passed away suddenly at his home in Wellington on Thursday, Feb. 14th. He was superintendent of the Canadian Canners, Ltd. farm department there. A fine citizen, he made many friends by his genial disposition and his friendly, helpful nature.

He was born on Oct. 14th, 1888, at Gilead, son of David Francis Vandervoort and his wife, Mary Elizabeth Blakely. He resided at Gilead before moving to Wellington. He was a member of the United Church and of the Masonic Order. He served as a councillor on the village council.

Survivors are three sisters, Mrs. Estella G. Chisholm of Stirling, Mrs. Walter Hubbs of Cedar Springs, Ont., Mrs. Adrian Hall of Cupar, Sask. His wife, Edith (Noxon) Vandervoort, died July 12th, 1949, and a sister Mrs. Carman C. (Lela) Nix, also predeceased him.

Funeral service at his late residence was under Masonic auspices and was conducted by Rev. A. Poulter assisted by Rev. J. U. Robins on Monday, Feb. 18th. Entombment was in Glenwood vault, Picton. Pall bearers were George Dorland, Duncan McKenzie, Carl Bryant, Godfrey Upton, Arthur Archard, Percy Archard. There were many beautiful floral tributes.

Relatives and friends from Cedar Springs, Ont., Kingston, Trenton, Belleville, Stirling and Spavinaw, Oklahoma, were among those attending the funeral.

LATE CHARLES HERBERT BROOK

Funeral services for Charles Herbert Brook were held on Saturday from the chapel of the Belleville Burial Company with Rev. J. G. Hornsby conducting the service.

Bearers were Robert G. Brook, John H. Brook, Charles D. Brook, Joseph Brook, William Frodsham and Leslie Lennox.

Interment was in Belleville cemetery.

PAUL DAVID DeGENOVA

Paul David DeGenova, six-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Dominic DeGenova, 5 Starling St., died in Belleville General Hospital on Sunday following a brief illness.

The child, born in Belleville, is survived by two brothers, Raymond and Bruno, and one sister, Blanche.

Resting at the Belleville Burial company Funeral Home, the funeral announcement appears elsewhere in this edition.

MRS. ELIZABETH DORAN

Mrs. Elizabeth Doran, beloved wife of William Doran, 31 Grove Street passed away at her home on Saturday, March 1st following an illness of some time. She was in her 66th year.

Born in Belleville, Mrs. Doran resided here all her life. She was a member of St. Michael's Church and when health permitted was an active member of the Catholic Women's League; the Altar Society and the League of the Sacred Heart.

Surviving besides her husband are four sons, Thomas Gerald, Vincent Ford, and John William, all of Belleville and Charles Edward, of Toronto. Another son Arthur was killed in action while serving overseas. Also one daughter, the Rev. Mary Claire, St. Vincent de Paul Hospital, Brockville, Ont.; two sisters, Mrs. Walter F. Moore and Miss Stella M. Ford of Belleville, and one brother, Thomas Ford, of Sarnia and four grandchildren.

The funeral notice appears elsewhere in this edition.

Canadian Legion Branch Sponsoring Red Cross Drive in Tweed District

Tweed, enterprising village 25 miles north of the city is another busy spoke in the campaign wheel of the district Red Cross drive for funds on March 11th.

The Canadian Legion, quick to recognize the urgent need and cognizant of the outstanding humanitarian work being done by the Red Cross, immediately decided to assume the sponsorship of the village quota of the district drive.

Under the wing of the Tweed campaign committee will be the villages of Stoco, Thomasburg, Roslin and others in the immediate outlying district.

Quota is $1200

The quota for Tweed and district has been set at $1,200.00.

Members of the directorate are Messrs. Sam Curry, Norman Champagne, Carthagh Cassidy, Clarence Rashotte, William Countryman, Arthur Coyle, Arthur Courneyea, Raymond Langevin, Lloyd Udell, James Inkster, L. A. Taylor, B. Vance, R. D. Woolfrey and J. Windfield. Mr. J. A. Thompson is the treasurer.

Tweed, working in conjunction with the city and other centres of the Hastings, Prince Edward district will stage the "blitz" drive March 11th. Business sections of the communities will be canvassed during the morning while the house-to-house canvass will take place during the early evening.

No Stranger to Red Cross

Reports from all the centres in the district will be broadcast during the evening.

Tweed, like other district centres has an enviable record for stretching a helping hand to those who are in need. The Red Cross and its work are no strangers to the village and General Campaign Chairman Alan Sprague feels confident that when the final returns are made Tweed will hold its head high in pride.

LAMPORT GOES TO OTTAWA

Toronto, March 3 — (CP) — Mayor Allan Lamport will fly to Ottawa tonight to confer with Labor Minister Gregg on Toronto's growing employment problem.

"I'm not satisfied that everything possible is being done," the mayor said as he prepared for the trip.

Families Pay Surprise Visit To Newly Weds

Two-family tribute was paid to Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Ashley, well-known residents of West Huntingdon at their home the other evening, when they were presented with a handsome floor rug.

Mr. Ashley and Mrs. Ashley, the former Mrs. Will Benson, were married a short time ago, and the presentation came as a complete surprise from the members of their respective families.

It all started when one of the members of Mr. Ashley's family "dropped in" and enticed the elderly couple to a back room of the house.

When they returned to the living room they gasped in surprise. On the floor lay a beautiful rug. In the room smiling happily were their children. Refreshment baskets were also evident.

Then followed a happy evening of social amenities. Mr. and Mrs. Ashley thanked their "uninvited guests" for the lovely gift with a cordial invitation to "come again".

Mr. Ashley is a life-long resident of West Huntingdon. He resides on the farm on which he was born. He has been a farmer all his life and for the past 25 years has operated a store and acted as postmaster for West Huntingdon.

Mrs. Ashley is also a well-known resident of West Huntingdon and previous to her marriage resided a short distance from her present home.

SUSPICION AROUSED

Toronto, March 3 (CP)—Robert Hefferman and Martin Marlowe, 18-year-old Cape Vincent, N.Y., youths arrested in Barrie, Ont., Feb. 16 and charged with car theft, were convicted last week. They were given suspended sentence.

Police said the youths offered a Barrie used-car dealer a 1951 car for $1,000. The price aroused the suspicion of the dealer, who called police.

IN MEMORIAM

LATTA. — In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Mariam Latta, who passed away March 2nd, 1943.

We do not forget her, we love her too dearly
For her memory to fade from our lives like a dream;
Our lips need not speak when our hearts mourn sincerely,

—Ever remembered by her son and daughters. M3

COLLINS. — In loving memory of our dear mother, Ethel Pearl Collins, who passed away March 3, 1946.

Days of sadness still come o'er us,
Tears in silence often flow,
For memory keeps you ever near us,
Though you died six years ago.

—Lovingly remembered and sadly missed by daughters Dreatha and Ethel, sons-in-law Thomas and Merritt. M3

COLLINS. — In loving memory of our dear wife and mother, Ethel Pearl Collins, who passed away March 3, 1946.

If I had all the world to give,
I'd give it, yes, and more,
To hear her voice and see her smile
And greet her at my door,
But all I can do, dear mother,
Is go and tend your grave
And leave behind tokens of love
To the best mother God ever made.
I like to think when life is done
Wherever heaven may be
That she'll be standing at the door
Up there to welcome me.

—Lovingly remembered by Herb, son Ralph and daughter-in-law Ruby. M3

GRILLS. — In loving memory of dear wife and mother, A. Aldene Grills, who passed away March 2nd 1951.

She is gone, but not forgotten
And, as dawns another year
In our lonely hours of thinking
Thoughts of her are always near.

—Ever remembered, husband Walker, daughter Doris, son-in-law Sam and Grandson David. M3

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, March 3 — (CP)—Ontario stockyard cattle trade was dull today with a few sales on choice steers, 50 cents to $1 above last weeks low level. Receipts: — cattle 140; calves 30; hogs 200; sheep and lambs 40. The leftover from last week was 1,100 cattle.

Good to choice weighty steers sold at $26-$27 with a few selling at $28.50. Medium to good heifers brought from $25-$26.25. Medium to good cows were at $16-$19. A few choice fed yearlings sold mostly $26-$28.

Hog prices were not established.

Good heavy lambs sold at $30. with common lambs downward to $20. There were no sheep sales reported.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, March 3 (CP)—Prices drifted irregularly today in early afternoon stock market dealings as support turned mixed.

Early trading was bisk but activity slowed as the session progressed. Industrial dealings were confined mainly to leading issues but a wide list of golds and western oils showed activity. Volume for the first three hours was 1,687,000 shares.

Steels formed industrials' strongest section while agricultures, constructions and retail stores drew firm support. Papers and textiles weakened.

Western oils posted a majority of declines. Losses ranged from pennies to about 25 cents as Calnorth, Calmont, Fargo, Federated Petroleum, Jupiter, Model Oil, North Canadian, Trans Empire and Triad traded lower.

Base metals were mixed. Anacon Lead, East Sulyivan, Golden Manitou, Quebec Manitou and Silver Miller strengthened while Barvue Consolidated Smelters, Hudson Bay, International Nickel and Labrador weakened.

Senior golds were firm. Giant Yellowknife, Lake Shore and McIntyre pushed upward. Secondary issues, however, made little headway.

News of Trenton

Trenton's Engineer Riga Asks Incentive Plan for Laborers; Couch Says Costs Too High

Trenton, (Special.)—Town Engineer A. Riga asked council on Friday night to consider an incentive plan to meet the request of town employees for a raise in pay. Mr. Riga felt that if the harder workers were paid a 20 cent an hour increase down the line to 5 cents a hour to the man not working as hard the town foreman would find discipline and results better. He said he found that the same system worked satisfactorily in European countries.

A raise of 10 cents an hour right across the board was suggested for 18 laborers employed by the town.

Mayor Ken Couch claimed labor was costing the town too much money and asked: "What can we do to correct the situation?"

Records tabled by town clerk O. W. Larry showed that the town paid out $47,000 for labor last year. "Big jobs such as sidewalk building were not shown in the statement," according to Mr. Larry.

"Stand and Shirk"

Mayor Couch talked about the laborers who seemed to stand around and shirk: He observed: "Pay the fellow who is worth it and fire the fellow who is not."

Engineer Riga was of the opinion that another foreman added to the present labor strength would give the town a more efficient works department. He asked council for an appropriation of $17.10 per hour for a gang not exceeding the maximum of 20 men to man the public works department this year.

Councillor Ross Burtt, chairman of public works, corrected clerk Larry, pointing out that charges for tractors and trucks had been included in the labor allotment. Mr. Burtt wanted to see the laborers get a raise since firemen, police and town office employees had received one.

Will Give Grant

Council was agreeable to grant the Parks Board one mill on the tax rate, or $8,097, for spending on park maintenance and improvement for the year. In 1951 the board spent $6,000. Commenting of board secretary O. G. Alyea's request for the total amount called for in the statutes. Mayor Couch said: "In view of what they have ahead of them I would be in favor of approving the full amount."

The clerk-treasurer was asked to work out a contest among public and separate school children to suggest names for at least ten streets. A committee investigated street names and decided a number had conflicting names and that others did not lend themselves to the betterment of the town.

Council would not say whether it was prepared to spent $2,000 to rewire the town bridge, but Mayor Couch took it upon himself to find out if the responsibility was that of the public utilities commission or the council. Complaints about inadequate lighting on the bridge face councillors at nearly every meeting.

Car Crash Hurts Wesley Bardy Near Trenton

Trenton. (Special.) — Wesley Bardy, 20, 272 Charleton Street, Hamilton, suffered a broken leg in two places, bruises and shock in a crash which demolished his car four miles west of Trenton early this morning. Carmen Marsh, 19, also of Hamilton, a passenger, escaped with a shaking.

It is understood that Bardy dozed at the wheel as he was driving to see his grandmother in Trenton. The car struck a culvert west of Bert's place on highway No. 2 and rolled into a frozen creek. It came to a stop with its wheels in the air.

Hospital superintendent Cora E. Droppo described Bardy's condition as very good.

Power Cut Off, Trenton Chilly

Trenton—Special—Power was off four hours and 20 minutes yesterday afternoon and by the time it was turned back on residents who depended on electricity to operate furnaces noticed their homes were chilly.

During the shut-off linemen installed a new line between No. 2 powerhouse on the Trent River and a north Murray Street connection. A second line will be hooked up next Sunday, but according to an utilities official another cutoff in power is not necessary.

The two new lines besides replacing an outdated line will provide stronger services.

Trenton Plans New Bus Station

Trenton—(Special)—Trenton is going to have a new modern bus terminal to take the place of the present one on King Street alongside the market square.

On Friday night council passed a resolution authorizing terminal manager Norman Rickett to erect a suitable bus terminal on the site where the one now in use stands. Mr. Rickett will rent the land from the town by yearly payments. Construction is planned for the spring, subject to the approval of the architects drawing.

A new terminal has been needed for years and will do much to enhance the beauty of the whole downtown area. Manager Rickett started at the terminal as manager in 1948.

Cost of building was not discussed, but last year a proposed $30,000 terminal met favor with council.

Trenton (Special)—Dr. J. W. Farley was chosen chairman of the Trenton Parks Board for the next year along with secretary-treasurer O. G. "Buster" Alyea. Other members of the board are: Mayor Ken J. Couch, Mrs. Eva Wilkins, Helen Sutcliffe.

Country Club Holds Big Fiesta

Trenton (Special)— The box social sponsored by the Trenton Country Club on Friday night attracted many members.

There was dancing both round and square and those in attendance were dressed appropriately for the occasion.

Auctioneer Howard Hanton of Belleville provided entertainment besides raising nearly $70 in sale of boxes to the highest bidder.

Six Business Premises Entered During Weekend

Six business premises in the city were entered during the week end with small amounts of cash reported missing in three of the cases.

Businesses entered included Moore Coal and Wood yard office on Newbury Street; the City Cleaners; Smith's Service Station on Dundas, East; Sharland's Service Station on Dundas, East; Campbell's Paint Shop on Pinnacle Street and Reid Dairy.

Small amounts of cash were reported taken from Reid's Dairy, and from the two service stations.

Police are confident that all the break-ins were the work of one person as the method of entry was similar in each instance.

Eden May Be Commissioned In Canadian Army

Ottawa, March 3 — (CP) — Nicholas Eden, son of British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, may be commissioned in the Canadian army when he becomes an aide-de-camp to the Governor - General, Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey, shortly.

The defence department said yesterday that the question is under consideration.

The 20-year-old Nicholas is due in Canada in about two weeks, Government House reported.

The proposal under consideration is that Nicholas be commissioned in one of Canada's reserve regiments and then called out on active duty for a year or two during his period as an aide at Government House.

Cost-of-Living For January Out Tuesday

Ottawa, March 3—(CP)—Canadians will know Tuesday, if they don't know now, whether it cost them more or less to live in January. This is the day the Dominion Bureau of Statistics releases its official cost-of-living index.

At this time last month, Canadians learned that the cost-of-living index hit its highest point in history at Jan. 2. The jump of two-fifth of a point was sparked then by small price increases for meats, vegetables, dairy products, coal and a number of other items.

At Jan. 2, the index stood at 191.5 compared with 191.1 at Dec. 1. The index is based on 1935-39 prices equalling 100.

The increases out-weighed small declines for eggs, fats and women's wear. They wiped out the drop of one-tenth of a point registered at Dec. 1 from the previous record high of 191.2 in November.

Wholesale prices continued to drop with the bureau's wholesale price index registering 283.8 at Jan. 4 from 284.2 at Dec. 28 and 279.3 at Jan. 26.

An increase in food prices during December pushed the sub-index on foods seven-tenths of a point higher at 250.0, a near record. Fuel and light sub-index jumped two-fifth of a point to a peak of 151.2 from 150.8, mostly because of higher coal prices in a number of western cities.

Home furnishings and other miscellaneous items also were up half a point to a high of 201.1 from 200.6.

The clothing group declined following lower women's wear prices which offset an increase in the price of men's work boots and wool piece goods. The sub-index was one-fifth of a point down at 215.3 from its peak of 215.5.

Million Dollar Fire

Arichat, N. S., March 3 (CP)—Damage was unofficially estimated at $1,000,000 today in a fire that destroyed a large part of a new fish plant at nearby Petit de Grat, owned by Booth Fisheries Company Limited, with parent headquarters in Chicago.

Telephone lines to Petit de Grat were cut by weekend storms but according to information available here only the freezer and power house were left standing following the outbreak.

Value of the plant, under construction for a year, was placed at $1,500,000. It was in incomplete operation.

The plant was of major importance in the economic life of this fishing area.

MADOC

Madoc.—Preaching in St. John's Church, Madoc, at Holy Communion Service Sunday morning, the rector, Rev. T. H. Good, told his congregation that last Sunday as he was requested to do, he announced the services which Dr. Cliffe, of Montreal, was conducting in Belleville.

"I told you that time," said Mr. Good, "that personally I knew nothing about Dr. Cliffe and that which I was telling you was entirely hearsay.

"But now that I have heard him I can tell you that the things he makes so much capital out of happen, as some of you know, here almost every week in Madoc.

"I understand Dr. Cliffe is shortly coming to the district again. If any of you want to know the date or time I shall be glad to let you know, but you have heard the last of Dr. Cliffe from this pulpit."

A DANGEROUS MAN

Officers of the federal department of agriculture and of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police have publicly expressed the opinion that the virus which caused the outbreak of foot and mouth disease among the cattle of southern Saskatchewan was brought to Canada from Europe by a Displaced Person from Germany named Willi Bruntjen.

If the R.C.M.P. and the federal department of agriculture are right when they say that Willi is responsible for introducing the foot and mouth virus into Canada, whoever is responsible for his presence here should be called upon to do some explaining. Hundreds of cattle have already been rounded up for slaughter. They must be paid for by the federal treasury. How many more must be slaughtered and paid for is not yet known, and may not be for months. But the sum involved in these slaughterings is trivial compared to the loss of Canada's market in the United States for cattle, sheep and hogs, as well as the meat from these animals. The American import ban also applies to hay, straw and various other materials exported from Canada. Some idea of the sums of money which Canada will lose if the American import ban remains effective for even a few months is provided by the fact that Canada sold to the United States beef cattle alone valued at $130,000,000 during 1951. Although Canada has already urged the United States to modify this ban, there is no certainty that any such action will be taken soon. Indeed, the ban may remain in effect for years. A similar ban which the Americans placed upon Mexican cattle in 1946 following an outbreak of foot and mouth disease in Mexico is still in effect.

If any further proof was needed that some stricter check should be made upon who and what is coming into this country from abroad, Willi has provided it. If the R.C.M.P. and the officials of the federal department of agriculture are right in their contention that Willi brought the foot and mouth disease virus to Canada, Willi has already wrought more damage to this country's economy than the dropping of a couple of atom bombs.

THE REAL CAUSES

It is being noted that Canada at the present time shows a peculiar condition in which both employment and unemployment are increasing. In some lines employers are struggling to find new workers, while in other lines workers are being laid off.

To some extent this sort of thing is inevitable in any country at any time. As a nation progresses some forms of employment will increase, while others decrease.

Then, at this minute there is a definite attempt being made to divert considerable quantities of the nation's resources to re-armament. The basic national resource is labor, so that any change in the type of national production must involve a change in occupation for many workers.

Finally, there is a definite likelihood of increasing unemployment, if the campaign of organized labor to convince Canadian consumers that prices are too high continues to be successful. Naturally, those who believe this story are inclined to save their money, and sit out of the market waiting for lower prices. If organized labor at the same time refuses to take wage cuts, which would be the only way of bringing prices down to any extent, unemployment goes up.

Some careless thinkers are arguing that it is immigration which is creating unemployment, but that is obviously incorrect. This is a growing country. Employment in it is not stationary. As the population of the country grows so does the demand for goods and services increase. The immigrant is a consumer as well as a producer. As a matter of fact, employment has always been more general at the times when immigration was most active and unemployment most common when immigration was at its low points.

Present causes of unemployment have nothing to do with immigration. They result from a deliberate attempt of the government to force Canadians out of other employment and into re-armament, perhaps faster than the re-armament industries will take them up, and from that difference of opinion between buyers and sellers about prices which is always the real cause of unemployment.

A TREAT COMING

There is a treat in store for the members of Canada's 27th Brigade, now serving in Germany. A press release sent out by the Department of National Defence says:

"Breakfast (for the members of the 27th Brigade) will be just like it was at home in one respect at least. While munching their breakfast cereal, the troops will be treated to a ten-minute C.B.C. broadcast of Canadian domestic and sports news."

We will all unite in hoping that the men of the 27th Brigade enjoy the treat that is being prepared for them and that they show due appreciation for it.

MARCH

Month of sunny sky and cloud,
Blend of hope and promise broken,
Glimpse of bud and leaf allowed,
Merely of the spring a token.

Robins nesting near once more,
Tulips tempted into growing.
Then again the north wind's roar,
Middle March and it is snowing!

Winter is a graybeard king.
Notwithstanding icy fingers
On the lap of lovely spring
Though it's time to go he lingers.

Glad to welcome March I am.
Time of every sort of weather
When the lion and the lamb
Seem to get along together.

Sap is running from the maple trees in the city and district, but we are informed that the farmers are doing very little about it; they claim that the inconsistency of the past season will cause a very poor grade of sap, and that the quality of the sugar made from it will not compensate them for the time and trouble of boiling down the sap. Other farmers state they will wait and see; there may be colder weather and good sap.

Yesterday a large body of ice came down the river from the vicinity of Lazier's mill and was stopped in the channel opposite Church Street and Mill Street: it is still holding today. The ice from near Cooper's mill to the footbridge broke this afternoon and passed down as far as lower bridge. Unless the ice up the river comes down suddenly there seems to be no danger of a flood. The ice in the bay is still solid and heavy loads are being hauled upon it across the bay.

THE NEW BANKS

Was re-reading Stephen Leacock the other night, worshipping at the shrine, when I came across his familiar essay on banks and realized that somehow it was no longer quite as hilarious as it used to be.

Leacock's humor is well nigh imperishable. Whatever "well nigh" might mean. But the truth is that banks, like most everything else, have changed.

It is no longer a comic idea, as it was in Leacock's time, to be terrified in the First National. The First National has prettied itself up, put some perfume behind its ear and wants earnestly to be loved.

This has happened, as I propose to illuminate, within the last couple of decades.

I can well recall, myself, the horrors of opening my first account in a gloomy mausoleum where stern and suspicious old men in high stiff collars prowled behind bars. I had the strong feeling that opening an account in that place with a grubby $10 was like asking Bethlehem Steel to forge a bobby pin.

The whole atmosphere, whether accidental or contrived, had the effect of overwhelming the customer with the extreme respectability and staggering riches of the establishment. They cut you down at the door to the tomb with a sign announcing assets of $90,000,000,000 and from there on you felt like one of Singer's Midgets.

There were times when a great many citizens just naturally kept their money in old cookie jars.

My own bank—and I say "My" because the bank encourages that and I like to humor them—my own bank, as I say, is as cheerful and bright as a florist shop. The walls are all a pastel green, like antiqued bank notes, and there are only itsy-bitsy bars to keep up the tradition.

Lord knows what happened to the hostile old men in the celluloid collars. All retired to stud at the mint, perhaps. In any event, their place has been taken by a large number of young ladies who, like airline stewardesses, combine efficiency with charm.

"Here is five dollars for my account" you say, "and I love you."

The managers themselves are, more and more, young and amiable men who sing out a cheerful good morning and look so obviously available that it is all you can do to refrain from leaping into their laps and blurting out your troubles or having a good cry.

The most astonishing change of all, however, is in the attitude that banks are taking these days to money.

At "my" bank — hello, there, bank!—there are a large number of cards and pamphlets placed at strategic points to remind you that all sorts of perfectly dandy things can be done with money.

Half of these cards urge you to save. The other half urge you to cart a little of the product away. There are no free samples, mind you but the idea is made very clear that they have a lot of the stuff lying around in the vaults and, after all, somebody ought to be using it.

Only the other day I got a little note from my bank to tell me my account was overdrawn. I forget the exact wording, but the import of the note was soothing. "Now don't you fret about this," it seemed to say. "This is just a little reminder, just a little silly bookkeeping we like to do around the shop. After all, it's only money.

This careless—or light-hearted—approach to money was dramatized by an American bank manager who put out some bowls filled with coins on an unguarded counter so that customers might make their own change. (Much to everybody's astonishment, the bank lost no money.)

This particular manager, in an interview, gave a pretty good idea of why banking has changed.

"It got so banks were identified only with aristocrats and capitalists," he said. "Well, there aren't any aristocrats any more and the capitalists have been pretty well shaved down. A bank these days has to be a department store of money."

Well, I suppose that's stretching it a bit. You can't get a bundle of $10 bills any cheaper in the basement and I've yet to see a clearance sale of overstocked twentys.

But the spirit is there and Stephen Leacock himself would feel no more alarm entering a bank than he would entering a service station.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

THE JOYFUL BELIEVER

Charles Templeton, the youthful evangelist who is creating such an impression by his straightforward preaching, tells the following amusing story to illustrate the fundamental soundness of joy in religion.

It seems that during World War II, someone in this country wrote a letter to a relative in Great Britain. Wishing to encourage the recipient of the letter to bear up under difficulties, the letter writer, after sealing his envelopes wrote across the back, "Be of good cheer." The letter of course had to pass through the hands of censors. Nothing but the address was supposed to appear on the envelope. When the letter was finally received, the exhortation to good cheer had been deleted by the censor's rubber stamp and over the words "Be of good cheer" had been stamped "Contrary to regulations."

Some people's Christianity just won't let them smile. The reason for this of course is that these overserious people have missed a thing which is absolutely central in the whole gospel message, namely, that the life of a true believer is always characterized by great joy. A long-faced Christian gives rise to a serious contradiction in terms. If he is a Christian he can't be long-faced; if he is long-faced, he can't be a Christian.

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

OUR OUTDOOR WORLD

Every child, early in life, should be taught a reverence for life, be its object a flower, bird, tree, or human being. Nothing in this world has been created without a purpose for its existence.

Never has this thought come to me in greater force than while reading that recently published book, "The Animal World of Albert Schweitzer." His love of animals, and all growing, living things, I believe, must be unique. Even this book is dedicated to "Monsieur Le Pelican." In his African jungle home, where all about him are animals, birds, and reptiles of almost every variety known to the jungle, he speaks of himself as a "guest" of these creatures in their own world.

How very strange would our outdoor world be without its inhabitants of birds, animals and flowers. No one has ever listened to God's whisper, so as to get its full significance, until that one has spent a day in the forest. Preferably alone. I can never look upon a beautiful tree without feeling akin to it. It has so many human characteristics.

There is so much in the outdoor world that is interesting, inspiring, and revealing that no matter how much you may learn from it you will never learn it all. Nor will anyone, for its amazing beauties and secrets are inexhaustible. Every bird, animal, insect, or object has a different and fascinating story to tell.

I now never pass along the shore of the Bay of Fundy without remembering that I have read that 100 billion tons of the sea are pushed into the Bay twice every day of the year! It accounts for the highest rise of the tide in all the world—40 to 50 feet, near Windsor and the Minas Basin. Nature is saturated with spectacles of wonder.

But it is the living, moving life in nature that is so absorbing. Our great naturalists are our benefactors, for from them we learn how and where and why to look. And we can speculate upon it all as we choose. It is in the outdoor world that we may learn best to worship God and best how to live.

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Signed Letters, Not More Than One Page, or 100 Words Long, Pertaining to Personal Health and Hygiene, Not to Disease, Diagnosis or Treatment, Will be Answered by Dr. Brady if a Stamped, Self-Addressed Envelope is Enclosed, Etc.

OLD ONE HORSE STILL BREATHES

A young mother writes from up north:

I have a number of your pamphlets and read your column daily, in spite of (or because of) the fact that I was a medical secretary for ten years.

Whether you are a myth, or dead, as some have stated, I enjoy your comments and sensible advice and wish the medical profession in general was more open-minded about drafts, colds and tonsillectomies.

My children rarely had a cold ... C-R-I, if you please, Ma'am, C-R-I. Pronounced kree. If you don't know precisely what it means, it will do you and your children no harm to learn more about it, by reading the booklet Call It C-R-I, for which send 25c and stamped, self-addressed envelope. If you conclude after reading it that the booklet is not worth the price just send it back with a brief explanation and I'll reimburse you.

... before starting to school, because I could snatch them up and run whenever anyone with sniffles approached. Now, since children are not sent home for "just a cold" by the teachers or school nurse, it seems to be just one (censored word) after another.

It's really too bad, Ma'am that your education was so sadly neglected. I hope it was not because of my half column, paragraph, stickful — what part of it was printed — that your boss refused to have the paper in his office.

I'm glad you learned at least about the cough and sneeze hazard. But that is not nearly so important as the polite quiet conversation hazard. The spray of moisture droplets which shoots forth from mouth during quiet conversation carries less than five feet, as compared with the ten or twelve foot range of sneeze or cough spray. The droplets are not so visible or palpable as the droplets of sneeze or cough spray, but they are there just the same and just as likely to carry whatever the speaker may be coming down with. Remember, it is in the first few hours of the C-R-I, whether it proves to be simple coryza or measles or meningitis, that the infection is most likely to spread. For this reason, if the local health and education authorities are not strictly 19th century style, any sign or symptom of "just a cold" in teacher or pupil warrants exclusion of the victim or culprit from school until the danger of epidemic is past. In some communities it is still the practice of school and health authorities to discourage parents from keeping children out of school for "just a cold." These irresponsible authorities are more concerned about maintaining a high attendance record (which often brings a larger apportionment of state money) than they are about the welfare and safety of school children. That policy is accountable for a good many epidemics of measles, scarlet fever, diptheria and other respiratory infections that may pass as "just a cold" at the beginning.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Fair Prices

Do you really mean that $150. would be a fair price for ambulant treatment of piles? Dr...... estimated that hospital treatment would cost me $250. But Dr..... gave me the ambulant treatment with complete success for just $55. (M.O.)

Answer—Don't forget that you lose two weeks' pay while hospitalized for operation, but no absence from work while receiving ambulant (office, injection) treatment. Most victims of the hospital operation suffer a good deal of pain and discomfort in the days after the operation, whereas the injection treatment is usually painless.

No, the Old Quack Is Still Breathing

Can you tell me, a Connecticut lady asks National Newspaper Syndicate, whether Dr. William Brady is dead? (Mrs. S. J. W.)

Answer—N.N.S. refers your inquiry to me, Ma'am. I imagine I'm still breathing, but then, if I were dead I wouldn't know it, would I?

How to Gain Weight

I would like to put on about 15 pounds, please. Send your instructions.... (Mrs. D. C. Jr.)

Answer — Send stamped, self-addressed envelope and ask for pamphlet HOW TO GAIN WEIGHT.

But It Is Undignified

Even if it is undignified, I think you have saving sense of humor which is worth more than medicine... (H. B. E.)

Answer—You do not seem undignified to me.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Driving into the city today from my semi-suburban home, I got the curious impression that I was part of a big construction job. I was in a procession of trucks, lorries, giant trailer-tractor vehicles, vans, panel trucks.

It was, of course, just the normal daily city traffic: but I was experiencing a fairly familiar impression that comes to all who drive their cars either in city traffic or on the highways. And that is — there has been a startling increase in very recent years in the proportion of commercial traffic everywhere. The fact is, we are indeed all part of a big construction job. The job is Canada. Our country is being industrialized at a rate few of us have yet fully grasped.

Ontario figures may be a little out of proportion to the country as a whole; but they are a graphic statement of the situation. In 1951, there were 1,204,967 motor vehicles licensed in that province. That is better than one vehicle to every four of the population, man, woman and child. Of that number, 221,245 were commercial vehicles. It was an increase in commercial vehicles over the previous year of 22,057, or 11%.

So it is no illusion that trucks are increasing around us like a blizzard. Ten years ago, for 1941, Ontario registered 739,174 vehicles, of which 95,022 were commercial. Therefore, while motor vehicles as a whole increased only around 60% for the past ten years, the increase in commercial vehicles has been well over 100%; the latest jump being 11%.

It is a whopper of a problem. And the next time we get caught in one of those snarls of trucks in traffic, let us think of governments, and their complex responsibility with regard to maintaining the highways in the face of such burdens; and the more delicate question of who and how to charge the bill to.

CAMPBELLFORD

George McLaughlin Addresses Rotary Luncheon Meeting

Campbellford — George McLaughlin, of Oshawa, was the guest speaker at the Monday noon luncheon meeting of the local Rotary Club.

Mr. McLaughlin said, "the farmer is the only man who buys in the retail and sells in the wholesale markets. He is the last man to get the advantages of rising prices, and in some cases, also the first. The middleman takes his profit regardless of rising or falling prices."

The farmer, said the speaker, is, to a great degree, himself responsible for this situation. In making a profit there are three fundamental factors to consider —price, quantity and cost.

The farmer, regardless of long-run conditions, was prone to jump into the production of a commodity because of the high prices prevailing. If enough farmers do this, high prices were automatically lowered and no one but the farmer is to blame.

Does Too Much

Often too anxious to spread out, the farmer tries to do many things instead of doing a few things well. Mr. McLaughlin said that there would be better quality commodities produced if the farmer was interested in taking one product all the way from the production through to the consumption stage. Planned production, along correct lines and according to the suitability of the land itself, and an interest in the distribution angle of farm products, would improve both the price and the quality, said Mr. McLaughlin.

He suggested that if the farmers of Canada do not do more than the half job they are doing at the present time, the masses of Europe and Asia would sooner or later try to do it for them. An international marketing board would do away with all problems of surpluses and be a great factor for peace, said the speaker.

THOMASBURG

Thomasburg—It was with regret the many friends of Mr. Harry Redcliffe, of Fuller, learned of his painful accident last Friday, from a falling tree, while working in the woods, he suffered severe injuries and a broken ankle. All join in best wishes for his recovery.

DESERONTO

Hobby Club Plans For Coming Fair

Deseronto—A most successful and enthusiastic meeting of the Hobby Club was held at the home of Mrs. D. F. Weber on Tuesday evening.

A number of former members as well as several newcomers were welcomed. One of these meetings should be seen as well as heard to be appreciated. The sight of from 15 to 20 women, all actively engaged in working on various projects, while at the same time suggestions, advice, hints, ideas, criticism, constructive and instructions of all sorts are being given, vocally, is something both to see and hear.

Hobby-Homemakers Fair

This week marked the beginning of the planning for the Hobby and Homemakers Fair which climaxes the season's activities. This has been an annual event for the past four years and the members are determined to carry on as in the past and make this year's fair bigger and better than any of the previous ones.

There is still time for anyone interested in this type of work, and this includes everything from sewing on a button to building a house, to join the club and both give and receive help to develop the hobby.

The meeting next Tuesday evening will be at the home of Mrs. Newton Thomas.

Refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistants at the close of the meeting.

CENTENARY

Community Presents Neighbor With Gift

Centenary — A number of the ladies of the community called on Mrs. John Lawrenson, Belleville, on Tuesday afternoon to present her, on behalf of the community with a gift of an occasional rocking chair for helpfulness while she resided here.

Doris helped in any way she could in both W. M. S. and W. A. work and she will be greatly missed.

RAWDON

Carmel W. A. Sponsors 3-Act Play

Rawdon—On Tuesday evening a good crowd of people gathered at Carmel Jubilee Hall for a pie social under the auspices of Carmel W.A.

A three-act comedy play was given by talent from Pethericks-Zion, with Mrs. Lindsay Anderson as director.

Cast of Play

The cast of, "Aunt Bessie Beats the Band," was as follows: — Aunt Bonnie, the housekeeper — Marjory Brick; May Ketchum, a hopeful spinster — Harriet Fry; Alice Morley, who has loved and lost—Fern Linsey.

These three ladies set out to get a man somehow and finally they achieved their purpose.

Hesekiah Hawkeye, a lawyer and a woman hater—Rev. Gordon Whitehorn; he found himself in various predicaments but the sound of much money induced him to marry, after which he paid the bills; Simon Trotter, the man of all work — Gerald Fry; His hayfever was a great handicap but he eventually cured that disease and won a lottery so he could marry the girl of his choice. Betsy Blotter, the maid—Joyce Barnum; Paul Vernon, a tramp and a victim of several queer circumstances— Bill Petherick; Frederick Frost, a very disappointed man— Claire Irvin;

The first two scenes were morning in early spring with one girl following the other, when the man of all work collapsed following a proposal.

Act III took place several months later and in this scene all the tangles were unravelled and love prevailed and there was happiness ever after.

Mrs. Ross Hart welcomed the guests from Stirling, Mount Pleasant, Frankford, Wellman's and other forts and presided over the program between acts.

At the close she voiced appreciation to the cast.

Various Numberss

Mrs. Arthur Pyear provided fine music while the folks were gathering, Messrs. Sherwin Reid and Ernie Woods contributed music, piano and harmonica, between acts and during the refreshments. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brown, sang "I Loved You As I've Never Loved Before," with their daughter, Miss Verna Brown as accompanist.

The Ladies of Carmel provided an abundance of sandwiches and pie. The bevy of waiters were so organized that every row of people was served sandwiches and pickles simultaneously and with a minimum of confusion the large group were served an abundance of pie.

Thanks Tendered

Mr. Lindsay Anderson extended thanks to Carmel ladies for the feast and thanks to the audience for their excellent appreciation of the various jobs throughout the play.

OUT-OF-TOWN PERSONALS

Mr. Robert Cochrane, of Trenton, was a weekend guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Cochrane of Deseronto.

Mrs. E. Rodgers, Oldest Resident Of Madoc, is 95

Ninety-five-years old and still able to read without glasses is the proud boast of Mrs. Elizabeth Rodgers, believed to be the oldest resident of Madoc Village.

On her 95th birthday which she observed recently Mrs. Rodgers assisted her daughter-in-law to "tie in" a quilt. She still does the odd chore around the house and walks down town to cash her monthly old age pension cheque.

Born in London, England, she came to Canada when only nine years of age and has lived since in Madoc area. She has been married three times and on each occasion her married name was Rodgers. Her last husband, John Rodgers, died ten years ago.

A corncob pipe is now Mrs. Rodgers' close companion. "I could not live without my pipe," she says.

She took up smoking many years ago on the advice of her doctor for the relief of asthma. She had 13 children, five of whom are still living.

Mrs. G. Burkitt Gives Address On 'Aims of Women's Institute'

Pine Grove Women's Institute met for their February meeting at the home of Mrs. L. Finkle with 15 members and several visitors in attendance.

Mrs. B. Johnston presided and after opening the meeting asked that the members observe two minutes' silence in memory of the late King George VI.

Correspondence included a letter from Mrs. R. G. Purcell, provincial president regarding the officers' conference at the O.A.C. Guelph, on April 30, May 1st and 2nd.

Members were reminded of "Parents' Night" to be held in Marsh Hill School on March 13.

A social evening was planned for March 7, under the convenership of Mrs. F. Heasman, Mrs. A. Tanner and Mrs. C. Ross.

Mrs. H. Coulter took charge of the program.

Current Events included mention of Mr. Ralph Campbell's address at the Rotary luncheon in Belleville, recently. This was of particular interest to Pine Grove as his mother is a valued member.

Mrs. W. Rodgers prepared the current events.

Guest Speaker

Mrs. G. Burkitt, president of West Hastings' District was introduced by Mrs. F. Campbell, district convener of Historical Research and Current Events.

Mrs. Burkitt chose as her topic "The Aims of the Women's Institute" given under four heads:

"Our aim is to develop a more abundant life for the rural people of Ontario by first developing better homemakers. Let us be cheerful, and set a good example for our families. The training of our children should receive first consideration. Short courses pertaining to homemaking are available from the department for the asking. They are for everyone. True we are all busy, but we must assess the value of things and choose that which is best.

"Secondly, we aim to develop happier and more useful citizens. The world today is closely interlinked. We must develop tolerance toward other people. We should assimilate all the knowledge we can. International relations begin with ourselves. If we cannot do much to take part in our Women's Institute meeting we can at least answer the Roll Call, and show enthusiasm.

Quoting from a letter written by the president of the Federated Women's Institutes of Canada, Mrs. Burkitt said, "'We Build' the motto of Kiwanis International has always appealed to me. If Women's Institutes across Canada could incorporate the spirit of this motto with our own and so build a better and happier home life in each of our homes and as well build better soil on our farms, better communities, better citizens and stronger national and international links. We cannot do this through Women's Institute meetings that have been reduced to little more than a meeting for chit-chat and tea. Our meetings must have the vitality of study, discussion, and planned action. Above all do not hesitate to make your voice heard on behalf of those things that are right and just.

"Our third aim to stimulate and train leaders is carried out through our Homemaking Clubs and by our support of the Junior Farmers, and Junior Institutes.

"Lastly let us learn to appreciate things near at hand. It has been said, 'An expert is an ordinary man one hundred miles from home.' Let us support local things more. See that your Tweedsmuir Book is carefully preserved.

Good Citizen—Good W.I. Member

"To sum up: To be a good Institute member is to be a good citizen and to be a good citizen is the most important job that will ever confront you: but essentially, it is nothing more than being a good member of your community, helping those who need your help, striving for a sympathetic understanding of those who oppose you, doing each day's job a little better than the previous day's; placing the common good before personal profit. If the dignity and rights of your fellow men guide your daily conduct, you will be a good women's institute member."

Mrs. Coulter thanked Mrs. Burkitt for her interesting address.

After the meeting closed refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed.

Emphasis on Slenderness In Latest Spring Styles, Canadian Survey Shows

(By The Canadian Press)

The girl with the spreading waistline had better diet. Otherwise she won't be able to keep with the 1952 Easter parade styles.

The Canadian Press in a survey of the bib-and-tucker industry discovered that spring suits with "that nipped-in, rounded look" are all the rage this year.

But the short, full jackets may create more hips than style to figures already "rounded" by winter fat.

At Edmonton, fashion experts emphasized that spring suits will be more feminine in appearance than last year. There will be more detail in the sleeeves. And more bad news for hippy Hannah—suit skirts will be "very full."

Spring styles at Regina were described as "entirely new, gay and beautiful." Favorite colors with western women will be "shrimp," a new coral shade, and navy.

Shorter Skirts

Across Canada spring brides may foresake the traditional floor-touching gown of satin for a perky cocktail-length model of nylon net, one of Toronto's large department stores has the short wedding gown in a window display.

Montreal designers are accentuating button-holes with satin and braid. The leather belt is coming back on tweed suits. The long, fitting lines of the "princess-style" coat also has returned. Many of these garments are lined with bright material.

At Winnipeg, fashion-wise women are already wearing silk prints under blonde fur coats. As soon as the weather grows warmer those furs may be exchanged for white or near-white coats.

Those in the know say dress styles in Winnipeg are 'reminiscent of 1929." Dresses have adopted the "middy line," and newest box jackets taper toward the hipline.

Vancouver Trends

"Bat-wing" jackets, "windmill" jackets, "tucked dickies," and bow-ties will be trotted out for Vancouver's feminine trade.

In the Maritimes, milady will continue to wear the crinoline petticoat made popular last season. In Halifax, fashionable women will wear their dresses 13 inches from the ground.

In Newfoundland, the stores so far have displayed little Easter merchandise. However, it was learned that the new "coat" dresses featuring stiff rayon taffetas will continue to be popular.

Corduroy matched skirts and jackets in vivid shades of lilac, chartreuse and coral also are expected to attract buyers.

Finally, wherever she lives the little woman probably will buy a hat this year with "back interest." For the benefit of the uninitiated male, this means the most fashionable hats will depend only on the face for decoration at the front.

The back of the hat probably will have clusters of artificial flowers, fruit, veil—perhaps even a feather—to tickle you when she turns around.

Much of Bloodshed, Glory, Expansion Seen During Reigns of England's Queens

London (AP) — Days of most glorious empire and achievement, days of deepest tragedy and violence, have formed the times of England's queens.

Take any number from six to 10, and you can find some authority for just how many queens have ruled the distant isles since Anglo-Saxon times. But through all the changes of ruling houses, the civil conflicts and joustings for power, the lineage of today's Queen Elizabeth traces uninterruptedly back into the midst of Anglia before the Norman Conquest. (Egbert back in 802 A.D.)

The first was Boadicea, whose husband ruled in Norfolk when Nero ruled in Rome. After her husband's death, Boadicea roused the people against the Roman legions. When the invaders marshalled forces and finally conquered the provinces, Boadicea took poison.

The next early queen was Aethelflaed, oldest child of Alfred the Great and wife of the Earl of Mercia. Her brother Edward was king but Mercia remained semi-independent.

This was in the 10th. century. In the 12th. century, some-time Queen Matilda, daughter of Henri I emerged. Her marriage to Geoffrey Plantagenet brought that great family to the throne. First, however, Matilda was married to the German emperor-elect, Henry V, but when he died in 1125 she returned to England to take that throne over on her father's death.

The people were reluctant to have a woman ruler, didn't like her second husband, and chose her cousin Stephen to be king. Matilda captured Stephen and had herself proclaimed "Lady of England" or "Queen of England." Later she went off to Normandy, leaving her son, the future Henri II, to carry on against Stephen.

Nation in Turmoil

It wasn't until the 16th. century that ladies again reached for the sceptre.

The nation was in turmoil and both France and Spain were reaching for the prize when Henry VIII died. He had broken with the Roman Catholics, thrown his influence to the Anglican church, and caused all sorts of conflicting groups to organize. Henry's young son by his third wife, Jane Seymour, became Edward VI. The new ruler was persuaded by plotters headed by the Duke of Northumberland to name as his eventual successor Lady Jane Grey granddaughter of Henri VIII's sister. This was to thwart lusty Henry's chosen line of succession.

When Edward died in 1553, his death was kept secret for several days and Northumberland announced the 16-year-old Jane was queen.

Adherents of Mary, Henry's oldest child by his first wife, Catherine of Aragon, won popular support. Timid Jane quit willingly after a reign of nine days. A year later she was beheaded for treason.

The new queen, ill-starred Mary, was a lonely, friendless young woman whose first determination on being crowned was to restore Roman Catholicism. In three years, more than 300 Protestant leaders were burned at the stake, and she had won her place in history as "bloody Mary".

Elizabethan Age

She died childless and without naming a successor. The stage was set for Elizabeth, daughter of Henry's second wife, Ann Boyelyn, and the ensuing brilliance of the Elizabethan age.

Strife-torn England rejoiced when Elizabeth came to the throne in 1558 and applauded her proud boast that she was purely English.

Elizabeth never married, but made her availability a powerful weapon in dealing with foreign government. Her 44-year reign made England a world power.

It was 86 years later that England's next sovereign queen came to the throne. She was Mary Stuart, Protestant daughter of strongly Roman Catholic James II.

William, also a Stuart on his mother's side, was the conquering hero of his native Low Countries, when in 1688 he was invited to "secure the infringed liberties" of England. The British government agreed to have William and Mary as joint sovereigns. Her reign was one of comparative calm and no fireworks. The fact she was childless paved the way for her younger sister Anne to take the throne when William died. (He survived eight years).

Brilliant Period

Anne was a bit on the dull side, silent, unprepossessing and extremely stubborn. England flourished in her reign and it was a brilliant period. Paradoxically, unartistic Anne gave her name to a whole period of furnishings and design which is still apt to show up in the family living room.

It wasn't until more than a century later, in 1837, that another woman was enthroned and became one of the nation's greatest rulers. Her name was Victoria and she was the only child of Edward, Duke of Kent, who had married late in life for the sole purpose of producing an heir to the throne.

Victoria was 18 when she succeeded William IV. in 1837. Her marriage to the son of the Duke of Saxe-Cobourg was an extremely happy one, and as prince consort he was in every respect her partner in the onerous job of being queen.

During the longest of all British reigns, 63 years, she gave her name forever to a way of life while Britain became a world empire upon which the sun never set.

These are the ladies whose blood, abilities, power and influence now have passed to another sovereign queen, Elizabeth II, "queen of this realm and of her other realms and territories, head of the commonwealth, defender of the faith."

ST. ANDREW'S W.M.S.

Marmora—The regular monthly meeting of St. Andrew's W.M.S. was recently held at the home of Mrs. W. J. Pack with ten members in attendance. The president, Mrs. E. C. Prentice, presided.

The worship service was conducted by Mrs. G. D. Young with the members assisting.

Mrs. F. Sweet reported 12 strangers, 19 sick and three hospital patients had been visited. also that seven books and five monthlies had been read.

Mrs. C. Barlow offered to write a letter to Miss Florence Fee, in China.

The study period, dealing with the subject, The French Protestant in Quebec," which was presented by Mrs. Sproul, assisted by Mrs. E. C. Prentice and Mrs. Pack, proved interesting.

Mrs. T. Bateman thanked the members for the cards of sympathy sent her in her recent bereavement.

Mrs. R. Appleton expressed her thanks for the many cards and letters sent her while in hospital.

Refreshments were served by the hostess.

City Theatre Guild Awarded Fulford Shield for Best One-Act Play at Festival

Members of the Belleville Theatre Guild are in a triumphant mood today, as success crowned their first entry in the field of Drama League festivals. At Peterborough on Saturday afternoon, representatives of the Guild were awarded the Fulford Shield for the best one-act play entered in the Eastern Ontario Drama League Festival. Described by adjudicator Pierre LeFevre as "a near perfect presentation", their performance of "The Voice of the People", by Canadian playwright, Robertson Davies, took first place over five other entries, a result made all the more satisfying by the fact that the Guild has been in existence for less than a year.

The successful cast comprised Ted Schwab as the small town barber, Betty Barrie and Miriam Bishop as his wife and daughter and Horace Ward-Whate as the electrician with a mind of his own. The play was directed by Syd Rose with the assistance of Beryl Linnen. Joe Mackay acted as stage manager. An additional stimulus, if any were needed, was provided by the presence of the author in the audience; later in the day, the cast were able to meet Mr. Davies, who congratulated them on their performance.

During the five days of the festival from February 26th to March 1st, a total of 12 plays was presented, usually to capacity audiences, with over 4,000 tickets sold. The Festival can therefore be regarded as a great success financially as well as artistically. Its artistic success has been due in no small measure to the choice of M. Pierre LeFevre as adjudicator.

M. LeFevre, born in New York of French parentage, has had a distinguished career on the stage, mainly in London, where for several years he was with the famous Old Vic Company. During World War II, he fought in the French army, and after an exciting escape, joined the staff of the BBC, returning to the shores of France as a war correspondent on D-12, He has already acted as adjudicator at a number of regional drama festivals throughout Canada and on his report will depend which groups will be invited to take part in the Dominion Festival which provides a fitting climax to the work and efforts of all those striving to give Canada an amateur theatre worthy of her.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Planning to adopt a child?—Twin books that will help you

It's a well-known fact that there are many more people who would like to adopt children than there are children to go around. This situation is brought home to me every time I print in this column a letter from an unmarried girl who is about to have a child. For this invariably brings hosts of other letters from women who plead with me to put them in touch with the girl, in the hope that she might be persuaded to promise her unborn child to this one or that one.

To all such requests I always have to give the same answer, which is that it is never possible for me to make any such arrangement. There are strict laws dealing with adoption of children, and while it may seem as though it should be perfectly simple to bring together a girl who is going to have a baby she doesn't want and a woman who is eager for any baby, it is not legally permissible for anyone outside an authorized agency to do this.

The only proper way to go about adopting a child is to obtain the names and addresses of such authorized agencies and put in an application to the nearest one of them. From there on the agency takes over.

All this is by way of introduction to a set of two slim volumes which those who have been fortunate enough to find babies to adopt, and those who expect that good fortune to come to them some day soon, should go out to the nearest bookstore and buy for themselves. Packaged together, the twin books deal respectively with this matter of adoption from the viewpoint of both the adoptive parents and the adopted child.

You and Your Child

Both books are charmingly put together. Book One, for the parents, called "You and Your Child," has to do with every problem that confronts a couple about to adopt a baby. Lest prospective adoptive parents might think that once they have found a ready-made son or daughter, there is nothing more to do but take it home and go on from there, the book begins with considerable valuable material on how to prepare for adoptive parent hood which, the authors of the book say, should be done "just as any other couple does in the period of waiting for their child." For, they point out, "No parent automatically knows the details of caring for a child, what to expect in his development, or how to handle the various emergencies that can arise in daily living. All parents, biological and adoptive, must learn how to do the parent's daily job." Then follow specific suggestions that should clarify many questions which may—and should be — in the minds of the couples.

Information on the legal protections which should be secured by the parents who adopt a child come next, and various other preliminaries. How to announce the "blessed event" to friends; how to tell the child its true status in the family and how to answer all the questions he may ask about it and about his real parents; how to make the child feel secure and loved and happy, instead of insecure and "different" and confused. These are some of the vital matters carefully analyzed and developed in the book.

The second of the two volumes is a story book for the child himself, entitled, "The Family That Grew."

Colorful Book

This is a colorful little book in gray and pink, with illustrations to delight a small child: a picture of a baby in a playpen with his toys; of the baby in his high chair; in his bath with a toy sailboat, building block towers.

Then, as the book goes on to the growing child, he sees himself, in the illustrations, on his bike, in his swing, at the zoo with Mommy and Daddy, having a birthday party, with Mommy bringing in a cake with five candles. Best of all, the book tells how "every birthday, Daddy and Mommy thought again how glad they were that you were born and that they adopted you." Altogether, it is a tale that should both fascinate and reassure the child who has been "chosen" by his mother and father instead of having been born to them.

Both books are written by Florence Rondell and Ruth Michaels. The illustrations in the child's book are by Judith Epstein.

Cost of the two volumes together is $2.50. If you want them, please inquire at your local bookstore; do not write to this department.

Food for Thought

By Mary Moore

What Should Weekly Groceries Cost

Here's a poser:

"Dear Mary Moore: I read your column every day and enjoy it so much. I would appreciate it if you could tell me, based on today's cost of living, a reasonable amount of money to spend for groceries for four adults, two men doing heavy factory work, a daughter working in an office and myself. By the way, they all carry packed lunches. Also what is a fair price to charge my son and daughter for board. They both earn approximately fifty dollars per week. . . .Thanking you, Mrs. J. K.

Thank you, Mrs. J. K. very much—for the taken-for-granted attitude that I know the answer. Solomon would be hard put to answer that conundrum.

I will answer you though to the best of my knowledge based on what we eat, and as far as board is concerned, on what I know is being charged.

There are so many standards of eating, and appetites vary. One buyer and cook may stress meats which are expensive. Another may buy more than average amounts of fresh fruits and vegetables and milk, and, instead of roasts and chicken, utilize the cheaper cuts and minced meats and fish. Another busy cook might buy frozen vegetables and many packaged dry mixes, which since they are —"service-foods" cost extra. I do some of all of these.

When Marianne was home there were three of us all of the time and usually a guest or two for dinner on an average of three or four nights per week. Any help we have eats only lunch at our house.

Recently my weekly order from the grocery store was $15.90 which included a 5-lb. loin of pork, a 2-lb piece of S.P. back bacon, 2 lbs. minced beef and 1 lb. pork liver, 1 dozen each oranges, bananas, grapefruit, 1 basket apples, 3 heads lettuce, fresh tomatoes, green beans, celery, carrots, new cabbage and beets and all of the staples one ordinarily needs like sugar, butter, cleansers, etc., I buy our canned goods by the case and they are in the basement so they are not included in weekly purchases.

Besides this order our milk bill was $3.28, eggs $1.10 and bread 72 cents. That makes $21.00 without the stocks in our basement.

Now Pete would eat as much as any factory worker. If your son and husband eat more you have my sympathy. So while you and your daughter would roughly equal me and Marianne your husbands ruins the comparison. I suppose if I had him to provide for the cash outlay would be more like $30.00. The bill for the canned goods in November was $72.00.

So my conclusion is that considering paper goods such as toilet tissue, facial tissues, paper napkins, wax paper, canned stocks on hand, cleansers and soap the cost cannot be below $10 per week per person.

If your son and daughter pack their own lunches, make their own beds, help with the dishes, help substantially with the cleaning, furnace, ashes, snow removal, painting, etc. in other words do their share and do it eagerly the cost should be $10.00. If no help $15.00.

I'm a champion of the young people and defend them at every turn—but I will not defend laziness. Girls in fur coats and high heels with mothers with cloth coats and dish pan hands, and boys who "borrow" the car every night and never fill the gas tank —expressions fail me.

Fashion Flashes

Demure dresses, reminiscent of the Gibson Girl era, appear in Southern resort and Spring collections. Vanilla brown silk, pindotted in black, is used for a feminine little dress. The bodice is marked by three rows of tiny self ruffling on either side of the pearl button fastening that extends to below the waist. Skirt is soft and full; leg-o'-mutton sleeves are worn pushed up.

Favored for Spring is the all-white glove — or the dark glove with pretty white touches — for all-fabric lines. Also seen are some very high colors, rather than pastels. Dark blue double-woven cotton is used for a handsome glove that has a flaring cuff of white pique with intricate scroll overlays of the dark blue.

Fine detail marks new tailored suits of silk, and makes this fashion more important than ever. Heavy silk tweed, in neutral tones, makes a very handsome suit with a panel-pleated skirt and a fitted jacket that has a curved, standing collar and semicircular lapels.

The eternal lure of lace, plus its practical side, makes it the ideal choice for evening wear. Imported white Chantilly lace is used for an evening gown with a short, very bouffant skirt. The bodice has a gorland effect in pearl beads and rhinestones, and these are also scattered over the skirt, which is bolstered by underskirts of net and pleated taffeta.

Coming along in strong formation are stripes—for suits dresses and accessories. Antique taffeta —striped gray, mauve and blue —uses the stripes horizontally for a pretty dress with square neck, cap sleeves and button closing to below the waist. The stiff, wide skirt is just made for a crinoline.

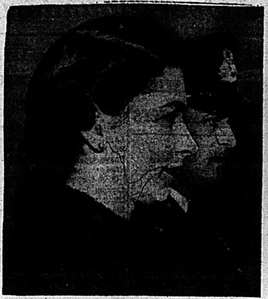
DRINK TOO MUCH

Woodcote. England, March 3 — (Reuters) — The Vicar of St. Marck's Church has warned Britons against drinking so much tea. Rev. Alfred C. Raby declared in a Parish magazine: "Today in shops and offices throughout Britain time and patience and stamina are sapped because early in the morning the staff begins to retire for "a cuppa tea."

Elizabeth II Performs First Official Act as Queen



Arriving for the first major ceremonial of her reign, Queen Elizabeth II, in mourning garb, reaches London's Buckingham Palace with the Duke of Edinburgh. She knighted 55 men and pinned valor medals on 53 others. The allocade of knighthood was conferred while uniformed Yeomen of the Guard stood by. — Central Press Canadian.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Don't Say You've Heard the Story Before!

If your wife or your husband or your brother or your sister or a friend tells a joke or a story or an incident you've heard them tell before, perhaps many times, don't be a wet blanket and make sour or icy remarks about it, or sneer at its age. You'll distress and humiliate the teller-of-the-story. .you'll embarass the other listeners and you'll be mean as well as rude. Throw away this meanness, "smile pretty," and be the pleasant and cooperative little person you should be, can learn to be.

When Lodge Members, Co-Workers, Send Presents To Hospital

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

In the very near future I am going to the hospital for an operation. Since it is the custom of my lodge members — and of my co-workers, too — to send a gift (usually fruit, sometimes flowers) to a member (or co-worker) who is ill, I expect they will send me a gift to the hospital. Will you please give me some idea how to word a letter of thanks to show my deep appreciation of their kindness?

Sara M.

Your thank-you note might read something like this:

Dear Friends...and what thoughtful and generous friends you are, to make me so happy by your goodness to me. Your basket of wonderful fruits was a masterpiece of color and dramatic arrangement. .and such deliciousness! It arrived at just the time when I was longing for some "special fruits". .something besides orange juice. I had a grand time "choosing". .and each of the beauties was especially delectable. Thank you, thank you, and thank you again, for your so-kind, so-generous thought of me.

I'm well on the road to recovery now, and I'm looking forward to seeing all you good friends soon and to thanking you personally for your goodnes to me.

Devotedly,

(Whatever the present is, thank (1) for the thought, (2) specifically for the present, and (3) say enthusiastic words of appreciation for its special features.)

Correct: Bride to Wear Traditional Dress with Train: Attendants to Wear Ballerina-Length

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My sister is to be married in several months, and she has not decided yet whether she will wear a dress with a train, or a ballerina-length gown. If she does decide to wear a dress with a train, would it be correct for her attendants to wear the ballerina-length dresses?

A. C.

Yes. In today's weddings this is quite often the plan. And with the increasing popularity of ballerina-length dresses, the bride plans to have her attendants wear this length while she abides by the traditional length formal wedding dress.

BEAUTY

HELEN JAMIESON

Creating the Illusion of Beauty

There's no denying that good features, hair that carries charming lights and shadows, complexions that are like the lily and the rose and figures of graceful lines are priceless inheritances. But nature does not always hand out these blessings. What then? It is possible to create an illusion of beauty. Many clever women have done that little thing. They're not dumb dollies, these smarties. They take advantage of modern improvements because they are intelligent and observing. They notice other women's pulchritude errors and avoid them.

There are beauty mines within every woman's reach. Women have but to dig for the treasures that are there. If all the sisters were to put their minds on the subject there would be few really homely women in the world. Charm can be cultivated, and charm is a form of beauty, appealing not only to the eye but also to the mind and heart.

There are beauty possibilities in gentle manners. Nice manners are expressions of tact and thoughtfulness.

A musical voice is attractive, has won many a man's heart. Let some of our shouting, shrieking young ladies ponder on that subject. Poise has appeal. The poised, calm woman is the perfect companion.

Good taste in dress is an art that can be acquired. Dowdy women cannot hope to win good-looks laurels. They are that way because they have never thought about the glorifying effects of rich, beautiful, becoming colors and the effect on the figure of well-cut, perfectly-designed clothes. Money is not the factor. The leading force is good taste. A plain woman in chic attire has it all over the pretty-pretty in a lot of senseless, fluffy dry goods.

The pretty face and perfect figure are not the whole story by any means. It is not only how one looks that counts, but what one is, how one behaves, the attitude one has towards one's fellow creatures.

The face should be expressive, radiant as a diamond. There are too many mask-like faces these days—over-powdered complexions, vivid lipss, cheeks too heavily touched with rouge, eyebrows blackened with crayon. The more these bedizened creatures do to make themselves beautiful, the worse they look.

Women's Activities

ST. PAUL'S W.A.

Marmora— The monthly meeting of St. Paul's W.A. was held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. R. G. Winters, the new president, with a good attendance of members. Canon J. M. Brownlie opened the meeting.

The Bible reading was taken by Mrs. Percy Gray, and the correspondence of the month was presented by Mrs. W. D. Lavender, who also gave the financial statement. She also read the Board letter which disclosed the annual meeting will be held in the Cathedral, Kingston, on May 7 and 8.

Mrs. R. Frost reported on the Dorcas work. Plans were completed for a quilting and pot luck dinner at the rectory on March 4th.

The study book "Looking South," was taken by the rector. Mrs. Hewitt distributed the 'Living Message.'

A circular letter was read from Miss Cecilia Benns, Reg. N. of New Life Sanatorium, Obuse, Japan, detailing the year's experiences at that hospital.

After the meeting was closed by Canon Brownlie, refreshments were served.

½ cup Jewel Shortening — 2 tsps. baking powder
1½ cups sugar — 1 cup milk
1 tsp. salt — 1 cup finely-chopped apricots
1 tsp. vanilla — ¼ cup finely-chopped nuts
2 cups sifted cake flour — 3 egg whites
Cream Jewel Shortening. Add sugar, salt, vanilla. Cream till fluffy. Sift together flour, baking powder. Add alternately with milk. Add nuts, apricots, steamed if needed. Fold in egg whites, beaten stiff but not dry. Blend lightly. Line bottom of 8" angel cake pan with brown paper, flour. Rub tube with Jewel. Bake at 325°F., one hour. Cool.
FILLING
1 cup finely-chopped apricots — ½ cup sugar
2 cups water — 1 tbsp. corn starch — 1 tbsp. lemon juice
Cook everything in double boiler till soft enough to spread.
FROSTING
2 egg whites — ⅛ tsp. cream of tartar
1½ cups sugar — ⅛ tsp. salt
⅓ cup strong coffee — 1 tsp. rum extract
Mix everything except extract in double boiler. Place over boiling water. Beat thoroughly about 3 minutes. Remove from heat, stir well. Add extract. Beat one extra minute, till frosting stands in peaks.
DECORATION: Save ¼ cup filling to star the swirls of frosting. Make three apricot flowers with scissors—cut apricots to the centre, petal-fashion. Use green cherry pieces for flower centres.
Names of winners will be published in this paper. SWIFT CANADIAN CO., LIMITED.

Canadiens Take 4-Point Lead Over Floundering Leafs In Weekend Games

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

PLAYOFFS HERE

Just when all hands were set for the playoffs someone had a mental quirk and recalled rightly that the Petes and Eagles had another game to play. This was the tilt protested early in November when Eagles used an unsigned player and the game was tossed out with the proviso it would be replayed if it affected the standing of either team at the end of the schedule.

It so happened that Eagles finished one point below the Kingston Sacs, so second spot is in abeyance for the nonce or at least until late tonight when the teams battle with second spot for Eagles at stake.

This did not make much difference at the meeting of the senior group representatives held here yesterday to name playoff dates. Eagles did not show up and after an hour's wait OHA executive members Frank Buckland and Lorne Cook got the conclave under way.

The outcome was the semi-finals series between Petes and Hawks and Eagles and Sacs will be best-of-seven affairs. And if time permits the finals series will be likewise. The finals will start two days after the second semi-finalist winner has been declared. All overtime will be of ten minutes duration and if the teams are deadlocked at the end of the series, a new series, or a sudden death game will decide the issue.

The Hawks open their semi-finals series with the Petes in Peterborough Friday, March 7 with the second game here on Monday, March 10. The Sacs if they win second spot open at Kingston against Eagles on March 8 with the second game at Peterborough, March 10. If Eagles take second place Sacs go there on Wednesday, March 5th and back in Kingston Mar. 8th. From there on the schedule is the same.

HAWKS - PETERBOROUGH SERIES

Friday, Mar. 7th.—Belleville at Peterborough.
Monday, Mar. 10th.—Peterborough at Belleville.
Wednesday, Mar. 12th—Belleville at Peterborough.
Friday, Mar. 14th.—Peterborough at Belleville.
Monday, Mar. 17th.—Belleville at Peterborough.
Wednesday Mar. 19th—Peterborough at Belleville.
Friday, Mar. 21st.—Belleville at Peterborough.

KINGSTON - EAGLES SERIES

Wednesday, Mar. 5th.—Kingston at Peterborough Eagles (If Eagles win second place).
Saturday, Mar. 8th.—Peterborough Eagles at Kingston. (If Kingston wins second place).
Monday, Mar. 10th.—Kingston at Eagles.
Wednesday, Mar. 12th.—Eagles at Kingston.
Friday, Mar. 14th.—Kingston at Eagles.
Monday, Mar. 17th.—Eagles at Kingston.
Wednesday, Mar. 21st.—Eagles at Kingston.

If Eagles take over second place in the group standing the Friday, March 21st game naturally will not be played.

The OHA will appoint two referees to officiate at all series games.

A GOOD START!

The Belleville Commercial Softball League got off on the right foot yesterday and the outcome of the meeting held yesterday augurs well for another good season. The boys re-elected President Don Lee for his third term with secretary Cy Barriage and treasurer Lee Bradshay entering their second year of office. The meeting elected a strong executive to work with its top officials and named President Lee, Secretary Barriage and Convener Harry Knott to represent the league at the OASA annual at Easter. A fine spirit of co-operation was evident and the league dispensed with a lot of important business. It looks like another splendid season for softball. The story of the meeting appears elsewhere on the sports pages.

Tonight the Peterborough Outboard Marines juveniles meet the Belleville juveniles in the second of their goals-to-count OMHA playdown in Memorial Arena. The Peterborough squad is a well-coached hustling team that has played together for the past four years, four players of which will graduate to junior "B" next season. They defeated the Belleville youngsters 13-0 in the first game but while miracles do not hoppen, or do they, the game tonight will see two fine young juvenile teams in action. Prior to this tussle the Belleville peewees will play a Peterborough peewee team in an exhibition game starting at 7.15. These kids really turn on the heat and its worth anybody's money to see young Belleville in smart hockey action. The juvenile game starts at 8.30.

"Red" Doran sent his junior Hawklets through a stiff workout yesterday afternoon readying them for the important group final series with the hot Kingston Vics. The teams open their best-of-seven series here tomorrow night with the second game in Kingston Thursday and the third scheduled for Memorial Arena next Saturday night. The Hawks are taking no chances and Doran kept them hustling for an hour in the practice stint. The Hawks appeared to be in good shape with the front lines flying and the defence handing out some stiff checks. Both Gordie Barclay and Bobby Green were in action in the nets and appeared to be in fine bettle.

Tonight the Belleville Glen Roys battle the Trenton RCAF Flyers in the first of their best-of-five Trent Valley League southern sectional finals. The teams clash in the Brighton Arena, home ice of the Flyars with the second game tabbed for Memorial Arena here on Wednesday night. The third game will be played in Brighton on Friday night. The Glens ousted the strong Trenton team in the semi-finals and are confident they can take the measure of the Flyers.

Defeat Rangers, Black Hawks While Leafs-Boston Tie Twice; Wings Win 6-4 Over Rangers

(By The Canadian Press)

Last week a lot of observers were counting Boston Bruins out of the Stanley Cup playoffs. However, after a weekend of the old college try against Toronto Maple Leafs, Lynn Patrick's crew have forced a recount.

The fifth-place Bruins emerged from their tough weekend schedule against the Leafs with two ties—a 1-1 Saturday night affair in Maple Leaf Gardens and a 2-2 showing at home Sunday—and the Toronto squad was lucky to get away with them.

The pair of stalemates moved the Bruins to within a game of fourth-place New York Rangers who bowed 3-1 to the Canadiens Saturday at Montreal and 6-3 to Detroit Red Wings Sunday at home.

Toronto lost ground to the runner-up Canadiens who completed a successful weekend with a 6-4 victory over the Black Hawks in Chicago.

The Canadiens now trail Detroit bf 15 points while Toronto is in third slot, two games behind the Habs. Rangers are 13 points to the rear of the Leafs with the Bruins but a game behind. Chicago remains in the cellar, a full 48 points off the pace.

Boston gained their tie on Johnny Peirson's goal at 12.03 of the final period while George Armstrong was sitting out a boarding penalty. Tod Sloan got Toronto's lone goal—his 20th of the season—the same way. Boston's Flem Mackell was serving a first-period tripping sentence at the time.

The game was a typical Toronto-Boston affair with a few fist fights thrown in. Milt Schmidt of the Bruins and Toronto's Tod Sloan were in two engagements. Sloan received a total of 11 minutes in penalties over the route.

Saturday night in Montreal, Floyd Currey led the Canadiens with two important goals with Dickie Moore adding the other. Herb Dickenson scored Rangers' lone marker.

Canadiens widely outshot the the Blueshirts, 35-19, but found goalie Emile (The Cat) Francis one of their toughest obstacles. The Ranger netminder played one of the best games to date.

The league-leading Detroit Red Wings scored three times in the last period at New York to take home their 6-4 victory from the Rangers. The New Yorkers were leading 4-3 at the finish of the middle session.

Gordie Howe led the Detroit attack with a pair of goals—his 38th and 39th of the season—while Metro Prystai, Sid Abel, Glen Skov and Alex Delvecchio added the others. Paul Ronty, Reg Sinclair, Jim Ross and Wally Hergesheimer scored for New York.

Rookie Dick Gamble's hat trick was the deciding edge for Canadiens in their Sunday game at Chicago. Floyd again scored two goals and Bernie Geoffrion tallied the other. George Gee rapped in two for Chicago with Bill Mosienko and Gus Bodnar scoring the others.

Western Rinks Top Attraction In Curl Opener

By AL VICKERY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, March 3—(CP) — The Manitoba-Saskatchewan clash looked as the top match in today's opening round of the five-day curling championship.

Eleven rinks—two from Ontario—will battle in the round-robin series at the amphitheatre rink for the title, won last at Halifax Aby the host foursome, skipped by Don Oyler of Kentville, N.S.

In the afternoon draw following the opening ceremonies, other games wil lsee British Columbia play Ontario, Quebec take on New Brunswick, Northern Ontario go against Prince Edward Island and Alberta meet Newfoundland. Nova Scotia drew a bye.

Representing Manitoba for the first time, Billy Wash of Winnipeg was expected to receive tough competition from veteran Frank Hastings of Nipawin, Sask.

As in previous competitions, Manitoba goes into the 'spiel as a favorite, due to the province's record of 12 wins in 22 dominion finals to date.

Hawks, Bruins Rangers Win Bantam Playoffs

Black Hawks, Bruinsh and Rangers advanced into the second round of the Bantam playoffs of the Belleville Minor Hockey Association on Saturday morning by virtue of their wins over Canadiens, Red Wings and Maple Leafs in the second games of the first round series.

Black Hawks won over Canadiens by 2-1 on Saturday morning to win the round by a 6-1 margin. McCann and Wallbridge scored for the winners with the former getting an assist as well. Spafford also drew an assist while Duval tallied unassisted for Canadicns.

Bruins swept Red Wings into the discard with a 5-0 win to take the round by 7-1. Bobby Hull notched all five goals in an outstanding winning effort while Meagher assisted on a pair. Single assists went to McLean, Mainer and Irwin.

Rangers rebounded from a defeat last week to win a 6-3 count over Maple Leafs and win their round nine goals to seven.

Asselstine and Foster bagged a pair of goals. Booth and Calnan scoring singletons, the latter also assisting on one. Beedy and Bishop also drew assists. Hagerman fired two markers for Leafs, Ryan getting the other, each man getting an assist.

The Black Hawks and Rangers meet at nine o'clock next Saturday morning in a sudden death game ti decide who will meet the Bruins, who received a bye, in the championship series. Their game will be followed by an exhibition match between Bruins and Canadiens after which Red Wings and Maple Leafs will play a consolatin game.

Recreations Win Over 'Dromes'

Close play and high scores featured the Bellville Bowl-O-Drome — Belleville Recreations match in the Central Ontario Bowling League Saturday night.

Recreations won the tilt five points to two with a pinfall of 3688 as against 3666 for the Dromes.

Three-Way Tie In Baton Rouge Golf Tourney

A 40-foot putt attempt from a parking lot near the 18th hole clung tenaciously to the lip of the cup and created a three-way tie yesterday.

Nary, a 36-year-old Albuquerque, .M., pro Jack Burke, Jr., of Houston, Texas, and Tommy Bolt, who plays out of Durham, N.C., meet in an 18-hole playoff today.

Nary, lost among the pack in early rounds, shot a blazing six-under-par 66 in yesterdays fourth round to move up from fifth position. Bolt was one over par and Burke one under.

Narys near-miss was a nerve-wracking experience. Nary overshot the 18th green and the ball bounced into the parking lot. Without even being able to see the green, he casually stroked the ball in the general direction of the flag. It bobbled over rough ground, climbed to the green, rolled and stopped one-half inch from the cup.

The crowd jumped up and down, trying to shake the ball in. Some even puffed themselves red in the face trying to blow it in. But the ball didnt budge.

Burke was forced to drop a 20-foot putt on the 18th to earn his 281.

Bolt tried a 30-foot putt that would have given him a 280 and the title on the 18th. It missed by inches.

European Teams Tougher in 1956 Says Hockey Head

By JACK SULLIVAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, March 3—(CP)—Canada's 1956 Olympic hockey team will have to be at least 30 per cent stronger than the team sent to the recent Oslo games if the dominion expects to hold the title.

That's the opinion of Doug Grimston of New Westminster, B. C., president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, who represented Canada in the Olympic hockey setup. Grimston left for home by plane Sunday.

"European teams have improved considerably the last few years and, with some proper coaching, could be mighty troublesome to Canada," Grimston said in an interview.

"If the European teams learn to use the body check and play offensive hockey, such as fighting for the puck in the corner, they can give us a tough game.

"European teams seem to lack stamina, especially on power plays, and they are timid when it comes to bodily contact."

Grimston said he believes the Europeans learned a lot about Canadian hockey at Oslo and if they adopt our style of fore-checking they can be considered as definite threats" in future Olympics.

Edmonton Mercurys, who won the title for Canada, were unbeaten in the recent games although they wound up with a 3-3 tie in the game with the United States.

Intent Finishes 1st in Santa Anita, Gets 2nd Place After Bumping Miche

Arcadia, Calif., March 3—(AP)—For the third time in as many $100,000 races at Santa Anita park this season, the heavily backed favorite failed when the chips were down.

Counterpoint did it in the Maturity, finishing sixth with a nick on the leg which put the 1951 horse of the year out of training. Windy City II missed in the derby, although he came in second. And last Saturday Hill Prince, 1950's horse of the year, wound up fifth in the rich Santa Anita handicap with a dull performance rivalling for attention the hassle over the winner.

When Counterpoint ran out, the victor was Brookfield Farm's Intent and Saturday, it was Intent who hit the wire first. But it was Miche, a mud-splattered grey ghost from the Argentine, who drew down the $104,100 first money for Mrs. John Payson Adams, San Francisco socialite.

Slid in Mud

Intent and Miche, with the whole track practically to themselves down the stretch, chose to hug the rail. Miche was on the rail, inside, Intent barely outside as they came off the last turn.

The films—which the stewards ran off for the sports writers to explain a disqualification which placed Intent second—seemed to show both slid a little in the mud left by a brisk overnight rain.

At any rate, they had barely straightened out for the stretch drive when Intent bumped Miche into the rail. The South American bounced out, then into the rail again, jockey John Covalli's foot clearly pointing into the infield.

Only a hair separated them the rest of the way to the wire, but depite the close quarters, there was no further interference.

The official ruling plucked $84,100 from the pocket of Harry Isaacs, Baltimore textile-maker—the difference between first price and the $20,000 posted for second.

For Miche's few but loyal backers, it was a gold strike. He paid $55.40, $22.60 and $13.30 on $2 mutuel tickets. Intent returned $7.50 and $5.60, third-place Be Fleet $13.40 to show.

Commercial Softball League Gives Don Lee Third Term as President

President Don Lee was elected to a third term as head of the Belleville Commercial Softball League at the annual election of officers yesterday afternoon. Cy Barriage and Lee Bradshaw were returned as secretary and treasurer respectively.

Executive members elected for the 1952 season were Harry Rollins, Claude Tice, Harry Knott, Reg. Wardle, Gerald Barriage, Jack McNab, Joe Agnew and Jack Devine. A motion was carried that the executive be comprised of no more than eight and no less than six members; should the executive fall below six, the remainder will appoint new members enough to bring the total to six.

Appoint Delegates

President Lee, Cy Barriage and Harry Knott were appointed as delegates to attend the annual O. A. S. A. meeting being held in London on Friday, April 11.

It was the unanimous decision of the meeting to have the Belleville Association recommend Harry Knott as O.A.S.A. convener for this district. It was decided to have a committee of Harry Knott, Claude D. Tice and Harry Rollins to draft the resolution to this effect.

Fire Chief Gerald Vance was re-appointed by the Commercial Softball League executive to act as convener for all minor softball in this city.

President Don Lee suggested the appointment of a man to supervise news reports, calling of umpires, calling of games, and any other matters pertinent to the league. This matter was set aside with the appointment to be made later by the executive.

It was decided to make the deadline for applications to play in the Belleville Commercial Softball League on May 1st. with an entry fee of $25 per team, whether junior, intermediate or senior. No certificates will be issued until the entry fee is paid.

Secretary Cy Barriage and treasurer Lee Bradshaw read their respective reports for the past year, the latter revealing that the league is solvent by 51 cents. Both reports were adopted.

Expressed Appreciation

President Lee thanked everyone who had assisted in any way to make last year a successful one. He complimented the executive for their co-operation, Chief Gerald Vance for his invaluable assistance in working with the minor leagues, Cy Barriage, Lee Bradshaw and Gordon Nicholson for the amount of time and effort spent in carrying out the tasks of their offices.

Bill Van Tassel, speaking on behalf of the minor leagues, promised full co-operation with senior leagues again this year. He advised that he expected that the Alemite Field would be available for use again this year.

President Lee was nominated by the Commercial Softball League to the Recreation Commission advisory board.

Following a lengthy discussion regarding O.A.S.A. rules amendments the meeting was closed.

Bowling

Men's Commercial

Star Welding and Alemite were the only seven point winners in the Men's Commercial Bowling League at the Bowl-O-Drome on Friday night over Gourley Motors and Rockets.

Welding Gases pulled the upset of the night when they won a 5-2 victory over Moose Lodge to drop them out of first place. Other five point winners were Bosiaks, Mead Johnson and O'Neil Sales over Balyx Brothers, Stephens-Adamson and Legionnaires.

The league has tightened into a strictly three team race for top honors with ten more nights to play, Bosiaks, Moose Lodge and Star Welding, have exchanged the lead several times, and in all probability, will exchange it several more times before an ultimate winner is declared.

Bosiaks are currently in front with 124 points, one ahead of Moose Lodge who have 123, and four over Star Welding with 120. Gourleys follow with 93, Rockets 86, Welding Gases 81, O'Neil Sales 74, Stephens-Adamson 67, Alemite 67, Balyx Brothers 63, Legionnaires 34, and Mead Johnson 32.

Frankford Sport

Frankford — Frankford and Warkworth met this week in the first of a series of Badminton tournaments in Frankford Community Hall. Warkworth emerged on the winning end, taking the series 4-2.

In the men's doubles, Ewing and Mowat of Warkworth took both games from Scott and Gilmour of Frankford, by scores of 15-9, 15-12, series going to Warkworth. In men's doubles, F. Allen and G. Platt of Warkworth, took the first game from Montgomery and Davis of Frankford, 15-8, but the Frankfordites took the second contest 15-3, series going to Frankford.

E. Partridge and C. Ewing of Warkworth took both games from J. Loucks and T. Bennett in the mixed doubles, 18-15 and 15-2, Warkworth winning series. In another mixed doubles series Pat Bennett and J. Scott of Frankford took both games from F. Buckley and Mrs. Mowatt of Warkworth, 15-6 and 15-3, series to Frankford.

Mrs. G. Allen and Miss Allen of Warkworth won both games from H. Charlesworth and Mrs. Watts in ladies' doubles, 15-3 and 15-7, series going to Warkworth. In the other ladies' doubles, R. Allen and Mrs. Mowatt won by scores of 15-6 and 15-5 over J. McCrea and H. Bailey.

The softball organization, has secured the Quinte Skating Club from Belleville to close the skating season on March 7 at the Community Arena. The club has promised a show lasting over one hour, consisting of fancy and figure skating in solo, pairs, and club numbers.

The program will get under way at 8:15 p.m. and immediately after, the public will have free skating. Word has it that this will be the last skating before the Lions Club officially close the arena for the season.

The association is hoping for good ice for the show, and also full support from all ball players, to lend their active support to this venture.

Frankford Bowling League neared the end of their schedule this week, with only four nights remaining. No change occurred in the standing. The Crackpots, led by Ross Huffman held on to their first place berth as they took five from Ed Tomecek's Rockets. The Rockets dropped their two games only by the narrowest of margins. Gene Lohnes' Pinpoppers held on to second place, but failed to gain on the first place team, as they took five from Russ Hogg's Inkspots. Ray Scott's Skeeters gained a point on the Rockets, as they took one game and high total from Harry Hearns Hotshots. Jack Farley's Fireballs kept right in the running, with a five-two win over Bob Morgan's Bobsmob.

Standing to date:

	Won	Lost	H.T.	Pts.
Crackpots	44	28	16	104
Pinpoppers	41	31	15	97

(By The Canadian Press)

In the official scoring, Mlle. Du Bief got first-place votes from each of the nine judges and piled up 195.85 judging points. A mildly cheering crowd of 15,000 acclaimed the girl who had brought France third-place honors in the same event at the Olympics.

Miss Morrow, 21-year-old 1951 Canadian Senior Women's champion who placed sixth at the Olympics at Oslo, received 43 place points and 185 judging points.

Two other Canadians placed well up.

Marlene Smith of Niagara Falls Ont., was seventh with 64 placing and 181.11 judging points. The 20-year-old Toronto Skating Club star was Canadian senior champion in 1952 and runner-up in the 1949 North American championships.

In 10th spot was Vevi Smith, 19, of Toronto with 90 placing points and 176.31 judging points. She was runner-up for the Canadian Senior title in 1952 and Canadian Junior Champ in 1947.

Second-place honors went to Sonya Klopfer of Long Island City, N.Y. and third spot to Virginia Baxter of Detroit. Miss Klopfer has 21 place points and 191.97 judging marks, and Miss Baxter 24 and 190.48.

Dutchies Dumped By Mercurys; Lead Series 2-0

(By The Canadian Press)

Owen Sound Mercurys may have been just another team over most of the Ontario Hockey Association senior A season, but when the stretch drive came up, they settled down to some serious hockey.

Meeting Kitchener - Waterloo Dutchmen in one half of the league's semi-finals, the Mercs were not rated too much of a chance of making the final round. However, the third place club has surprised the onlookers with their success and Saturday night took a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven series against the Dutchies with a 3-1 victory.

In the Thunder Bay junior A semi-finals, Fort William Hurricanes eliminated Port Arthur Flyers in their third straight victory, a 2-1 Saturday affair. The Hurcs now advance against Port Arthur Bruins in a best-of-seven final series.

Moving into the final week of the Ontario Hockey Association junior A schedule, Toronto St. Michael's clinched fourth place in the 10-team circuit with two wins during the weekend. Saturday night they dropped ninth - place Windsor Spitfires 5-1 and Sunday came through with a 5-4 decision over the runner-up Guelph Biltmores.

Austerity Brings New Team Spirit To Philadelphia Phils, Says Sawyer

By JACK HAND

Clearwater, Fla., March 3 (AP) — Manager Eddie Sawyer thinks his "austerity" campaign has brought a new spirit to Philadelphia Phillies' training camp.

"There's an entirely different atmosphere from last spring," said Sawyer. He pointed to several players who were still playing catch after the regular drill was over.

"You didn't see that last year," he said. "Some of the boys could not wait for the word 'that's all' so they could get back to the beaches. Now they haven't anything else to do so they are concentrating on baseball."

No Wives

During the winter each Phil player received a letter from headquarters on spring-training plans. The one rule that disrupted many a happy fireside read, "No wives at camp."

Sawyer had the same rule in 1950 but exceptions were made. Some of the players thought the same thing would happen this spring. So far there has been no change.

Sawyer, a married man with two daughters, thinks the ball players should concentrate on baseball — and only baseball for the six weeks of the training season.

"Wives don't go on road trips do they?" he asked. "How did this all start anyhow? Years ago, a training camp was for men only."

Sawyer, a former coach of Toronto Maple Leafs, believes the players are distracted from their important spring work by too many outside activities. He wants his men all under the same roof, building up a club spirit.

"If we had a large enough hotel to take care of all the wives too, it might work out all right," he said. "But we don't. I don't want my men scattered on the beaches and all around the countryside. They're down here to play ball."

Ottawa Youth Wins Kandahar Ski Classic

Mont Tremblant, Que., March 3 — (CP) — Twenty - year - old Art Tommy of Ottawa swept the 18th annual running of the Quebec Kandahar during the weekend, edging out Bob Richardson, Canada's No. 1 Olympic skier, in the Alpine combined results.

Although Tommy failed to win either Saturday's downhill or Sunday's slalom, he placed second in both events, to give him the best combined average.

Richardson, who returned only Friday from Oslo, Norway, where he competed for Canada, made a sensational downhill, to win the 43-flag slalom race.

Flying Hornets Increase Lead In American

(By The Canadian Press)

Pittsburgh Hornets, the high-flying leaders of the Western Section of the American Hockey League, took both of their scheduled weekend games. Saturday they beat Syracuse 5-2 and yesterday edged St. Louis Flyers 2-1.

Cal Stearns, Vic Lynn and Steve Wochy tallied for Cleveland while Armand Lemieux was the Syracuse marksman.

Obie O'Brien led the Hershey assault with three goals. Norm Corcoran, Adam Brown and Leo Labine each netted two and Arnie Kullman and Joe Schertzl added singletons.

Westminsters Edge Vancouver 4-3

(By The Canadian Press)

League-leading goal scorer Gordy Fashoway counted the winning goal Saturday as New Westminster Royals defeated Vancouver Canucks 4-3. The victory entrenched the Royals atop the Pacific Coast Hockey League.

Meanwhile Seattle's rejuvenated Ironmen ran up their third and fourth victories in a row, beating Tacoma Rockets 4-2 and 5-2. The victories moved seattle to within one point of fourth-place Edmonton Flyers. Calgary Stampeders got within two points of the sixth and last playoff spot by beating Saskatoon Quakers 8-4.

Queen's Boxers Win Senior Crown

Kingston, March 3 (CP) — Queen's University boxing teams slugged their way to the Yates trophy and the senior intercollegiate boxing crown Saturday by winning six-bouts.

The Ontario Agricultural College and Montreals McGill University each won one title. Queen's scored 24 points, while McGill and O.A.C. grabbed six apiece. The University of Toronto trailed with three. In the 135-pound event, Bob Sweet of Queen's won by a decision over Russ Reilly of Toronto.

Other results:

147 pounds—S. D. Doane of Guelph decisioned R. Couceiro of Toronto.

THE HOOD LIFTER

WE ALWAYS GIVE MORE THAN WE PROMISE. This has always been our policy in our dealings with the public. That's why you'll always notice our ads. seldom use the word "Guaranteed" or the equivalent. A guarantee is only as good as the dealer. If we put an up-to-the-hilt warrantee on a car we, of course, live up to it. But it doesn't leave us much room to do more than we agreed to do. We like doing more for you. Some dealers measure their success in business by how little expense they can attach to the used car they sell you. West End Motors are different. Maybe we're crazy but we get a bang out of being able to do something for you that perhaps you didn't expect. Maybe it's just sneaking in a free wash job that you didn't expect; maybe we can slip you a real good tune-up on the used car you bought a month ago and say to you, "This one's on the house." Maybe it's just lending you another car while your own car is being repaired.

At WEST END MOTORS you'll discover a friendly atmosphere that you'll rarely find in the automobile business. It's a genuine friendliness, not artificial. Some dealers force their employees to smile, but we're a real happy gang down at WEST END MOTORS and this attitude will show up in either the New Studebaker you've bought, or the used car you've traded or in the service job we've done for you. Yes, giving more than we promised has made us a lot of friends. Won't you be one?

Assume the bidding starts off like this:

South	West	North	East
2 D	Pass	2 NT	3 H
Pass

You are well aware of the fact that south could have bid four diamonds. But let us assume he passed to see what his partner had to say about the present condition of things. How about west?

A master pair operates with maneuverability. They can stab and parry and thrust and duck. They can run in and out of danger. A west in such a pair might bid three spades right here.

The east bid did not promise much unless the heart suit is to be trump. It may even be a strategic bid or a lead-director or an interferer. Any west bid now must consider defeat.

The defeat may not be greater than south can make at a final bid he intends to reach. West may be capable of weighing these chances. He must also know that his partner will not misunderstand.

If he is not a master of such tactics west should pass. If his partner is not an understanding expert, west should pass. If he is the least bit in doubt, west should pass.

But assume west passes. If so, north must take action. He must either bid again or double the east bid of three hearts for penalty. Is there a slam in their own pair? Will opponent defeat pay more?

Without the feather touch, north should assist in diamonds. A master might double three hearts and hope partner knows best whether to leave it there or take it out. Superman makes his own rules.

Movie Column

Hollywood, March 3—(AP) — Weirdest casting of the year has put Burt Lancaster in the role of a gray-haired failure with a passion for alcohol.

The former circus acrobat is playing the role of Doc in "Come Back, Little Sheba." His co-star is Shirley Booth, who won the top acting honors on Broadway when she played the role on the stage.

Sidney Blackmer won the same honors when he played the show with her. But although he is a star on the stage, he is a character actor in films, and he was passed up for the movie version.

Hollywood was startled when Lancaster was given the part and reports from the east said the reaction of the theatre world was more violent.

On the "Sbeba" set, Lancaster looked far different from his usual screen self. His unwieldly mop of hair was slicked down and streaked with grey. Instead of his dashing wardrobe, he wore a pair of faded pajamas.

"I didn't think the role was for me, either," said the actor. "It wan's my idea at all. Mike Curtiz, who directed me in 'Jim Thorpe,' was talking to (producer) Hal Wallis, who said he was having trouble casting the picture. Mike suggested me for it. He wanted Wallis to see the latter part of 'Thorpe', in which I played him as an older man.

"Wallis had me read the book, and I told him I thought it would be great for Humphrey Bogart or Spencer Tracy but not for me. When I got back from making a picture in Europe, he had me test for the part. He liked the test and gave me the role.

"I'm very excited about doing the part. After all, this kind of role is the only thing that makes this business interesting— that, and the fun of producing your own pictures. Most of the pictures I have been in have been pure hokum, and there's no kick in doing them any more."

Officials Fear Soviet May Wreck Truce Talks

Washington, March 3—(AP)— Russia apparently is so determined to gain a role in Korean peacemaking that she may wreck the truce talks in the attempt.

Some highly-placed officials offered that explanation today for the present deadlock in the armistice talks at Panmunjom. They assume, as Washington has generally assumed from the first, that the Kremlin is masterminding communist strategy in Korea. The reds' insistence that the Soviet Union be included in a proposed commission of neutral countries to police the truce, if and when one is agreed upon, is thus regarded here as a move inspired and doggedly persisted in by the Soviet government itself.

The first sign of a possible backdown from this position came during today's negotiations. When the reds were told objections to Russia could not be removed, Chinese Col. Chang Chung San replied that the allies had the right to reject any nominee but should give logical reasons.

United States officials said here, as United Nations negotiators have said in Korea, that they will never agree to accept Russia as a neutral. The U. S. stand is that Russia told the North Koreans to start the war in the first place.

What the U. S. would agree to —and what might prove to be the way out—would be to drop the idea of a neutral commission and go back to the original suggestion by the U. N. side that the truce be supervised by a joint commission of belligerents.

Russia and the U. S. would then be represented in equal position, provided Russia was willing to acknowledge a belligerent status.

CLAIMS WORLD RECORD

Dijon, France, March 3 (AP) — Michel Marechal today claimed a world's record here for being buried alive. Marechal spent three hours, one minute and one second inside a coffin six feet underground. His only company during this eerie vigil was a rat, inside a cage with him in the coffin. The rat died.

MAY START THIS YEAR

Paris, March 3 — (Reuters) — Work on a 7½-mile-long road tunnel linking France and Italy may begin later this year. French, Italian and Swiss officials of the Mont Blanc Tunnel Commission are meeting here to draft a constitution for international control of the tunnel.

AT THE CAPITOL — And rivals too! Lizabeth Scott, right, and Jane Greer are the two women in the case, in RKO's "The Company She Keeps," opening tonight for its first Belleville showing at the Capitol Theatre, a dramatic story of the struggles of a parolee to adjust herself to the life she finds outside prison walls. Miss Scott portrays an understanding parole officer, Miss Greer a parolee in her charge — and they are rivals for the affections of the same man, played by Dennis O'Keefe, all three being starred. On the same program, Danny Kaye, Gene Tierney and Corinne Calvet in the Technicolor musical, "On the Riviera."

18 Fatalities In East Canada During Weekend

(By The Canadian Press)

Fire, traffic, bullets and other causes brought death to 18 persons in eastern Canada during the weekend.

Five children were burned to death in a log-cabin fire in Newfoundland.

A Canadian Press survey early today showed eight persons killed in Ontario, two each in Quebec and New Brunswick and one in Prince Edward Island.

Six persons died in traffic accidents, two were shot to death and two were killed in industrial accidents. Neglect killed a newborn baby and one man died of apparent poisoning. A woman died in a fall down stairs.

In Newfoundland five of the nine children of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Cross were killed in a fire in their log-cabin home at remote Nicholsville near Deer Lake. The eldest Cross boy picked up a baby and two other children, broke down the front door and led them to safety.

At Summerside, P.E.I., John Grady died shortly after being admitted to hospital. His wife died Friday of the same cause—believed to be something they ate.

Alfred Gauthier, 54-year-old father of 15 children, was shot to death in his home near Bathurst, N.B., before the eyes of his wife and children. Police are seeking Gauthier's son, Wilfred, 24, in connection with the shooting.

Also in New Brunswick, Mrs. Lena Rankin, 56, of Saint John. was killed when she slid down a snow bank and under the wheels of a bus.

New-Born Baby Found

A new-born baby was found dead in a street of Quebec City, police have charged an 18-year-old girl believed to be the child's mother.

Near Chicoutimi, Que., Leon Dote, 18, of St. Wilbrod D'Hebertville, was killed when a falling rock struck him on the head while he was working on a power project at Chute Du Diable.

Two persons were killed near St. Catharines. Ont., James C. Mackay, 67, died when an emery wheel on which he was grinding a piece of steel, exploded and struck him in the face. Mrs. Sophie Popowich, 46, fell down a flight of steps in her farm home.

Mrs. Carrie Wilson, 68, was killed by an automobile near Toronto. Nancy Ann Nisbet, 5, died when she fell out the door of her father's car near Sarnia. William Rutherford, 37, died at Hamilton of injuries suffered in an automobile accident last week.

Mrs. Mary Alice Graves, 68, of Port Robinson was killed near Niagara Falls when she was thrown out of an automobile in a collision and rolled upon by the car. At Oshawa, Mrs. Peter Shortt died in a two-car collision.

FOR NEUROTIC DISORDERS

London, March 3 (Reuters) — Fifty-five percent of drugs taken by Britons, including vitamins, are for highly neurotic disorders, the Medical Journal said today. Such illnesses, "indicative of a widespread social malaise," are as great a problem today as typhus and cholera in the past, the magazine said.

WHISKEY IS NOT AN ANTIDOTE FOR SNAKEBITES— Snake-venom weakens the heart and lowers the blood pressure, while whiskey, the supposed remedy, still further lowers the blood pressure and depresses the white blood cells, the defenders of the body. Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes, and find what your outlook is according to the stars.

For Tuesday, March 4

March 21 to April 20—(Aries)—Uniformity in effort will bring best results this mildly good day. Plan wisely for Spring expansion in business, manufacturing, personal matters. But—be careful in all.

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus)—Get yourself well in hand, certain obstacles, hindrances indicated, maybe from unexpected sources. Inadequate effort, inattention, or self-assuredness can hurt good chances.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—You may find new contention, outside interference, unexpected reactions—so be forewarned this dull appearing day. Extra hard effort can erase obstacles from your path.

June 22 to July 23—(Cancer)—If not too demanding and you do co-operate with associates, you can bridge nicely this mixed sort of day, and achieve much good. Industry, labor, purely mental work may not run too smoothly.

July 24 to August 22—(Leo)—Same favored for Cancer applies today. Spring activities, new business should be examined well, stimulated. Make yourself felt in work, home; it brings great happiness.

August 23 to September 23—(Virgo)—May not get results you want or find things easy or co-operative. That's what we all must face at times. Be cheerful. Use your best ideas, brightest smile; go along in best way.

September 24 to October 23—(Libra)—Happenings not all favorable, but they are better than you think. When mental tasks irritate, other affairs, heart interests can make up considerably. Be your pleasantest.

October 24 to November 22—(Scorpio)— A downtrend occurs occasionally for all undertakings, especially the speculative. Expect, and treat philosophically. Results depend largely on how you do things.

November 23 to December 22—(Sagittarius) — Don't load self with useless items, non-essentials. Realize there is important work to be done, created. Some trading buying, and building highly favored.

December 23 to January 21—(Capricorn)—Move cautiously in endeavors that could be costly or set you back in any way. Heed proper routine, matters affecting daily work. Exercise forethought.

January 22 to February 20—Aquarius—The simple direct way is the best in most cases. Avoid temptations; double - meanings, rushing or neglecting of some affairs. Reason it out and—consult loved ones.

February 21 to March 20—(Pisces)— Mildly auspicious now for routine, known ways of going about problems. Unusual propositions, personal affairs need extra careful study and handling.

YOU BORN TODAY: A Pisces native —your Sign symbolized by two fishes, one swimming upstream, the other downstream. Does that suggest anything? You are at times unable to make up your mind; are not always sure of your abilities. Right guidance from religion, good reading and companions and you can do great things in life. You are agreeable, naturally well mannered, interesting. Generous often to a fault; never underhanded; don't like schemers. You have good possibilities, talents, use them to achieve the best standards.

Why We Say--

"YOU FLOOR ME"

A startling statement with a derogatory tinge might be responded to with, "You floor me." The expression had an odd beginning, though. It came to us from art exhibits where if an artist's paintings were put on the lowest rung they were termed as being "floored." Naturally the lowest rung was closest to the floor.

MARMORA

World Day of Prayer Held at St. Andrew's United Church

Marmora—St. Andrew's United Church was the venue for the World Day of Prayer in which women of St. Paul's Anglican Church; St. Andrew's United, and Marmora Free Methodist Churches, took part. The service was according to the printed program. The call to worship was given by Mrs. G. D. Young, Mrs. E. Hewitt led in adoration. The leader of the Penitence section was Mrs. Stewart Hardy, and the succeeding section Assurance was led by Mrs. R. Frost. Mrs. Russell Wells led in Intercession assisted by Mesdames R. J. Appleton, R. G. Winters, R. Walker, C. Tupper and G. H. Bache.

Mrs. E. C. Prentice led in the Dedicatory section. A brief address was given by Mrs. J. M. Brownlie.

A solo was rendered by Mrs. R. Long, accompanied on the organ by Mrs. H. C. Barlow, who was organist for the service.

The Benediction was pronounced by Mrs. G. D. Young.

The service was well attended.

Calvin McKenzie Appointed to Office Of Village Constable

Marmora — At a special meeting of Marmora Village Council on Monday evening, Mr. Calvin McKenzie, of Grimsby, was appointed village constable to succeed Mr. Percy Embury. The office of constable will be a full time job in the future. Mr. McKenzie has had about 20 years experience as a police officer and comes highly recommended for the office. He will assume his new duties next week.

Mr. Elmer Moffatt has been appointed caretaker of the various municipal buildings and in charge of work on streets. He began his duties the beginning of last week.

CLERGYMEN SCARCE

Chichester, England, March 3—(Reuters) — The Church of England is fast running out of clergymen, the Bishop of Chichester, Dr. George Bell, warned yesterday. The Prelate said the 20,000 parish clergy in England in 1941 had been reduced to 15,000 by 1951. Assistant curates numbered 4,554 in 1938, but only 2,189 10 years later.

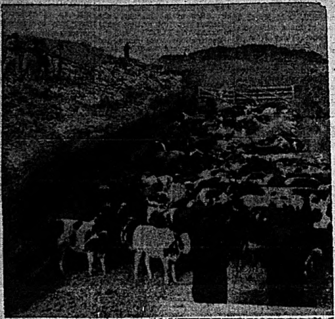
$100,000 Worth of Cattle Slaughtered, Government Promises Compensation



Four R.C.M.P. officers set about the grim task of slaughtering cattle, infected with hoof-and-mouth disease, from the farms of Konstantine Haun and Alex Duck near Regina. The cattle were herded into the huge pit and quickly dispatched. After a covering of slaked lime was thrown over the carcasses, the pit was filled with earth. Central Press Canadian.

The cattle were taken to the pit in a specially constructed van, made waterproof by an inner coating with tar to guarantee that the virus could be contained and destroyed with disinfectants. All persons involved in the slaughter wore rubber coats and shoes that could be washed free of infection. — Central Press Canadian.

6TH TYENDINAGA

6th Tyendinaga—Mr. and Mrs. Raymond McKenzie, 2nd of Sidney, also Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Humby, of Belleville, spent last Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Lorne McKenzie.

Mr. and Mrs. Grant Kerr spent the supper hour and evening on Friday with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Treverton.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Treverton and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Boldrick and Marie spent the supper hour and evening with Mr. and Mrss. Alton Goodman.

RAWDON

Rawdon—Mr. and Mrs. Martin Rivers, Gary, Colleen and Karen, of Tweed; Mr. and Mrs. Allen Fisher and Sherril, of Oshawa, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. John Ryan.

The St. Paul's Centennial observance committee have held several meetings to perfect their plans. They have decided that Centennial year will begin at high noon, May 24th, 1953, and continue until high noon, May 24th, 1954.

All the groups in Rawdon township who had a part in 1853 with the first Stirling Church will all be linked up with these special services. Many met in the log school houses for worship in those days all through Rawdon Township.

Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Brooks, Carmel, and Rev. A. E. Baker, occupy a prominent place this week in one of the leading farm journals. Last summer the Brooks family won Rev. Baker's special award for best mailbox on R.R. 3, Stirling.

Several folks in Rawdon attended the pancake supper at St. John's Parish Hall, on Shrove Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Ryan were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Shannon, Marmora.

Mr. and Mrs. Blake Sharpe and Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Shannon spent Tuesday evening with Mr. and Mrs. George Merrick.

ROSSMORE

Rossmore—Mrs. Root of Belleville visited Mrs. C. Reddick who is convalescing, one afternoon last week.

Mrs. G. Bisdee entertained the afternoon euchre club last Friday.

Mrs. Kropinak entertained a few of her girl friends at her home Saturday night.

Mrs. W. Westfall and new son, returned from the hospital Monday to her parents' home in Rossmore.

Lieut. Westfall is spending a holiday with his family in Rossmore, and renewing acquaintances in Belleville and Trenton.

Mrs. G. Denike and Laurel are spending a few days with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Pollitt in Belleville.

More Precious Than Rubies

By Nina Wilcox Putnam

The look of anger on Joe Denton's face proclaimed his innocence even before he spoke.

"Do you think I'd have waited on her like a slave all these years if I'd known it?" he demanded furiously.

"Well, thank goodness for that!" Alma said it fervently.

They began to put the puzzle together, then, each contributing a scrap of odd shaped information until the picture began to form.

Alma had realized, even before Joe said the words, that Joe could not have known that his step-mother had pretended to be a helpless invalid. But Alma felt better at having heard Joe say as much. Quickly Alma told of visiting Mrs. Denton's apartment that day and of seeing the old woman packing, standing erect and unsupported, packing a suitcase.

Joe's first surprise began to fade. He remembered other things now that he should have noticed before.

Joe Denton had known for some time that Bright Muncie had been showing his stepmother little attentions—sending her fruit or flowers—baskets which might have contained anything Tommy contributed the story of his "confidential" job and Alma her own experience—all except her finding of the cuff-link in the office with the murdered man. Some instinct warned her against speaking of this and in the heat of excitement, for they were all talking at once by now— Tommy had apparently forgotten it. But the main situation seemed clear.

"Those two are responsible for the robberies or I'll eat my hat!" Tommy declared. "They both wanted money badly—we know what Bright needed it for and Mrs. Denton—well, she just plain wanted it!"

"And so she talked me into a vacation in Mexico," said Joe, with a low whistle, "where she could dispose of the stuff quietly, divide up with Bright and then maybe come back looking perfectly innocent and start all over again. They worked with the Higgins people, obviously, through Tommy here!"

"Yes, confound it, they did!" he agreed. "But there is no sense in our just sitting here discussing this as though we were writing a detective story! They had a swell plan, but murder was something they didn't figure on. We've got to do something—and fast!"

"Do you think Bright bumped off Mr. Wheeler?" Joe asked. Alma and Tommy exchanged a quick look and she shook her head almost imperceptibly.

"It looks like it," Tommy began hotly, "otherwise why was he making that fast getaway?"

Alma's negative gesture grew more emphatic and she was afraid Joe would see it.

"There was another man with them!" she reminded them, "and from what I know of Bright's character, he's not the sort who does a dirty job himself if he can get anybody else to hold the bag for him."

"That's right," Tommy agreed. "Bright may have been along but maybe the other fellow did the shooting. What did this tall, dark stranger look like, eh, Joe?"

"Tall and dark is correct," Joe seemed surprised. "How did you know what he looked like?"

"Apollo Brown might be his name. Professional body guard. Hangs around the night spots. Bright and even Mysti liked to talk to him and hear him brag. Could be him."

"Could be!" echoed Joe. "But let's cut out all this whodunit stuff and get busy. Bright's car has got to be stopped. It's going to hurt every one of us badly but it's pretty obvious we'll have to call the police!" He was starting to pick up the phone when Tommy restrained him.

"Hold on!" he cried. "All we three want is to get back whatever has been stolen. The murder end of it is none of our business. Am I right?"

Alma began to see what Tommy was driving at. Hope and pride made her pulses run high. She nodded agreement and Tommy went on.

"Let the cops find out about the murder on their own. We are none of going to ask for publicity either for ourselves or for Trumbull's by volunteering any information on that score. If Bright is arrested—if his car is even held up and he's questioned—don't you see what it will do?"

"Give him what he deserves!" Joe said bitterly.

"Who on earth cares what Bright deserves—or what your precious stepmother deserves, either!" Tommy snapped impatiently. "I'm thinking of what will happen to Bright's father if there's a public scandal. We know Bright is a heel but to The Head, the lad's a little tin god-on-wheels! We can't let The Head down. And how about Old Victor? Don't forget Papa Victor recommended Mr. Muncie's giving Bright a position of trust—it will just about kill Papa Victor if all this comes out."

Tommy indeed had a big job on his hands. As if capturing three people, involved in murder and jewel theft, were not a large enough task, he wanted to protect the Muncie name if he could. Brighton Muncie undoubtedly was involved and there was not even a remote chance that Mrs. Denton or Apollo Brown, if that was the third man's name, would be as eager to protect Bright as Tommy was.

"But confound it all, Tommy," Joe's impatience was growing. "You can't allow Bright to get away with this!"

"I'm not going to allow him to get away with anything," Tommy's mouth was grim. "I'm going to stop Bright and bring him back."

Joe shook his head "Don't be a fool! It's too late for that now!"

"Is you car downstairs, Joe?"

"Yes, but I tell you, Tommy . ."

"Then give me the keys. They haven't got much more than half an hour's start. Undoubtedly headed south. I still might catch them on the Pulaski Skyway!"

Joe had the car keys in his hand and was reaching for his hat. "Okay! I'm coming with you!"

"Oh no you don't!" said Tommy stubbornly. "This is my show—and I've got to do it alone. I'm mixed up in it. You're not, you're innocent Stay here and look after Alma —she'll make you understand."

Before they could protest further Tommy was out of the room and running down the stairs. Alma ran after him, leaning over the bannister and shouting at him, her heart in a wild turmoil.

"Come back, Tommy! Come back!" she called.

But Tommy did not even look up.

After a moment Alma called to Tommy again, under her breath. "I shouldn't ask you to come back!" she said. "You had to go! Oh darling! Of course you had to go!"

There were tears in her eyes as she turned away and walked slowly toward the living room. Joe did not even try to ignore the fact that she was crying. He patted her shoulder understandingly.

Joe knows, she thought, he's seen what's happened to Tommy: Joe knows that man has to be reborn alone, without help. After a long moment of silence Joe cleared his throat and spoke gruffly.

"There's a gun in the glove compartment of my car," he said. "Hope Tommy finds it. Safe bet that the others are armed."

The early editions of the evening papers carried the story of the Mammoth Gold-Buying Company murder. Joe went out and bought copies of them all, and he and Alma poured over them.

Her heart seemed to stop beating at the start of each brief paragraph. Suppose she had left some trace behind her in that office? Had she touched anything? She strained to remember . . the doorknob of the private office! But she had been wearing gloves! Thank heaven, she had not removed them! The police had little to say at this stage of the investigation, beyond one significant statement. Apollo Brown was being sought for questioning.

"Looks like they believe it's a one-man job," Joe commented. So far there was nothing to hint that The House would be involved.

The hours crept by interminably and they dared not leave the apartment. As the tension of waiting grew they had less and less to say to each other but Alma knew the suspense would be intolerable without the quiet warmth of Joe Denton's persence. He radiates goodness and strength the way a clear fire sends out heat, she thought.

Joe had, silently, yet unmistakably reverted to their old, early relationship. Whether Tommy succeeded or failed in his mission—even if Tommy never came back, which was conceivable, Joe was letting her see he knew Tommy had won: that the gallant gesture, the high held head, the sudden courage of her husband had sealed her to him again, this time irrevocably.

Whatever Joe might continue to feel toward her in his secret heart, outwardly he would be nothing more than the devoted friend. Of them both! That was the glorious part of it—Tommy had won back Joe's respect as well as her own.

The silence which fell between them were not uncomfortable, but they seemed endless. Once the telephone rang and they both sprang toward it. But it was only Old Victor Blanchard worried because Alma had not come back to The House after the luncheon hour.

She reassured him, saying she had gone home because of a slight headache, and then Papa Victor rambled happily on for several minutes about his work on his successful design for the gold star pin.

"Only fancy, cherie," he told her excitedly, "I heard today that Mr. Muncie is going to name the pin after me! It is the first time The House has permitted any personal name to be connected with a product. What rejoicing I have! It is to be called 'The Victor'!"

"I am so proud and happy, dear Papa Victor!"

The old man's voice seemed to belong to another planet as she hung up. The whole tight little world that was Trumbull's was at that moment curiously remote— a well-ordered walled city in whose smug domain she had lived safely and securely ages ago.

At the moment it seemed as though she had never belonged to it, for her spirit was out there in the winter night, racing through unknown dark spaces with Tommy, anxiety blowing about her like a cold wind. At length Joe roused himself and got to his feet.

"It's late," he said. "Perhaps I ought to go."

"No," she said. "Don't go please! I couldn't sleep anyway. Please stay!"

"Lie down on the sofa then. You must get some rest."

She protested, but at length she obeyed him. Her eyes closed irresistibly though she fought sleep off, and then after a period of deep oblivion, she heard the shrilling of the telephone.

The sound of it reached down into her innermost being, dragging her back to consciousness with a pull like that of thin, silver fingers. This time it was Tommy, speaking on long distance.

"I'm speaking from the police station in Longtown, Pa.," he said. "Don't get upset, Jewels, I'm all right, but there's been a bad mess down here."

"Oh, Tommy! Are you really all right? What happened—did you catch them?" There was a slight pause at the other end as though Tommy was choosing his words carefully before answering.

"Yes, Bright and I caught them" he told her. "But there was a bad accident. Bright's car was wrecked with Mrs. Denton and Apollo Brown in it. She was killed instantly, and Brown died a few minutes later."

"And the jewels?" She was breathless with excitement and relief. "Did you get them?"

"Yes. In Mrs. Denton's suitcase. Including the Albert-Victoria Pin. The police here have them now."

"And Bright—is he with you?"

Again the curious hesitation at Tommy's end.

"Yes, he's here," he said in a queer tone.

West Germany Has One Fourth Living on State

By BRACK CURRY

Bonn, March 3 — (AP) — Western Germany is shelling out public aid to almost 13,000,000 persons — or one out of every four in the population.

That's the total of war victims, pensioners, unemployed and others who look to the government for assistance or support.

The crushing burden of social welfare nicks the West Germans for 52 per cent of all tax revenues and 22 per cent of the national income. These costs are rising. The number of aged eligible for pensions is growing. The endless flow of destitute refugees from the communist east goes on.

Many Jobless

From a population of 48,000,000, more than 1,300,000 Germans now are jobless. More than 250,000 live in barracks or the ruins of bombed buildings. Some 20 per cent of the population draws pensions of one type or another.

These are some of the hard facts of German life backing the German claim that their taxes and social charges are higher than in any other European country.

The federal government's annual report says social welfare is costing the country 17,800,000,000 marks ($4,094,000,000).

This includes: 7,345,000,000 marks ($1,689,000,000) for unemployment insurance, 1,250,000,000 marks ($287,500,000) for pensions, 9,205,000,000 marks ($2,117,000,000) for payments to war victims housing, food subsidies and assistance to isolated Berlin.

Refugees Problem

The social burden is almost as great as the entire federal budget.

The federal government cites this heavy burden as an argument against increasing West Germany's financial contribution to western defence, despite sensational increases in industrial output and foreign trade.

Some 9,000,000 refugees have crammed into overcrowded West Germany since 1945 — and they still flock in at a rate of 1,000 a day.

Most are penniless. Many are too old or too sick to work. Many depend on government handouts to keep alive.

Aside from the aged and the refugees, Germany's pension burdens extend to the families of 3,500,000 war dead and 2,000,000 war maimed people.

Had $1,000 too Much

Richmond Hill, Ont., March 3 (CP)—Short of funds while returning home Friday from a business trip, Salesman Edward Allan cashed a cheque for $1,300 at a Kapuskasing bank.

Unknown to him, the letter gave him $1,000 too much and did not realize her mistake until some time later.

Provincial police were notified and got in touch with Mr. Allan when he arrived home Saturday. When constable Ronald Seyfert went to the Allan house to tell Mr. Allen of the mistake, the salesman was just getting ready to count "this $1,300."

Explanations were made and Mr. Allan turned the $1,000 extra over to the constable.

ANTI-GERM SUIT

Veterinary doctors are being flown to widely separated places in Saskatchewan to investigate reports of other outbreaks of the dreaded hoof-mouth disease in cattle. If the reports prove correct, all of Saskatchewen livestock may be quarantined. Reporters, witnessing the slaughter of infected cattle, must wear the weird rubber-coated outfit shown here to prevent transfer of the germs on their clothing. Only precautions such as this, authorities say, will stop the disease from becoming epidemic. Central Press Canadian.

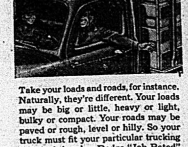
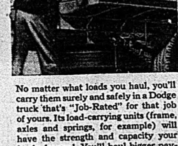
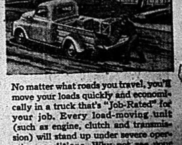
IS YOUR TRUCKING JOB DIFFERENT?
DODGE IS THE ANSWER



Take your loads and roads, for instance. Naturally, they're different. Your loads may be big or little, heavy or light, bulky or compact. Your roads may be paved or rough, level or hilly. So your truck must fit your particular trucking job. And there's a Dodge "Job-Rated" truck that's factory-engineered to do just that for you . . . with economy.



No matter what loads you haul, you'll carry them surely and safely in a Dodge truck that's "Job-Rated" for that job of yours. Its load-carrying units (frame, axles and springs, for example) will have the strength and capacity your loads demand. You'll haul bigger payloads. Your truck will perform better, last longer and save you money.



No matter what roads you travel, you'll move your loads quickly and economically in a truck that's "Job-Rated" for your job. Every load-moving unit (such as engine, clutch and transmission) will stand up under severe operating conditions. Why not see your Dodge dealer about a truck that fits that different trucking job of yours?

Ottawa Uncertain About Source Of Cattle Disease

Investigation Continuing Into All Possible Clues

Ottawa, March 4. (CP)—The Canadian government appears to be without a clue as to the source of an outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease among livestock in South Saskatchewan.

However, it is not taking any chances on further outbreaks; it is checking all possible clues.

Immigration Minister Harris announced yesterday that the government has decided to halt immigration of farm workers from areas in countries where the disease is known to exist. About 25,000 farm workers entered Canada last year, mostly from European countries.

In making the announcement, Mr. Harris expressed doubt that Willi Bruntjen, German immigrant and farm worker now being examined by government scientists as a possible carrier of the dreaded disease, was the instrument by which the disease was brought to the Regina area of Saskatchewan.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner suggested it was more logical to suspect that it came from Mexico than from an immigrant. Birds might have carried it into Saskatchewan, since it was known that birds were carriers.

In Regina, Dr. Kenneth Wells of Ottawa, associate veterinarian in Mr. Gardiner's department, discounted the possibility of the disease being spread by birds. He said it was possible but not probable. A vigil is being maintained for signs of sickness among deer.

Went Out from Plant Claim

Mr. Gardiner said his department's information was that the disease had "gone out" from the Burns meat-packing plant in Regina.

"By some means or other," he said, "there had entered the Burns plant at least one animal, if not more, that had had the disease.

"The information we have is to the effect that the disease had gone out from that plant. The means by which it got out I have not stated, because I have no information on all the points.

The day brought these other developments:

1. Mr. Gardiner imposed rigid import controls on livestock and meats and virtually told the provinces that they either buy from Canadian producers or go without.

2. Manitoba joined British Columbia and Quebec in restricting imports of livestock from other provinces.

3. In the Commons, Mr. Gardiner submitted emergency legislation to provide for "fair and reasonable compensation" to farmers whose livestock, buildings, crops and equipment are destroyed to prevent spread of the disease.

Level Charges

4. Several opposition members levelled charges of "dilatoriness and negligence" at government veterinarians.

5. M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, demanded establishment of a Commons committee to make a complete investigation of the Saskatchewan outbreak.

6. Several opposition members urged establishment of a floor-price for livestock. Mr. Gardiner indicated that no floor-price will be established for beef, for the time being.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, March 4. (CP)—Synopsis—An intense storm centre will move across Lake Huron this morning bringing strong winds and rain to southern regions, snow and freezing rain to central and northern regions. This evening as the storm moves into southern Quebec most of the precipitation will have stopped except for occasional snowflurries. However, colder air moving down from the northwest will drop temperatures about 10 degrees or so overnight. There appears to be a good chance that Wednesday will see appreciable sunshine with temperatures bordering the 40 degree mark.

Mother Charged With Murder In Death of Two

Penticton, B. C., March 4 (CP) — Mrs. Manfred Seeberg, a young housewife who survived what police allege was a family "poison pact," yesterday was charged with murder.

Police said Mr. and Mrs. Seeberg decided to kill their ailing year-old daughter, Victoria, and then take their own lives.

The child and father died. The mother somehow survived, police said, after taking the same unnamed portion which killed them.

Charged with murder in the child's death, Mrs. Seeberg was remanded to March 11 when she appeared in police court yesterday.

Bodies of the father and child were found Sunday in an auto camp south of this Okanagan district city after a telephone call from the mother brought R. C. M. P. to the scene.

The family drove here from Vancouver last Thursday in a rented automobile and registered at the auto court. They took the poison or drug sometime during the weekend, police said.

The nature of the child's illness was not disclosed.

Three Gunmen Get Large Sum In Bank Hold-Up

Toronto, March 4. (CP)—Three gunmen held up a branch of the Bank of Montreal at noon today. Police said they escaped with between $10,000 and $15,000.

The bank is at the corner of College Street and Manning Avenue in mid-town Toronto. The bandits were led by a man described as "a dapper scar-faced gentleman".

U.S. Dollar At Discount In Montreal

Montreal, March 4 (CP) —For the first time since before the Second World War the United States dollar was quoted at a discount in Montreal Foreign Exchange dealings. The Bank of Canada reported the U.S. dollar at noon at a discount of 1-32 of one per cent, down 1-32 from Monday noon.

This means that one Canadian dollar is worth $1.00 1-32 in American funds. The two currencies had been trading previously at par.

Truman Appeals to Rulers to Drop Senseless Policy of Hate and Terror

Washington, March 4 (AP)—In a dramatic peace broadcast, President Truman today appealed to the people of Russia and communist China to force their rulers to drop "their senseless policy of hate and terror."

Truman spoke from the flight deck of the voice of America's powerful new floating transmitter, the United States coast guard cutter "Courier," berthed at a city pier.

He addressed his words especially to the people of China and Russia, reminding them how the U.S. came to their aid in the Second World War.

"We helped them to save their countries," Truman said. "I want to say to these people today, as we said then: We are your friends. There are no differences between us that cannot be settled if your rulers will turn from their senseless policy of hate and terror, and follow the Munich, Ceylon, Manila, Hono- principles of peace."

Munich, Ceylon ,Manila, Honolulu and facilities of the BBC beamed the message to listeners in all parts of the world.

"Today, the aggressive policies of your rulers are forcing us to arm to defend ourselves. But we can not find in our hearts any hate against you.. I want you to know that our highest aim is peace and friendship—and an end to the horrors of war."

QUAKE AND TIDAL WAVES KILL 31 IN JAPAN

Hundreds are Injured, 2,500 Homes Destroyed

Tokyo, March 4. (AP)—A terrifying earthquake and tidal wave killed at least 31 persons in Northern Japan today, injured hundreds and destroyed more than 2,500 homes.

(Reuters News Agency said reports of the havoc were still scanty but the reports suggested that casualties were in the hundreds. Reuters said the counted dead in one village was 94 persons.)

Railway trains were toppled over. Rail lines were reported swallowed by great fissures. A coal mine partially collapsed.

Harbor facilities were badly damaged at Kushiro, a port city of 68,000 on the southeast coast of Hokkaido Island. Kushiro was the centre of destruction.

Most of the dead were in or near the town, on Japan's most northerly island. Tidal waves knocked down warehouses. The quake touched off 11 fires.

Nine persons were buried alive by a landslide.

The quake was general north of Tokyo. Tokyo itself was not damaged.

The United States 1st Cavalry Division is stationed on Hokkaido and the U.S. 24th Division is in Northern Honshu.

They reported no Americans injured. Under orders of Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, the divisions turned their facilities to aid the stricken and thousands of homeless.

Most Severe

The quake struck at 10:24 a.m., (8:24 p.m. E.S.T. Monday).

Seismologists at U.S. universities reported it was one of the most severe in the world in half a century.

Columbia University said it was the worst since Aug. 15, 1950, when a quake shook Assam, India. That was the biggest in 50 years. The Japanese quake was about the same intensity.

Some points were hit by as many as eight tidal waves. At other points the sea rose as much as five feet.

At Hachinohe, on the northeast coast of Honshu, five tidal waves swept inland. Each was larger than the one before. Then, nearly four hours after the quake, "the sea receded greatly," Tokyo meteorologists said.

Sketchy reports said most of the damage was done along the eastern coast of Hokkaido facing the epicentre of the quake.

The U.S. army reported 1,002 houses were destroyed at Shiranuka, 400 at Kiritappu, 400 at Hamanaka. Other reports said 200 houses were demolished at Obihiro, 150 at Urakawa. The town of Nemuro reported 1,200 persons homeless.

Eighteen fishing villages were inundated. Tidal waters swept 20 fighting boats away at Kawaguchi in Northern Honshu, the main island of Japan, just south of sparsely-settled Hokkaido.

Survey Shows Stabilized Price Trends no Longer Exist In Many Parts of Canada

(By The Canadian Press)

Confusion reigns on Canadian livestock and meat markets as Canada wades deeper into the maze of embargoes and restrictions resulting from the outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease in south Saskatchewan.

A Canadian Press survey shows that stabilized price trends no longer exist in many parts of Canada, but other segments are still holding fast to the old price-line watching fast moving developments cagily.

Meat prices have dropped within the last week at regional points such as Calgary and Winnipeg, but have remained unchanged at Vancouver, Halifax and Quebec City.

Movement of livestock to market is heavy in some areas, but in many others producers are holding back ready-to-market cattle and hogs fearing falling prices under climbing market surpluses.

The confusion is evident in Vancouver, as it is in other Canadian centres. Vancouver packers say there may be a meat shortage by next weekend unless British Columbia lifts its embargo against imports from Eastern Canada. Other packers say the meat stockpile is big enough to supply Vancouver for a month.

Plentiful Supplies

In any case Vancouver butcher shops appear to have plentiful supplies and the B. C. government is making no quick move to end the embargo. Meat prices are unchanged since Feb. 25. Boneless sirloin steak is selling for $1.29 a pound; sirloin (bone), 97 cents; pork loin, 69 cents; and veal chops which are getting scarce are going for $1.25 per pound.

At Edmonton, only about 20 head of cattle and 150 hogs have been received at the stockyards there and no markets have been established. Here, too, marketing is confused and indications are that shipments to market will be light for the rest of the week. Sirloin steak is going for 85 cents a pound, veal chops at 90 and pork loin at 47.

At Calgary, marketings also are light with 125 head of cattle and calves received, compared with 350 a week ago. Prices for livestock have declined with good-to-choice butcher steers going for $25 to $26.50 a hundredweight, down from $27 to $29 last week.

The Saskatchewan wheat pool reports price drops in that province, with good lightweight steers which had been selling as high as $29 a hundredweight declining to $24 and less following the outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease.

Prices Ease

At Winnipeg the price for sirloin eased to $1.02 a pound from $1.08 a week ago; pork loin slipped to 56 cents for 59, but veal chops remained steady at $1.10.

Livestock marketings have dropped. Receipts yesterday totalled 390 cattle, compared with 1,175 a week ago; calves, 105 down from 175; hogs, 820, down from 1,110.

In Quebec, retailers are holding prices steady until the situation clarifies. All wholesalers and retailers predict price declines, but say the situation is unstable and can change quickly.

No livestock marketings were reported yesterday. Sirloin steak was selling for $1.09 a pound; veal chops at 95 cents and pork loin at 45 and 48 cents.

Halifax meat prices also are unchanged, with sirloin steak selling for $1.15 a pound; pork loins at 33 and veal at 93.

Simple Sentences Used to Teach 40,000 New Canadians English

Ottawa, March 4—(CP)—In a Vancouver night school, a shy young man forced out of a Czechoslovakian university because he did not want to be a communist, points to his desk and says slowly, deliberately:,

"I sit at my desk."

Then he points to the front of the room, to the teacher, and just as slowly and carefully continues:

"The teacher sits on a chair."

Through these simple sentences he is learning the language of his new country. He is one of 40,000 new Canadians taking such courses.

These are the latter segments of a flow of some 630,000 immigrants absorbed by Canada since the end of the Second World War. Many had no knowledge of French or English.

"We native-born Canadians," said Immigration Minister Harris in a statement on Canadian Education Week, March 2-8, "take for granted the ability to speak either or both of the two official languages of Canada . . .

"We perhaps fail sometimes to appreciate the barriers which can be created for an immigrant because of language difficulties."

That's why the Immigration and Citizenship Department emphasizes need for new arrivals to get acquainted with the English or French language as quickly as possible.

Organize Night Classes

Provincial and municipal education authorities are co-operating by organizing night classes for newcomers, with the federal government supplying text books free.

"At the moment," said Mr. Harris, "the estimate is that there are about 40,000 adults attending these classes across Canada."

As the newcomers progress, they learn something about the country; its history, its resources, its industry and its governments.

A number of immigrant children are attending regular day schools.

Said Mr. Harris:

"For instance, at a rural school near Ottawa, there is a Dutch boy who headed his class within six months after his arrival in Ottawa. He progressed from the second to the sixth grade in three months. At Kingston, Ont., there is a young man who earned three university scholarships after only two years in Canada."

In Ontario alone some 23,000 are in 756 classes. British Columbia has more than 5,000 going to school and Manitoba about 4,000.

For the thousands who can't get to school, the department has special texts and work material for home study. This material has been supplied to more than 4,000 immigrants in the last six years.

Accused Never Quarrelsome Says His Employer

Cornwall, Ont., March 4 —(CP) — Allan Alguire, 29-year-old Harrison's Corners farmer, yesterday told a jury he had never found Elias Meek quarrelsome or quick-tempered.

Alguire was testifying at the murder trial of the young farmhand charged with the fatal stabbing Sept. 28 of Alguire's wife. Meek was judged mentally fit to stand trial for murder last week. During the two-day session, psychiatrists, doctors and concerned parties gave evidence. The trial continues today.

Alguire said that on the day of the alleged murder, he had gone to a neighbor's farm to help fill a silo. He was accompanied by his other hired man, Austin Clacher. He told the 21-year-old Meek he would be gone for the day.

When he returned, Alguire found his wife's body lying on a walk behind the farmhouse kitchen. In court, he identified a heavy machine hammer found beside the body as one similar to a hammer kept in the barn and a 16-gauge shotgun as one he kept in the granary.

Alguire testified he paid Meek $17 a week to work for him while giving the man his board and lodging. He said there was never any ill feeling between himself and Meek.

To his knowledge, Alguire said, a similar relation existed between his wife and Meek.

Meek was taken into custody at his father's house, a mile from the scene of the slaying after he had hidden in neighboring barns for 14 hours while police scoured eastern Ontario in search of him.

Police found a blood-smeared butcher knife and the machine hammer that was entered as an exhibit yesterday, near Mrs. Alguire's body.

CONFUSION REIGNS ON LIVESTOCK, MEAT MARKETS

Restrictions, Embargoes In All Directions

(By The Canadian Press)

Canada's livestock and meat-marketing muddle grows bigger by the day.

Latest of the restrictions, resulting from an outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease in South Saskatchewan, was the Manitoba announcement yesterday that it will ban all livestock shipments from Western Canada and even trans-shipments across the province to Eastern Canada.

This blocked the Canadian government plan to bring a measure of stabilization to the crippled Canadian market by easing restrictions and allowing some western cattle into eastern markets if eastern provinces made a request for them.

Here is a bird's-eye-view of some of the restrictions:

1. All living animals and meats in a 10-municipality quarantine around Regina are banned from movement outside of that area.

2. All living animals in a buffer zone within 50 miles of the quarantine area may be slaughtered for marketing only at the nearest packing plant.

Policy Blocked

3. Living animals and meats in other parts of the Prairies may be moved across the country to any province that wants them, but the federal government will force no province to take them. The Manitoba ban blocks this federal policy.

4. British Columbia has barred shipments of meats and livestock from all eastern provinces. This hits particularly at Alberta which normally obtains a big share of the B.C. market.

5. Quebec has imposed an import control system, restricting imports of meats and livestock from all provinces except under permit.

6. The United States has embargoed all shipment of Canadian livestock and meats, as well as some animal products, hay and straw until the disease in Canada is eradicated and for a period of 60 days after eradication is completed.

7. The Canadian government, in a move to protect the Canadian market against foreign production, banned all imports of meat and livestock—with the exception of canned meat—except under permit.

This entangling network of restrictions could have these effects:

British Columbia, which produces only about 10 per cent of her meat needs, either will reopen trade channels for Alberta livestock or face a meat shortage.

Quiet Returns to Montreal City Hall As Abduction Rumors Prove False

Montreal, March 4. (CP)—Cosmopolitan Montreal, where strange and zany happenings are almost the rule rather than the exception, came up with a Lulu yesterday.

First, city fathers got into a tizzy after reports that one of their number had been kidnapped to prevent him taking part in a vote to elect a new councillor.

Radio stations and newspapers played it up big. Police said they hadn't heard of any kidnapping. Then, it turned out that the whole affair had snowballed from an innocent remark.

Here's what happened:

Yesterday was the day to elect a successor to the late Councillor Israel Morin. The post, a Class "B" category, finally went to Fabien Leberge but before it did:

One councillor told another jokingly that the latter's candidate could not count on the vote of Bruno Lepine because Mr. Lepine had disappeared.

This, through repetition grew into talk of kidnapping.

Reports flew thick and fast. Mr. Lepine had been kidnapped. He had been forced into an automobile in front of his home by several men. The vote would be close. Mr. Lepine's vote could swing the election one way or the other.

The council meeting got under way. Slowly, order came out of chaos.

One councillor said the missing man had been at his home a short time before and he had said he wasn't going to attend the meeting.

The matter wasn't settled yet. Council leader Dave Rochon asked that consideration of the election be delayed as Mr. Lepine was not present.

This brought protests from a number of the city fathers who wanted to know why the absence of one man should hold up the work of the council.

Mr. Rochon withdrew his motion.

Mr. Lepine wasn't available for comment.

Commuter Train Hits Passenger Stalled at Suburb

'Looked Like Battlefield' Says Soldier Survivor

Rio De Janeiro, March 4 (CP) — More than 100 persons were killed in a train collision near here today. About 200 suffered injuries. The wreck was the worst in Brazil's history.

A train crowded with commuters coming into Rio De Janeiro crashed into a stalled passenger train near the suburb of Anchieta, about 19 miles southwest of the capital.

Bodies were strewn about the wreckage and some were seen floating in the nearby Pavuna River.

"It looked like a battlefield," a survivor, a former soldier, said.

Two cars on the passenger train were derailed at Anchieta. The commuter train which hit it was en route from another suburb and travelling at a high speed.

Police, fire brigades and troops were called out to help take the victims to hospital.

Rescue workers hacked through twisted coaches to bring out the injured. Fifteen were reported in serious condition.

The crash is believed to be the worst ever in Brazil, which has had several train disasters over the past year.

Last December 53 died in a derailment near Fortaleza, Para. in June 1951, fifty-one died in a packed train which became a raging inferno after hitting a gasoline truck at a level crossing.

Meanwhile, a radio reporter broadcasting from the scene said 75 dead had been counted, with the injured estimated at 200. He said there were not enough ambulances to carry the dead away.

Bubonic Plague Sweeping North Korea Report

San Francisco, March 4 (AP)—The communist Peiping radio said yesterday Gen. Kim Il Sung, chairman of the military council and Premier of North Korea, has issued a decree placing the country in a virtual state of emergency to combat bubonic plague

The red broadcast, heard by the Associated Press, said the decree ordered a national extraordinary anti - epidemic committee, the ministry of health, the army medical bureau and other government agencies to "mobilize all forces" to wipe out germ-carrying insects.

The reds have persistently accused the United States of causing the plague by dropping germs behind red lines. The United Nations command has denied the charge as a "cover-up" for an epidemic of natural causes.

$10,000 Loss At Wilberforce Memorial Arena

Wilberforce, Ont., March 4 (CP — A $10,000 fire today burned the front end out of the arena in this community 75 miles north of Peterborough. Volunteer firefighters saved the building from destruction.

Cause of the outbreak was not known. Florence Billings, who lives near the arena, saw flames about 6:30 a.m. and gave the alarm.

The fire burned about 50 feet off the front of the $25,000 arena, completed in 1950. Destroyed were offices, dressing rooms, a snack bar, canned goods and other stock. Hockey equipment stored in the building also was lost.

New Constitution Adopted By Puerto Ricans

San Juan, Puerto Rico, March 4—(AP) — Puerto Rican voters overwhelmingly adopted a new constitution yesterday to give 100-mile-long island self government as a "free commonwealth" associated with the United States.

Final returns in the ratification election, announced last night, gave 373,418 votes for the constitution, 82,473 against it.

The island has been a U.S. colony since the Spanish - American War. Congress gave it the power to elect its own president in 1947. It already elected its legislature.

The new constitution ends U.S. congressional power to repeal the island's laws, and removes the U.S. president's power to appoint auditors and supreme court justices. It leaves open the way for Puerto Rico to become a state and permits landing of U.S. Armed Forces in case of invasion or rebellion.

RECALLS MARRIAGE

Dixie, Ont., March 4—(CP)—Mrs. Elizabeth McCallum, who celebrated her 84th birthday yesterday, recalled her marriage in 1890. She and her husband drove in a democrat to the railway station and went on their honeymoon by train—to Toronto, 10 miles from here.

Business Men's Gym Class Starts at Y

A special gymnasium class for Business and Professional Men has been organized by the YMCA and is described in an interesting piece of literature just released. The classes will be held on Wednesdays and Fridays at noon during the months of March and April. March is described as a month of low physical resistance when reduced vitality after the strain of long winter makes business men susceptible to fatigue and illness.

The body building exercise in the form of light calisthenics, games is directed to the special needs of business men and is being led by Ants Juurup a graduate in physical education of the University of Stockholm, who has specialized knowledge in Swedish gymnastics recognized the world over as the most superior form for physical fitness.

The folder also tells considerable about the individual and personal value to be obtained from "Y" calisthenics. The comments are good advice for any business man who would keep fit.

NEW SIGHTING INSTRUMENT

New York, March 4 — (AP) — Civil defence workers yesterday revealed a new sighting instrument to pin-point the spot where an atom bomb hits. It is intended to aid in deploying civil defence forces around the area.

There was a large number in attendance and the floral and spiritual offerings testified to the esteem in which the deceased was held.

Rev. J. J. Buckley said the prayers at the graveside in St. James' Cemetery.

Prime Minister Will be Requested To Open Fair

Picton—Much enthusiasm was in evidence as directors of Prince Edward Agricultural Society met Saturday night to make plans for the county's Centennial Fair at Picton, on Aug. 20-21-22-23.

It was decided to extend an invitation to Hon. Louis St. Laurent, Prime Minister of Canada to officially open the Centennial celebration.

It was also decided to have a raffle on a car to be drawn the last day of the fair. A committee composed of E. W. Henderson, H. E. Spencer, Willis Sills, Phil Dodds, E. J. Bateson, Bert Jones, Herb Atherton and County Warden Calvin Hughes to be in charge and open tenders on cars, on Wednesday, March 5th.

The Society will seek the cooperation of town and county councils in supporting the fair on this special occasion. Unlike the majority of fairs, that at Picton has received no municipal grants. Committee to meet County Council includes: F. J. Webster, E. W. Henderson and Phil Dodds; to meet Town Council, E. W. Henderson, P. Dodds, Brian Dodds, H. E. Spencer, Elmer Gerow.

Directors endorsed the executive's action in engaging the large Bernard and Barry Midway and setting of the August dates, as explained by president Henderson.

The need of more accommodation for horses was stressed and it was decided to investigate the possibility of erecting sheds. It was suggested by Elmer Gerow that a horse show at night would be welcomed and its possibility will be explored.

CHARGES VIOLATION

United Nations, N. Y., March 4 — (AP) — Albania charged in a letter to United Nations yesterday that Britain violated the U.N. charter by permitting a meeting of anti-communist eastern Europeans in London during January.

Additional Accommodation Will be Subject of Debate At Meeting at Collegiate

City Council will meet with members of the Bay of Quinte High School Board to discuss provision of additional high school accommodation for the area. The meeting will be held at the Collegiate library on Wednesday evening when a representative of the Ontario Department of Education will be present.

In asking council members to attend the meeting, Alderman Chas. Hyde, yesterday at city council told councillors that additional accommodation was a necessity at the local high school.

However, a decision had to be made whether a new school or an addition to the present collegiate would best serve the purpose. If a new school was built it could be placed outside the city.

The three municipalities of Thurlow, Tyendinaga and Ameliasburg will be given until the end of 1954 to completely pay off their indebtedness for high school education purchased from the city prior to the formation of the Bay of Quinte High School Area.

$83,348 Owing

Alderman Hyde said the full amount owing by the three municipalities was $83,348, of which roughly $58,000 would be paid by the Ontario government through grants. The city would receive this amount almost immediately. The balance of $25,370 would be paid by the three municipalities.

Under the agreement reached by the city finance committee and representatives of the three rural municipalities one half of the amount owing will be paid in December 1953, and one half in December 1954.

Mayor A. M. Haig congratulated Alderman Hyde and the members of his committee in the arrangements with the three rural municipalities regarding payment of back educational costs. He said the matter had been very amicably settled.

Referring to a joint meeting of city council and board members planned for Wednesday evening, however, the mayor said he did not approve of a full council attending. Such meetings with all members present were just a "waste of time", he said.

Council Will Take No Direct Action On Petition

City council will take no direct action with respect to the petition of Coleman Street residents who are opposing the application of the local Canadian Legion for a beverage room licence.

A recommendation for city council to petition the Ontario Liquor Control Board asking that the licence be not granted, was defeated in council after some discussion on the matter. The recommendation was placed by Alderman Chas. Hyde.

Mayor A. M. Haig said he was not certain that council should take any part in the matter. He said that personally he did not feel the Coleman Street area was a good location for the Canadian Legion hall but he pointed out he had heard of no serious objection to the hall being opened at its present site.

Alderman Angus Duffy agreed that it was not a problem for council to be mixed up with. He said the granting of a licence was a matter for the Liquor Control Board to decide.

Alderman Rollins noted that the L.C.B. would be sitting in the city on Friday to deal with the matter.

When the recommendation for council to add its voice to the petition of Coleman Street residents, was voted on, it was defeated by a wide margin.

H. & P. E. Regt. Trumpet Band Being Formed

Lieut. Armand Duffy, officer in charge of the organization of the new Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment Trumpet Band, today expressed high hopes of producing a band of the highest calibre.

Corporals Pomeroy and Taylor of the RCAF Main Station Trumpet Band have volunteered their help and 27 new instruments have also been ordered.

Recruiting for the band has been progressing favorably, according to Lieutenant Duffy. Preference is being given to experienced musicians but it is pointed out that anyone interested in this project is invited to enquire at the armories.

The first practice session of the band will be held tomorrow night in the Main Armories at eight o'clock.

Tree Removal Causes Debate In City Council

City policy in tree removal came up for a lengthy discussion in city council yesterday as members voiced their opinion on whether the public works department should be in the tree cutting business for trees on private property and whether healthy trees should be cut.

Ald. Thomas, as Chairman of Public Works, brought the matter up for discussion, pointing out his department was getting requests from residents to have healthy trees cut.

"Council is spending $1,000 this year on tree planting and we would like some direction as to the future policy of tree cutting," he said.

He said a survey of the city had revealed there were about 30 diseased trees on city property which needed cutting. The budget for tree cutting this year had been set at $4,000. Some trees cost up to $150. to cut, it was stated.

Caution Urged

The consensus of council members was that Belleville was noted for the beauty of its trees and council should proceed with caution where tree cutting was concerned. Some Councillors felt healthy trees on city property should not be cut under any circumstances. Others modified this by stating if a resident wanted a healthy tree on city property cut, he at least should pay for the cutting.

Alderman Lattimer said the policy of the city should be not to cut more trees that it was prepared to replace, while Alderman Temple said no hard and fast rule in the matter could be set. Alderman Argue said Belleville was noted for its trees and council should not listen to "every Tom, Dick and Harry" who wanted a tree cut.

Matter of Negotiation

"We should be guided by principles," Mayor Haig pointed out. "If the request is to have a tree on private property cut, then that is a matter of negotiation with the public works as to the cost of removing the tree. But if the tree is on city property, then that is another matter."

Alderman Rollins suggested that only requests from owners, not tenants, should be considered.

The question of trees being killed by excessive pruning was mentioned by Ald. Thomas. He said the public utilities sometimes pruned a tree to such an extent that it died and then the city had to take it down. He suggested that the PUC confer with the city engineer before pruning and if there was danger of the tree being killed then the PUC should take the tree out at their own expense.

Fire Destroys Grimmon Home At Black River

Picton — Fire completely destroyed the Grimmon homestead, at Black River bridge, about seven miles south of Picton, at noon yesterday. Contents from the lower part of the house were carried out, but valuable furnishings, and all of the family's clothing, upstairs, were lost. The homestead was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Grimmon and their son and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Grimmon. Only Mrs. R. Grimmon was in the house when the fire broke out upstairs, from an unknown source.

Neighbors were quickly on the scene and assisted in carrying out household effects. A fire truck from the R.C.A.F. station arrived in time to save a shed near the house. The wind was blowing away from other buildings. Last summer, a firplace was added to the modern home. Loss will reach $10,000.

TEACHER ON HAND

St. Thomas, March 4—(CP)—Mrs. Walter Owen of Union, first teacher in a little one-room school when it was built 50 years ago at Locke, was on hand yesterday to see the opening of a new school complete with a combination auditorium and gymnasium. She told parents that at first she had no blackboard and wrote with blue chalk on plaster walls.

Five New Firemen Hired To Provide Additional Men Required Under New Statute

Five additional firemen were hired by city council at their regular meeting Monday afternoon. The five new men will go to work on March 15th and will undergo a one-month training period.

There were over 40 applications for the five positions on the fire department, council was informed. Four of the five men hired are veterans of the last war. All are residents of the city and are between 21 and 30 years of age. The five additional men were necessary to reduce the work week to 56 hours as required by provincial labor statutes

Tenders for new uniforms, coats and helmets for the five new firemen are being called.

Council approved of Daylight Saving time to run from April 27th to September 28th.

Council approved for tenders to be called for the purchase of three new three-ton dump trucks, with present equipment to be turned in. All trucks to be traded in are five years old or older, it was stated. Tenders will also be called for crushed rock and other road building materials. Purchase of a new Remington adding machine was approved at a cost of $283.50.

Sale of four building lots on the north side of the highway Hastings Drive to Louis Maraskas was referred back by council. No action was taken by council when it was suggested these were the lots desired by the parks board.

The city's share of the cost of providing services for the Bayview Heights veterans' housing area was approximately $70,000, council was informed. This covers construction of roadways, sidewalks, storm sewers and watermains, which had to be provided by the city under their contract with Central Mortgage and Housing.

$160,000 Total Cost

Total cost of the work was $160,000, but of this amount $60,000 was provided by Central Mortgage and Housing in lieu of taxes and to be paid back by the city, and $30,000 provided by the provincial government.

The city receives $75 per year in taxes for each housing unit, this being turned back to Central Mortgage and Housing to reduce the $60,000 forwarded for services.

Under general business Alderman Argue brought up the question of traffic conditions at the intersection of Front and Campbell Street. There was no discussion.

Picton, Bloomfield, Wellington Pledging for Red Cross Drive

Someone made the remark at one time that the people of Prince Edward County are inclined to be "clannish."

Be that as it may. To be "clannish" at times does not do any harm.

If the nations of the world were more clannishj perhaps the present-day worries, trials and tribulations would not be so heavy.

"Clannish," according to the distionary means "united in feeling."

Three Committees

That is exactly what the three Red Cross campaign committees which have been set up in the sister county want the residents to be on March 11th when in cooperation with Belleville and Hastings county communities they will hold the "blitz" drive for their quota of the fund.

Committees have been established in Picton, Wellington and Bloomfield. Frederick L. Ward, Q.C. heads the strong Picton committee assisted by Sheriff Herbert Colliver representing the Canadian Legion branch of the town.

Mr. Donald Baxter, ex M.P., heads his committee in Bloomfield and it could not be in better hands while in Wellington while Lieut. Col. W. A. Davern is chairman of a strong lakeside village directorate.

Has Fine Record

On its past record Prince Edward will contribute its share and probably oversubscribe its allotment in the forthcoming drive. In the past the good folk of the "garden county" to the south have never been known to falter when succor was necessary for the needy.

In war and in peace, Prince Edward people have stood loyally by their fellow Canadians, and fellow men of the world. There is no reason to believe they will fail at a moment when the Red Cross needs the assistance of every Canadian, financial and otherwise, if its many phases of humanitarian work are to continue.

Peewee Puckists To Play During Series

Walter Bent, convener of peewee hockey in Belleville, has written a letter to the sports department of the Ontario Intelligencer in which he wishes to clear the minds of parents of peewee hockey players, with regard to the game played last night against Peterborough at the Memorial Arena.

Mr. Bent stated that it was the original intention of the peewee executive to play all the 23 players chosen for the all-star team but, according to information from the coach of the Peterborough club, only eighteen players are permitted to be dressed.

The peewee series, originally planned as an exhibition affair, has been changed into a two game, total point series among Peterborough, Belleville and Kingston, with the winners being awarded a cup.

Mr. Bent hastens to assure the parents that any of the boys who did not dress for last night's game will be used during the series.

Spring is Just Around Corner

Spring is just around the corner!

At least that must be the inference taken from the fact that tulips are shoving their noses above the ground in city flower beds, while the crows have already returned from the south and the groundhogs have come out of winter hibernation.

Several city residents have been heard to comment that tulips in beds at the south side of buildings are sticking their noses above the ground. Sgt. George Westlake of the city police department reports he saw tulips appear in his flower bed on February 25th, while John Bly, Bleecker Ave., bread deliveryman, says he has seen tulips in several parts of the city.

Sunday a drive through the country revealed that the crows are back in full force, while farmers report that the groundhogs have also put in their appearance.

So hurry up Spring, everything is waiting.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, March 4 — (CP) — Industrial prices climbed strongly today in early afternoon stock market dealings as strong noon support boosted most issues. Other sections — golds, base metals and western oils — made little headway.

Volume for the first three hours was 1,631,000 shares.

Papers, refining oils and manufacturing companies led industrials upward while utilities, constructions and textiles strengthened steadily. Steels and agricultures were mixed but retail stores and foods dipped.

Western oils posted a slight majority of losses but changes were moderate. Central - Leduc, Gridoil, Reef Petroleum, Trans Empire and United Oil were among the losers. Canada Southern and Pacific pushed upward.

Base metal leaders were mixed as Consolidated Smelters, International Nickel, Labrador and Steep Rock strengthened while East Sullivan, Golden Manitou and Waite Amulet weakened.

Dome, Kerr Addison and Bralorne weakened among senior golds. Juniors dipped sharply but prospects and holding companies were firm.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, March 4 — (CP) — Ontario stockyard trading was active today on the light supply received. Prices were from 50 cents to $1 higher on all classes of cattle with the exception of bulls. Receipts: cattle 150; calves 60; hogs 360; sheep and lambs 50. The leftover from Monday was 200 cattle.

Good to choice weighty steers sold at $27-$28.50 with a few tops selling at $29. Good light steers were at $26-$28. Good heifers were selling from $26-$27 while common sold downward to $21. Medium to good cows sold from $17-$21.50 with common at $12-$14. Bulls sold mostly from $17-$20 according to quality. A few choice fed yearlings sold at $28-$30.

Calves were steady at $32-$34 for choice vealers and from $22-$31 for common to medium.

Hog prices were at $26 for Grade A with sows $15 dressed.

Panel Discussion Held by Members Of Rotary Club

The program following the Rotary luncheon yesterday took the form of a panel of six Rotarians who discussed the Rotary magazine delving into such angles as the writers, the pictures, and articles of interest as well as pointing out the benefits which should be derived by every reader.

The panel, under the chairmanship of Fred Wilson, was comprised of Don McKinnon, Bill Hurst, Rogers Riedel, Walter Pierce, Harry Burns and Freeman Burrows.

Each member of the panel took a letter of the word Rotary and offered several other words beginning with the same letter and showed how they affected the club and the magazine.

Reasons Pointed Out

Many and various reasons were pointed out by the panel members why every Rotarian should read his magazine.

Rotarian D. T. Martin expressed the appreciation of the club at the conclusion of the panel's discussion.

Visiting guests and Rotarians included Dr. W. B. Beattie of Belleville, Major Carl Hiltz of the Toronto Salvation Army, and A. F. Morse of Edmonds, Washington. They were introduced by Rotarian James Allan and welcomed by Rotarian Dr. Bert Howard.

James T. Davis, secretary-manager of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, was introduced to the club and welcomed by president Court Miller as their newest member.

A birthday rose was presented to Mackenzie Robertson on behalf of the club by W. J. Morrison. All Rotary members sent a birthday greeting to Leo Riggs, a Rotarian who is presently in Florida.

A contest conducted among the club members to select a name for the Rotary bulletin was won by Mayor A. McLean Haig with second prize going to Walter Pierce. Each was presented with an appropriate gift for his prize-winning effort. The winning name was "Rotopics."

C. Arthur Bateman, speaking on behalf of George Lanning, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, offered suggestions regarding the raising of funds for crippled children's work. It was decided to raise the money by donations from the club members. Mr. Bateman reported that over $1,000 has been raised in this manner to date.

The Crippled Children's Committee and the directors of the club held meetings following the luncheon.

Traffic Blocked When Transport Upsets on Road

Skidding on the ice-covered highway and overturning in the roadway, a large transport loaded with empty beer bottles completely blocked traffic on Highway No. 2 at Shannonville early today. The transport turned over directly in the road and traffic had to be rerouted.

The westbound Husband Transport driven by William Furlong, Toronto, went out of control on a curve just east of the village. Damage to the transport was estimated at $2,000. The driver was unhurt.

In a second accident occurring just previously a Canada Breweries transport skidded on the curve and went into the ditch. The transport remained on its wheels and was not damaged. Driven by William Waddell, the transport had a full load of beer.

Both accidents were investigated by O. P. P. Constable Williamson assisted by Constable E. L. C. Smith.

Barbers to Close Saturday Night At 7 O'Clock

The hours in which male residents of the city may acquire a "shave and a haircut" will be reduced by 120 minutes Saturday as result of a by-law passed in city council yesterday.

The by-law which goes into effect immediately calls upon barbershops in the city to close Saturday evening at 7 o'clock, instead of at 9 o'clock as has been the custom.

At a previous council meeting barbershop owners operating in the city presented a petition asking that the closing hour be changed. The petition was checked for signatures and with the required percentage of names appearing the by-law was drawn and passed.

Trenton Hangar Will Cost $1,000,000

Trenton (Special).—A contract for the construction of a new million dollar hangar at the Trenton RCAF main station has been awarded to the Carter and Hall construction company of Toronto, it was announced from the air station today.

The new hangar will be known as No. 9 hangar and will be constructed to the west of the present No. 8 hangar. It will be the nearest hangar to the town of Trenton.

The hangar will be of the most modern type construction and will be bomb resistant. Several of a similar type are planned for construction on other air stations in Canada. The new hangar will have a door height clearance of 34 feet and will be able to accommodate the largest type planes. Construction is expected to commence in two weeks' time.

It was also announced that new gun butts will be constructed west of the new hangar. The new gun butts will permit ground testing of machine guns without removal from the planes.

Also to be constructed is a new $250,000 equipment storage close to the bay shore.

Engineer Riga Quits His Post

Trenton . (Special) — Town Engineer A. Riga, who took over his present job last August, has tendered his resignation to town clerk O. W. Larry, it was learned today. Engineer Riga replaced R. E. Davey.

Mayor Kenneth Couch is expected to call a special meeting of council this week to deal with the matter.

Mr. Riga spoke to town council Friday night, asking the cooperation of councillors in instituting an incentive work plan in the public works department.

Engineer Riga is the third engineer for Trenton in the last five years. The job pays $3,600 per year.

Not Caused by Gulls

Nice, France, March 4 — (AP) — Officials investigating the crash of an Air France airliner near Nice airport discarded today the theory it was forced down by dashing into a flight of sea gulls.

The plane, a four-engined, French-made Languedoc, plowed into an olive grove shortly after taking off yesterday on a flight to Paris, killing 37 of its 38 passengers and crew members.

Airline and government aviation investigators said today there was no reason to believe a flight of birds caused its two port engines to fail.

OTTAWA

Mr. Harris said that any farm workers now en route to Canada from areas where the disease is known to exist will not be allowed to go on Canadian farms until they and their effects are thoroughly disinfected.

A boatload of European immigrants is expected at Halifax in a few days. Those who are farm workers will be sent to a decontamination station at Montreal operated by the Federal Agriculture Department.

Face Worst Shortage

H. H. Hannam, president of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, said that the immigration ban likely will mean that Canada will face the "worst year in our history in farm labor shortages." But, he added, "we cannot afford to take chances with foot-and-mouth disease."

Mr. Harris said it was quite unlikely that Bruntjen, a German immigrant who had sailed for Canada Oct. 19 last, had carried the disease to this country.

Bruntjen, who worked for a few days on the farm of Leonard Waas, where the foot-and-mouth outbreak may have first occurred, had placed himself at the disposal of immigration authorities in Vancouver last week when he learned that he was being sought as a possible carrier of the disease. He had been most co-operative.

Mr. Gardiner said it had not yet been established that there was foot-and-mouth disease on the Waas farm. On Nov. 26, Waas called his veterinarian and reported an outbreak of disease among his cattle. The veterinarian could not go to the farm, but he diagnosed the disease as stomatititis, a type of virus.

Diagnosed Disease

About Dec. 2, Wass called in the agriculture department's veterinarians in Regina. No fewer tha nseven veterinarians went to the Wass farm and district and diagnosed the disease as stomatititis.

Wass' animals improved and nothing more might have been heard about the disease if there had not been an outbreak in the Burns packing plant in Regina.

Deliveries to the packing-plant were traced, and Wass was among those who had made deliveries seven days prior to the outbreak.

The outbreak in the plant was followed by outbreaks along Wascana Creek. The creek carried offal from the plant and was used by some farms as a source of water supply.

Referring to criticism of the department's chief veterinarian, Dr. T. Childs, Mr. Gardiner said he felt Dr. Childs had done a good job.

If it was proven before the House Agricultural Committee that Dr. Childs "did not do a good job, that's soon enough for me to start criticizing," said Mr. Gardiner.

Not Lacking in Judgment

He did not think there was any evidence that anyone in the department had been lacking in judgment in the early stages of the outbreak.

Progressive Conservative leader George Drew disagreed and said he wanted to know why it had taken from Nov. 26 until Feb. 25 to diagnose the disease as foot-and-mouth.

There had been "gross negligence," said Mr. Drew, and Mr. Gardiner, instead of putting up a "smoke-screen," should have admitted there was negligence and said the government was acting to stop it. Any qualified graduate veterinarian was trained to make on-the-spot tests for foot-and-mouth disease.

John Charlton (PC-Brant), a graduate veterinarian, said it would have been possible to find out within four to six days of the outbreak whether it was foot-and-mouth disease. Tests could have been made right on the affected farms.

To Take Personal Charge

Mr. Gardiner, who disclosed that he plans to go to Regina Thursday to take personal charge of the fight against the outbreak, said the government must treat fairly the owners of slaughtered animals. In all, about 850 head of cattle, 190 swine and 140 sheep are to be shot.

The slaughtered animals will be valued by government men on the spot. Farmers will be able to appeal to a three-man board from the valuations fixed by men in the field. The board will be headed by George Robertson, secretary of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool.

If farm buildings are suspected of being polluted with the disease, they will be destroyed as well.

John Diefenbaker (PC—Lake Centre) said the legislation should state that the farmers will receive the "economic value" of their cattle. Mr. Gardiner replied that the government's formula would make it possible for farmers to receive more than the economic value.

C.C.F. members said there should be compensation to farmers who have no cattle destroyed, but who cannot market their cattle because they are in the quarantine area.

Some of the members reacted unfavorably to the government's decision to ban imports of meat and livestock to other countries.

Hon. Earl Rowe (PC—Dufferin-Simcoe) charged the move was made to force Quebec and British Columbia to lift restrictions against imports of livestock and cattle from western provinces. Mr. Gardiner replied that the ban might have that effect, but it was not imposed for that purpose.

The ban on imports from other countries was to protect the Canadian market for Canadian products. All the livestock that reached the market would be slaughtered. If surpluses developed, markets would be sought in Britain and elsewhere.

THAT PRINTING PLANT AGAIN

A request, or maybe we should call it a demand, has been made by George Drew, the federal leader of the Progressive Conservatives, that there should be a complete and public investigation into the tragedy which occurred last Thursday at the Public Printing Bureau's new building in Hull.

Anyone who reads this or any other daily newspaper will recall that a part of the uncompleted building collapsed, killing one workman and injuring nine others, three severely.

Hon. Alphonse Fournier, the minister of public works, under whose authority the building is being constructed, has announced that there will be an investigation. Mr. Fournier did not say, however, that this investigation would be held publicly, or even that the results would be publicized.

The present is not the first occasion that attention has been focussed upon this establishment which is being constructed to house the Public Printing Bureau. For example, D. S. Harkness, the Progressive Conservative member of the House of Commons for Calgary East, has kicked up a row about it several times. Mr. Harkness has asserted that the original estimate of $11,000,000 was far too much to spend on any such project. More recently, Mr. Harkness has declared that the original estimate was inaccurate, and that, before the project is completed, it is going to cost between $16,000,000 and $20,000,000.

After Mr. Drew had expressed the opinion, following last Thursday's tragedy, that a complete and public inquiry should be held into what caused it, Mr. Harkness entered the picture again. He said: "There has been too much secrecy about this building all along. With this accident, we have a renewed feeling that something is wrong and that the whole undertaking requires a public inquiry."

Both Mr. Drew and Mr. Harkness may have political motives for asking for a public inquiry into the erection of this new government printing plant, but what of that? This public inquiry would cost only a trivial amount in relation to this multi-million dollar undertaking; even if the public inquiry had no other effect, it would help convince these Progressive Conservative critics of the government that the government is trying to eliminate abuses.

LET THERE BE LIGHT

Charlotte Whitton, who is mayor of Ottawa and one of Canada's outstanding women, has expressed the opinion that the foot and mouth disease which has broken out among the cattle on the plains of southern Saskatchewan was introduced into this country by Communist agents. Miss Whitton points out that germ warfare is known to have received careful study behind the Iron Curtain.

In the same connection, it will be recalled that the Montreal Gazette expressed a strong suspicion, not long ago, that the numerous and highly destructive fires which have occurred in recent years among installations of the department of national defence were due to the agents of Communism.

Officers of the federal government's health department and agriculture department are said to be "skeptical" of Miss Whitton's suspicions. Just the same, we hope that no effort is spared in finding out by whom and in what manner the foot and mouth disease was introduced into Canada. We hope also that the information collected is made public, which has not yet been done in connection with the national defence department's fires.

ONTARIO SHOWED WISDOM

By retaining its own taxation rights, instead of surrendering them to the federal government and accepting a subsidy in return for them, Ontario obtained about $8,000,000 in additional revenue during the last five years, Premier Leslie Frost told the Ontario legislature, Thursday last.

Mr. Frost did not disclose whether his government would reject Ottawa's recent proposal to surrender various taxation rights in return for a subsidy, but in view of Ontario's experience during the last five years, it is considered unlikely that the latest Ottawa proposal will be considered any more acceptable than the one made in 1947.

Mr. Frost also said that, if the Ontario government had levied personal income tax during the last five years, revenue from that source would have been an additional $71,158,000.

In spite of the fact that it levies no income tax, the government of Ontario still rolls up a substantial surplus every year and at the same time boasts that Ontario has the lowest taxation per capita of any of the ten Canadian provinces.

BABY INFLUENCE

In married life a man and wife,
Though rich or poor they may be,
Find all is changed and rearranged
When first they see their baby.

That bit of flesh, so new! So fresh!
Takes up for all tomorrows
The dreams and prayers that will be theirs
And all their joys and sorrows.

Their hope of pride with it will bide;
Their fears with fever's burning,
Their child will keep them long from sleep
'Til health they see returning.

I'd say 'tis well that none can tell
How short or far the way be.
But parents know both weal and woe
Depend upon their baby.

Band at the rink tonight—this will probably be the last band night.

The continuous ringing of the fire bell at two o'clock this morning led citizens to believe that a serious fire was in progress, but such was not the case. It was, however, warning that the large field of ice up the river was on the move Impelled by a great head of water it moved rapidly down the river, but fortunately was not carried over the river banks, but forced itself for some distance out into the bay. Many residents along the river banks an in that section of the city known as the flats were astir for fear of trouble, but their apprehensions were soon allayed. The most serious damage was the breaking of the water main in the bed of the river at the lower bridge which for the second time was smashed by ice. Shortly after the break city workmen had a fair pressure of water passing through the auxiliary pipe at the upper bridge. Water could be sent through the pipe at the lower bridge before noon. It was fortunate that the reserve pipes were still in position. Some damage was done to Lott's dam. Owing to the ice being solid in the harbor and bay, it may be some days before the river is cleared. A number of cellars were flooded, but the merchants were prepared.

BLAME IT ON YOURSELF

Why do so many people busy themselves hating others and trying to destroy the happiness of others?

Psychology has an answer to this, and it seems indeed to be a sound one. Most hateful people hate themselves. They project this hate to others and try to blame others for what they themselves are responsible for, exclusively. The whole complex of hate is the result of their own frustration and inner sense of inadequacy.

That we live in a wicked world there can be no doubt. Everybody with whom we come in contact has his weaknesses or hers, and sometimes these are hard to take. True peace of heart begins when one realizes that the greatest sinner he will ever have to deal with is himself and and that the evil he sees in the world has its counterpart in the motives and impulses of his own heart. There is no sin greater than the sin of judging others, not only because judging is an unloving act but because it precludes the possibility of a man's seeing the pressing necessity for the reformation of his own life.

"Tain't my brother, tain't my sister, but it's me, O Lord, standin' in the need of prayer."

Boy's Companion Faces Charge Of Manslaughter

Toronto, March 4 (CP)—Police Monday blamed an exchange of gunfire between two groups of youths for the fatal shooting Saturday of John Gorassini, 16. A companion, James Mabley, faces a charge of manslaughter.

Gorassini was struck by a .22-calibre rifle bullet which richocheted off a tree beside which he took cover.

Police quoted Mabley as saying six youth on a hike with their rifles broke into separate groups. He said he found himself near a target at which some of the other boys were shooting.

Investigators in suburban North York said Mabley told them that, when bullets started to "come too close" to him, he fired three shots at a tree, near which the marksmen were standing, to attract his friends' attention. Gorassini was hit by the third bullet, he said.

Mabley, who was awarded a Boy Scout award for heroism in 1945 for rescuing another boy from drowning in the Humber River, was rleased on $2,000 bail.

OUR TOWN

BY JACK SCOTT

SHORT STORY

I really have nothing much to write about today. I wondered if you'd hold still for a little story. This is a story I wrote several years ago and, frankly, it's terrible. About all I can say for this story is that it's never been published anywhere before, ever.

Story's about a 43-year-old man named Peter Watson, a respectable businessman, devoted husband and father, who meets a lady on a train trip. She is a pleasant sort, lots of the old charm, and Peter enjoys her company very much, as men sometimes do on trains.

"I wonder would you. . . could I. . . that is, would you have dinner with me tomorrow night?"

"Why, yes," replies the lady promptly. Then she laughs. "Do you know, this is the first time I ever had an engagement with a man whose name I didn't know?"

(This is, I confess, a weak part in the story. Naturally, if they'd been friendly on the train, Peter would have introduced himself. But there wouldn't be any story that way. You'll just have to go along with it in my way.)

When the lady asked Peter his name, his heart sank. He had visions of her coming to his office in Vancouver. Or— worse—suppose at some time she were to phone his home! His wife would never understand. What wife would?

Ah, but Peter has the solution. In his vest pocket is the business card of one of his clients, Sidney J. Palmer. He produces it with a flourish.

"You may call for me at eight, Mr. Palmer," the lady cries, and Peter feels a great sense of excitement mingled with his guilt. The dog!

It was a fine night all around. The lady was dazzling in a strapless evening gown. When their eyes met over the rims of their cocktail glasses Peter's heart kicked at his ribs.

He soon became adjusted to being called "Sidney". He was even enjoying his new role and thought to himself wryly that maybe he was a little tired of being Peter Watson.

It was only when they were parting that Peter guessed that the evening had meant something more to her than merely a brief adventure.

He had taken her to the door of her flat and impulsively embraced her. She clung to him for a moment, then freed herself. He had the curious impression that she might weep.

Instead she said, in a low voice, "Goodbye, Sidney. . . and thank you." Then she was gone. Peter stood in the hall feeling suddenly lost.

Peter thought of the lady all the way home on the train, but in the weeks that followed he began to forget about his one-night masquerade.

If he was observed occasionally to have an abstract look his friends put it down to over-work. His wife called it indigestion. In fact, it was indigestion, for Peter was not exactly a romantic man.

After six months Peter had almost completely forgotten the episode. Then one day, hurrying from his office to lunch, he stopped suddenly in the street as if he'd hit a stone wall.

A long, shining automobile had pulled up to the curb. Stepping out of it was Sidney J. Palmer, the man whose card he'd used! He was raising his black derby in friendly salutation. There was no escaping. The beaming little man was striding toward him, hand outstretched.

Peter allowed his limp hand to be shaken vigorously. Even in his confusion he was conscious of a change in Palmer. Palmer was startingly prosperous-looking. His expensive suit was faultlesly tailored. A too-large diamond glittered in his finely-woven cravat. There was a chauffeur at the wheel of the immense car at the curb.

"You. . . er. . . seem to be doing very well," Peter said, remembering that Palmer had been a man of modest means.

"Yes, I've had a wonderful run of luck," Palmer said.

Instinctively Peter knew what was coming. He recalled again giving the card to the lady. He remembered that the lady was obviously rich. Now he knew that her final goodbye to him had been the farewell of a woman not long for this world. He had given her her last night of happiness. The woman had left all her money to. . . oh, no!

"How did you. . ." Peter began falteringly.

"Oh" Palmer said, "I made a killing in the oil market."

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

RESPONSIBILITY OF LEADERSHIP

There is personal satisfaction, but little fun, in being a leader. It always involves courage, patience, vision, sacrifice and a lot of heartaches. To be a leader you must have convictions and be prepared to defend them under all sorts of conditions, and in the presence of many an enemy.

All great leaders have had enemies, people who hated them, and people who were jealous of them. It's no bed of roses to be a leader, but there are spiritual satisfaction and inward rewards that far outweigh all other considerations. Leadership is often confined to minority groups, and that is when it takes all the courage and intelligence that one possesses. But out of these minorities have majorities risen, and, to such leadership does this world pay rich homage!

Many a leader has gone to his grave "unsung and unhonored," and yet later, when "the muse of history" is given a hearing, that heroic character receives the plaudits of mankind. Great leadership is God-appointed, and so its responsibility is to higher command than that of mere self, or any appointed group. William H. Seward, Lincoln's Secretary of State, once exclaimed that "there is a higher law than the Constitution."

William Lloyd Garrison was once dragged through the streets of Boston by a mad mob. This aroused the young, aristocratic Wendell Phillips to protest and to devote his life to the interests of minorities. And it was Phillips who spoke at the grave of Garrison in this wise: "While yet that ear could listen God gave to him what he had rarely given to man —the prayers and plaudits of four millions of victims."

The names of the great in leadership in this world keep growing in lustre. Theis faults and failures melt away. Only the record of their heroic achievements remains to inspire all mankind. Leadership is often lonely and full of travail, but it is always wrapped in spiritual splendor! It is from this that greatness gains its birth. Important leadership is fearless.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Lonely is one of the saddest-sounding words in the English language, and it describes a condition that is reckoned to be one of the saddest that can befall a human being. Centuries of literature have piled up a tremendous sentiment with regard to it; art and music have helped invest loneliness with nobility, tragedy and pathos. But the fact is, some people choose to be lonely and others deserve to be lonely.

At noon down-town, at lunchtime, you can see hundreds of people who prefer to eat alone. The stool and counter restaurants cater to hordes of them. The popularity of that type of restaurant is based upon the solo eater, rather than on the pairs and trios.

The more sociable lunchers favor the table restaurants. But in those you will often behold the lone eater who belongs to the classification of those who deserve to be lonely. They are men and women with cold, proud or otherwise unpleasant countenances; or else with that over-eager and importunate expression that suggests they are tiresome chatterers who find it difficult to get people to go lunching with them.

Loneliness belongs only to those who don't want to be alone. We must not forget that a good many people prefer to be alone. A man I know who was brought up in a large and noisy family has chosen all his life to remain a bachelor, to live in superb loneliness, to avoid associations that would involve him in company, and to escape contact with his fellow man as much as possible. A more serenely happy soul I have never met.

The world itself is getting to be a pretty large and noisy family .Quite a number of its children are likely to develop this escapist complex.

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Signed Letters, Not More Than One Page, or 100 Words Long, Pertaining to Personal Health and Hygiene, Not to Disease, Diagnosis or Treatment, Will be Answered by Dr. Brady if a Stamped, Self-Addressed Envelope is Enclosed, Etc.

YOU'RE HUNGRY THOUGH YOU MAY NOT KNOW IT.

In the introduction to Body, Mind and Sugar (Henry Holt Co.) E. M. Abrahamson, M. D., and A. W. Pezet observe that a good many medical papers begin "We do not know what," "We do not know why" or "We do not know how."

In my diffident way I have noted the same thing occasionally in the past twenty years. This is one reason why the trick specialists and clinic racketeers that infest American medicine don't like this column.

Abrahamson and Pezet add:

"Medical men do not like to admit this to laymen. They have invented words and phrases — neurosis, neurasthenia, and psychoneurosis with depression— to hide their ignorance from laymen and from themselves.

"Are the hundreds of thousands, perhaps millions, of people thus labeled suffering from mental or from physical disease? The vast majority of them wander from general practitioner to specialist to psychiatrist without ever finding a cure for ailments that make their lives a misery to themselves and an irritation to those close to them."

Now, wait just a minute—I said wait, wait! Don't make the mistake I did about this $2.95 book. For weeks, for months the book lay on my desk—I kept pushing it out of the way when groping in the confusion of papers, books, notes, copy in process of revision, letters, magazines, everything except ashtrays, pipes and tobacco —in that respect my desk is neat — and I answered with a snort every time the Young Snip inquired whether I had read the book.

But finally the rains came. About 10 inches of rain in the course of two or three weeks. No bowling on our greens. Nothing to do but work, work, work. This slavery schedule cleared away some of the flotsam and there was the book waiting for a cursory inspection. So I opened it right in the middle and found the last thing one would expect in a psychological essay, to wit, a diet for hyperinsulinism, i. e., low blood sugar.

I read the book from cover to cover. The authors are convincing when they stick to their subject—over-production of insulin. When they wander far afield they are not so logical. For instance, speaking of smoking as one cause of the trouble they say "the amount of nicotine in tobacco smoke is negligible. It is the tars and the acids in the smoke that are harmful." The first part of the statement is reasonable—combustion destroys the nicotine. The second part is questionable — the authors fail to recognize the presence of carbon monoxide in tobacco smoke.

But quibbling criticisms do not depreciate the value and importance of the book in my estimation. Few if any medical works are not open to such criticism, up to and including Osler's Practice.

Students, business and professional people, careerists who consider a cup of coffee and a cigarette the proper way to break a twelve-hour fast may learn something to their advantage if they have sufficient intelligence to read and understand "Body, Mind and Sugar."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

They Saw the Customer Coming

I have a murmuring heart. I had it exrayed. The doctor examined my bowels with the exray at the same time and said the heart condition is caused by toxic poisons in the bowels. I am to have teatments . . . I went to a——clinic for the examination . . . (Mrs. K. W.)

Answer—Poor soul. They saw you coming, if you quote them correctly. Not even a good doctor can tell by "examining your bowels with the ex-ray" anything about the cause of your heart trouble, if any, or whether "toxic poisons" are present. Can't you get it through your thick head that the practise of medicine is a Personal service, and therefore you are asking to be buncoed when you go to a "clinic" instead of going to a doctor who practises under his own name?

Literature, Eh?

Please place my name on your mailing list for literature on autointoxication, toxic poisons, excessive mucus and constipation. How about a colon migration twice weekly? (S. A. M.)

Answer—You take quack bait too seriously. Send 25c and stamped, self-addressed envelope for booklet, The Constipation Habit and Colon Hygiene.

Tinnitus

Bothered for several years with ringing head noises. Doctor put me on a salt-free diet. Always liked my food well salted. Family can't see how this will help. I have noticed no change. . (R. C.)

Answer — I've had such head noises since childhood. I wouldn't take the low salt experiment seriously. However, it is generally beneficial to health to restrict the daily intake of salt from time to time.

AWARDED CONTRACT

Kingston, March 3—(CP)— T. A. Andre and Sons, general contractor, have been awarded a $300,000 contract to erect a two-storey signal and cipher building in the Vimy barracks area at Barriefield Army Camp. Work is expected to start immediately.

SAW DEER ON STREET

Toronto, March 4—(CP)—F. J. Pollard was cleaning his automobile in front of his house in suburban East York Sunday afternoon when he heard feet pattering. A 300-pound deer ran into a nearby busy intersection, rolled over three times and leaped away into a wooded ravine.

Reynaud Fails To Form Cabinet

Paul Reynaud, 73, wartime premier of France, tried but failed to form a new French government, following the defeat of the government of Edgar Faure. He declared a change in the French constitution was necessary before a stable government could be achieved. He was called from England by President Vincent Auriol following the fall of the government of Edgar Faure on the issue of a 15 per cent tax increase to cover France's defence effort. — Central Press Canadian.

Nine Permits In February Total $48,563

Nine building permits were issued in the city of Belleville during the month of February to a total value of $48,563.

Of this total, $41,663 was spent in the erection of new dwellings or business establishments with the remaining $6,900 being spent in alterations or repair work.

The largest individual permit was issued to the Lord and Burnham Company of St. Catharines to the amount of $17,378 for the construction of a new addition to the Canadian Government Parasite Laboratory on Dundas Street East.

Other permits for new constructions were issued to Harold A. Parker, $15,000 for a two-storey house on MacDonald Avenue; J. K. Smith $9,000, a single-storey dwelling on Victoria Avenue; W. W. Sallsbury, $285, a garage at his residence on Cherry Gardens.

J. J. Bruyea was issued a permit for $3,000 for alterations to an apartment house on Foster Avenue. Other alteration permits include Mrs. Bruce Bottom, $1,800, alterating a dwelling on Lingham Street into a duplex; B. Mayer, $1,500, store alterations on Front St.; James Text, $500, internal alterations; and Mrs. Arnold Thomson, $100, for the addition of a chimney to a dwelling on Bridge Street West.

Husband of Novelist Fannie Hurst, Dies

His death ended a unique marriage that began in 1915.

For five years, the marriage was kept secret. Then, in 1920, Miss Hurst announced it and told of how it operated.

She and her husband maintained separate apartments but they breakfasted together twice a week. She retained her own name. He telephoned her for appointments, but they took a holiday together on each wedding anniversary.

Years later, in 1944, Miss Hurst looked back over the marriage arrangement and commented:

"The fact that we both are in possession of our original mates after all these years is the answer to the whole question. I think our record is rather better than most."

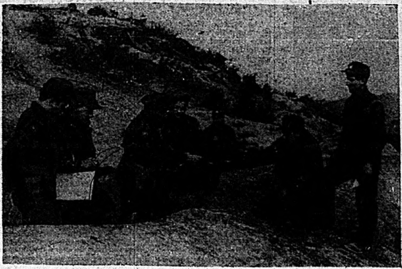
Payday in Korea is No Occasion for Rejoicing



To Canadian troops in the front line trenches in Korea payday is just like any other. The paymaster visits them in their fox-holes and dugouts and half the time the men just ask that their pay be deferred as there is little on which to spend money in Korea. Here Paymaster Capt. Phil Decary, Montreal, is making the rounds of the "Van Doos." In the photo are: Cpl. J. E. A. Aube of Bathurst, N.B.; Cpl. R. Y. Chevalier, Montreal; Cpl. R. Rainville, Pictou, N.S.; and Pte. G. Dr. McGorman Oldest Dentist In Ontario

Port Arthur, Ont.—(CP)— Dr. W. T. McGorman, the oldest practising dentist in Ontario, walked over to a corner of his office here to an old-time dental engine, operated by a foot treadle.

"Of course, I have the modern electric drill now," he said, "But the old foot engine had something of its own—it sort of became part of you after a while. You can regulate the speed of the electric engine, but with the foot drill I sometimes think you could do it better."

The antique drill was the type used by Dr. McGorman when he started practice 59 years ago in St. Mary's, Ont.

There is another dentist in Ontario who has been practising just as long — Dr. E. Peaker, of Toronto.

"Yes, I share that honor with Eddie Peaker," said Dr. McGorman, "Because we were both in the 1893 graduating class at the Toronto Dental College. But he's a younger man than I am."

"Always Been Strong"

He worked on his father's farm in Mornington, Peel County, until he was 23. Then he went back to school, taught a few years and then entered dental college.

When Dr. McGorman started his practice, most patients apparently came to him in a spirit of "all or nothing." If their teeth were bad, they wanted them pulled.

"For a while, there was quite a fad for gold fillings," he said. "Some people with perfectly good teeth had them filed down so they could be fitted with gold caps."

The doctor added that the fashion never became as popular in Canada as it did in the United States.

Anaesthetics have improved since the young dentist pulled his first tooth. Straight cocaine was the pain-killer used in those days; now it's novocaine or monocaine.

Was Big Class

Recalling his graduation in 1893, Dr. McGorman said it was the largest graduating class up to that time. Among its 22 members was the first qualified woman dentist in Ontario, a Mrs. Wells.

After practising 12 years in St. Mary's, Dr. McGorman came to Port Arthur in 1906. Recently he was awarded an honorary membership in the Thunder Bay Dental Association.

Dr. McGorman has only one close relative living — a brother in Windsor. Mrs. McGorman died some years ago.

He hasn't had time to indulge any hobbies, and his travellin has been confined to a yearl trip east to attend the conventio of the Ontario Dental Associa tion."

Answering a question anyon would ask an 89-year-old pro fessional man, Dr. McGorma said:

"No, I'm not going to retire fo a while yet."

WEDDINGS

MUMBY—SPRY

The marriage took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Spry, Bonarlaw, on Saturday, February 23, of their daughter, Reta Irene, to James R. Mumby. The Rev. H. Beare officiated. The home was artistically decorated for the occasion.

The wedding music was played by Miss Rosemary Webb and Mrs. Walter Reid and Mrs. Ralph Heath, aunts of the bridegroom, rendered a duet.

The bride was charming in a blue suit, with grey accessories, while her twin sister, Roma Lorene, who acted as bridesmaid, wore a grey suit with blue accessories.

Mr. Kenneth Huff was groomsman.

After the ceremony, a bounteous luncheon was held for about 60 guests with the cousins of the bride serving.

Amid showers of confetti, the happy couple left for a wedding trip to Niagara. On their return they will reside on the groom's farm at Rylestone.

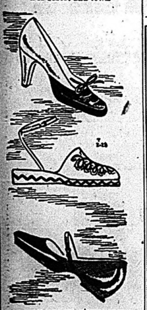
Fashionable Footsteps

For resort and town



By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

NEW footprints along fashion lane are outlined here. New touches mark the resort or summer shoe of classic theme, a nice change from the usual spectator sports job. White suede and russet calfskin with simulated lacing on the vamp and a slender bow of suede at the instep are the details of the shoe shown top side. Also for resort wear now and for later on, is a Baque-type low heel wedgie in yellow sail cloth with striking black embroidery. A new, smart walking shoe has a heel that looks flat, but that is built up, British style, on the inside. The vamp and narrow strap across the instep are of red calf, and the back is of dark gray suede.

Color Choices for Redheads

By HELEN FOLLETT

Of all types of pretty dollies, the beauty problems of the redhead are toughest. Her flaming thatch is her top beauty asset. Nothing can detract from its shining loveliness. Not only that but the auburn-haired girl usually has a delicate, rather transparent skin on which counterfeit blushes loom up, advertise artifice.

The hair can vary from deep copper to dark auburn and of course that means that the same make-up rules won't do for all. The copper-colored thatch means that true red or wine tones must never be used for cheeks or lips. An orange-red should be chosen. If the skin lacks coloring, a flesh-colored powder can be used and the slightest bit or coral pigment placed on the cheeks. The application should be high to call attention to the eyes.

Choosing Colors

Because of the vividness of her own coloring, the true redhead has a limited range of colors in dress. Warm tones, unless greatly subdued, clash violently with the flaming crown, often detracting from its compelling charm. Black enriches the color of the hair, making it seem brighter and more lustrous by contrast, at the same time making it less strikingly conspicuous.

Navy blue is a happy choice: lighter shades should be avoided. Beige is out unless is carries a pink cast. Now and then one can get away with a red frock, but it is safer to avoid this color. Off-whites or creamy whites are more becoming than pure white, and the rule goes for types other than the one that is the subject of today's dissertation.

Neutral Shades

Neutral colors look well on the red-haired girls. Warm grays tend to lend attractiveness to appearance; cold steel grey is trying.

Occasionally women with unusually beautiful hair or eyes can afford to wear colors enhancing their distinctive feature at the expense of complexion or figure although never if they magnify a defect of either. Emphasize your prettiest natural coloring by matching, or nicely contrasting with it, your cosmetics and clothes.

Women's Institute

REDNERSVILLE W.I.

The February meeting of Rednersville Women's Institute convened at the home of Mrs. Harmon Montgomery, with the president, Mrs. Kenneth Green, in charge. Two minutes' silence was observed in memory of the late King.

Community singing was enjoyed. Correspondence and business was dealt with. An Institute euchre is to be held March 20th at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Green.

The president then turned the meeting over to Mrs. H. Montgomery, convener for Education. Interesting current events were given by Mrs. Ronald Giles. Mrs. Hubert Townsend read an article "Whether You Like it or Not—if you're a Parent, you're a Teacher". An article on "Canada's School on Wheels", was given by Mrs. Earl MacKay. Mrs. S. Fox gave a paper, "How to Give Your Child Security".

Mrs. D. K. Redner was the winner of a contest "Counties of Ontario".

Refreshments were served by the hostess and lunch committee and a social half-hour enjoyed.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Allan Weese, Friday evening, March 28.

MELROSE W.M.S.

The Melrose W.M.S. observed the World Day of Prayer at the home of the President, Mrs. Russel McFarlane with an attendance of 16.

The theme of the service was "Christ Our Hope", and opened with the president reading the Call to Prayer and the Call to Worship.

The program in the Missionary Monthly was closely followed, with Mrs. William McMechan, Mrs. C. Osborne, Mrs. S. Demile and Mrs. R. Badgley taking part.

Special prayers were offered for the Queen and other members of royal family; for the Commonwealth and local communities by Mrs. R. Badgley; for the homes of the land and the young people by Mrs. S. Demille; for the church universal, by Mrs. E. Pascoe Sr., and for missionaries by Mrs. E. Badgley.

A special paper was given by Mrs. E. Badgley who said "that in the present great moral chaos in individual and national life there was a great need to turn to God in true repentance, humility, and faith; for if we are not at peace with God how can we be at peace with each other.

"The turning to God must begin with the ordinary man and woman.

Perhaps on this World Day of Prayer which is observed by the women of 104 countries there will be a turning point to a better and more peaceful world."

The collection amounting to $8 was received.

A short business period was held at the close of the meeting.

The hostess served refreshments.

ST. MARGARET'S GUILD

The regular meeting of St. Margaret's Guild was held on Monday evening at the home of Mrs. W. Brown, 60 MacDonald Gardens, with the president, Mrs. Arthur Watson, in the chair.

Work was distributed for hand-sewing before the discussion period began. Reports were given by Mrs. G. H. Carveth of the Saturday morning baking sales, held since the previous meeting. These have been so successful that it was unanimously decided to continue them until summer.

After making tentative plans for the spring tea, the meeting adjourned and refreshments were served.

WESLEY W.A.

Bayside — The Wesley W.A. met at the home of Mrs. Saylor, Thursday afternoon with 18 present.

The president opened the meeting.

Mrs. Wright conducted the program consisting of hymns and prayer, also readings by Mrs. Burnette, Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. Genereaux.

One new member joined and two paid dues.

Birthday dues were paid by four members.

Several items of business were discussed.

Contests were won by Mrs. Rutter and Mrs. Genereaux.

Collection amounted to $2.85, flower fund, .86 cents.

The president expressed thanks to the hostess and a social half hour was spent.

Women of London, Paris Buy Factory Reproductions Of Most Favored Suit Lines

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London (CP) —With London and Paris spring fashion shows still a recent memory, British women are already buying factory productions of the two suit lines most favored in both cities.

Before the spring shows started, the bell-skirted suits and bolero numbers form the basis of this year's tailored styles were already on display in British stores.

Shops are showing such smart outfits as a grey flannel bolero suit with pencil-slim skirt, the short bolero having deep cuffs to the half sleeve which match the turn-up of the jacket hem. Combined with tucked white lawn blouse such as that shown in Paris by Jacques Fath, long white gloves and wide-brimmed white hat with veiling tucked under the chin, this has a chic French look suited to town wear.

Dark Green Popular

Equally smart and still in the half-mourning colors favored at present in London, is a dark grey suit overchecked in black and white lines, its slim skirt given pocket hem emphasis. A high-collared bolero with swing fullness has short sleeves cut in one with the jacket and a starched white bow wings outwards from the throat. This follows the line of a matching white Dutch bonnet with elongated side brims.

Bell-skirted suits have classic jackets with neat waists, roll collars, soft shoulders, narrow sleeves and rounded peplums. The bell skirt is created by a full plain flare or all-round sunray pleating. Up-to-date women who like the latest swing to their skirts, can add reproductions of the new crinoline underskirts for as little as $7.

Priced Around $28

These suits and many others are priced around $28. Black, navy and greys will be the favorites of business women next summer. Inexpensive Paris touches can so easily be added to these neutral shades, such as dark purple cocuses and mimosa tucked into the pocket of grey suits.

Black, bell-skirted suits can be worn, with rustling white taffeta petticoats, black accessories lightened by one touch of white—a "Quo Vadis" hat of feathers with flat Roman crown, a duck-tail of trimming curling up from the forehead.

Fashion writers warn British women to forget their conservative preference for shirt blouses this year. The bolero suits give new importance to the blouse beneath,

One intriguing number that would highlight any bolero is in white linen, its upstanding Medici collar given added importance by a facing of quilted satin.

Christ Church Evening Aux. Holds Meeting

Last evening the Evening Branch of Christ Church W.A., met for a special prayer service and business meeting in the parish hall with, Mrs. E. Hickey conducting, and Mrs. M. Burleigh at the piano.

The service followed in part that of the World Day of Prayer program with Mrs. W. Lancaster taking "Adoration"; and Mrs. E. Smith, "Assurance"; while the intercessions were taken by Miss L. Morton, for "Nations of the World," their leaders, and especially for those forming the United Nations; Mrs. C. Hayes, for the Queen and all the Royal Family, all counsellors, and advisers of the Crown, for the leaders of the great Commonwealth and for the Dominion of Canada, its local communities, and for a keener realization of citizen responsibility.

Homes of the Land

Miss F. Reid took the intercession for the homes of the land; the young people; for the new homes set up by the people of other lands, for children of the world whose lives have been scarred by hunger, homelessness, and other evils; Mrs. H. Ingram for the Church Universal; for the older churches of the west for renewal, spiritually; that the younger churches of the east may stand firm in the faith; that all Christians being persecuted for their faith in Europe and wherever they may be, that they go forward.

Mrs. A. Bongard took the intercession for missions, for all missionaries, their work and witness, and for those especially, who have been forced to leave their fields of work to an uncertain future, and for those at home that they may realize more urgently the need to share in the advancement of God's Kingdom.

Following the intercessory prayer, Mrs. E. Hickey gave a fine reading on "The Gift of Christ", which was greatly appreciated by all.

Business followed the devotional period, and consisted of plans for a tea after Easter, as well as a rummage and auction sale. All were cordially invited by the Contact Club to see the film "Life in the Arctic", which will be shown next week by Dr. Bruce Cronk. Plans were also made for the "Travelling Basket".

Delicious refreshments followed the close of the meeting, served by Mrs. C. Hayes and Mrs. F. Portlock.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

When a boy behaves badly, stop it promptly and definitely

Dear Miss Fairfax:

For nine months I was going with a boy who always said he liked me a great deal and I believed him. But everytime we were alone in the car he would try to start something. I would ask him nicely and politely to quit, which he would for about half an hour and then try again. So then I'd ask him to take me home, and when he did I would go in without kissing him goodnight, which he always got mad about.

He's a nice boy, and never used to do things like that, so at first I didn't think much of it, but one night he went a little too far, and so I suggested that we didn't see each other for two weeks. After the two weeks were up he came back, and that night we broke up, which was the only solution.

I don't really believe he likes doing things like that, and I think he would like to make up with me, because he keeps driving past my house all the time. I still like him a lot and would like him a great deal more if he would grow up, so how can I get him back to help him stay away from that foolishness.

I am 15 and he's 17.—Rosie.

Dear Rosie:

You are a very sensible girl to keep yourself free from cheap petting, but as I see it, there was one big mistake in your technique. That is, you weren't definite enough soon enough.

You say that at first when you would ask him to stop annoying you, he would stop for about half an hour and then start again. Why did you go on sitting with him alone in the car for that half hour? Why didn't you insist that he either take you home right away or that you go somewhere for a hamburger or something, where he wouldn't have the chance to "start again"? For another thing why did you tell him to stay away just two weeks? I think it would have been much more effective if you had told him to stay away until he was ready to behave like a gentleman under all circumstances.

I don't think there's any way you can "help him stay away from that foolishness," and I think you will only weaken your own case if you start angling to get him back for any such purpose.

Leave him alone until he comes to you and gives you some reason to behave properly in the future.

to behave properly in the future.

She's been playing with fire— lucky she isn't burned

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a married woman of 29. I have been going with a single man who is 35. We are very much in love and would like to marry, but we have one drawback which is that I have a child.

It all started six years ago when I met this fellow four weeks before I was married. Six weeks after getting married, we began to see each other and have been doing so ever since, sometimes as often as 4 times a week.

My husband doesn't know anything about this, because he works all night and sleeps most of the day. He doesn't act as though he knows the baby and I even exist. He never plays with the baby, or pays any attention to me, and I would like a divorce so I would be free to marry, but I don't know what to do or which way to turn.—U.

Dear U.:

You have certainly been playing with fire for a long time, haven't you? You are very lucky indeed that you haven't got into serious trouble before now, and while I am afraid you will not take my advice, I strongly urge you to stop seeing this man until you get yourself straightened out on the question of your marriage.

There is absolutely no sense in your keeping on the way you are going, particularly since you are practically certain to get found out one of these days and have a great deal of trouble on your hands.

Food for Thought

By Mary Moore

Milk Powder Becomes a Staple

The Toronto papers inform us that the recent street-car strike resulted in the loss of from 10 to 15 per cent of the street-car travelling public to transportation by private car or hoof.

The rising cost of fresh milk has made milk powder a staple on many kitchen shelves.

This is news—and good news. It seems the obvious: that folks who would not afford fresh milk now have its equivalent at lower cost and because the milk powder is conveniently at hand, many cooks use more milk by way of the milk powder method than they would if fresh milk were employed. Consequently their families have a higher protein ration. I know three households in which this is the case.

This little chat was sparked by Marie D. and I want her to know that she (and you) may write to Consumer Section, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, Canada, for a booklet on skim milk powder, which contains many recipes for its use.

My general suggestion to you is that if you want to use milk powder instead of fresh milk, reliquefy it as directed on the package and treat as if it were fresh milk. When used in baking add it to the dry mix in proportions as directed on package and use water instead of milk for the liquid.

QUESTION:

Recently you published a recipe for pork pies which I have lost. Would you please send me a reprint?—Mrs. Don H.

ANSWER:

MELTON MOWBRAY PASTRY

Two level cups plus 2 tablespoons unsifted flour, 1-2 teaspoon each salt and baking powder, 1-2 cup (1-4 lb.) lard or shortening, 3-8 cup boiling water. Put boiling water and lard together and bring to boiling point. Mix flour with salt and baking powder and add all at once to hot water and lard. Remove from heat and stir until smooth. Cover and let stand from 1 to 3 hour. Line several small pie pans or 1 large pan with rolled out pastry.

FILLING:

Cook in 2 cups boiling water 1 pound pork cuttings or 1 lb. shoulder pork which is lean. Add 1 small onion sliced and 1 teaspoon salt and 1-8 teaspoon pepper and 1-4 bay leaf. Simmer for 1 hour. Lift out meat and onion and put through food chopper. Discard bay leaf. Save 1 cup of meat liquid. Make remainder up to 1 cup. Make a paste of 1 tablespoon cornstarch and 1-4 cup cold water. Stir this into 1 cup meat liquid over heat until thick. Add ground meat to thickened gravy. Taste. Add salt and pepper if needed. Put this filling into the lined pie pans. Cover with top crust which is gashed only once with large gash at centre. Bake 35 to 40 minutes at 425 deg. Fahr.—reducing heat towards end of baking time if pies are browning too much. If to be served cold brush with beaten egg yolk 5 minutes before baking time is up. To the remaining 1 cup of cold meat liquid add 1 1-2 teaspoons unflavored gelatine, and soak for 5 minutes, then stir this over hot water to dissolve gelatine. If pies are to be served cold funnel this gelatine broth through the gash in top of each pie and chill. It may require a little extra salt. If the pies are large they slice beautifully in the traditional English fashion when chilled.

There was another good English Pork Pie recipe in my column of February 29.

BANCROFT

Lions Club Stages Fine Ice Carnival

Bancroft — The annual skating carnival and moccasin dance, staged by Bancroft Lions Club, attracted a large group of spectators and participants to the local arena on Friday night.

Elsie Fisher and her group of fancy skaters stole the show. The group of teen-aged girls who have had just nine figure skating lessons drew round after round of applause from an appreciative audience. Their skating was graceful and rhythmic and their new costumes scintillated in the glow of the brilliant lights.

Opening March

The opening march was performed with a nice exactness as the girls high stepped in unison. Miss Elsie Fisher of Peterborough Skating Club, the instructor gave two graceful solos. A quartet of Rosemary Merritt, Shirley Merritt, Elizabeth Ann Hibbard and Lorraine Watson glided through their routine with the grace of fairy nymphs. Everybody did well in the Dutch Waltz and the other numbers by the entire cast.

To round out the evening's entertainment came races, a costume parade, a badminton game on skates, broomball between the Lions Clubs of Bancroft and Whitney, a moccasin dance, and 'Sad Sack', and 'The Mad Russian,' two irrepressible clowns.

Bancroft Public School's relay team, captained by Cyril Cutler, won from North Hastings High School and Maynooth. Ted Maxwell, Bill Delyea, Norman Brough gave an exhibition of badminton on skates. After the first few minutes, the score and number of players in the broomball game became unimportant and everybody was in there swinging for the honor of his club. The clowns, Jack Maxwell and Jack Hattin, were on the ice for the majority of the events not connected with the skating exhibition.

Bert Wright, aided by a committee of Lions, was in charge of the event. From the new sound booth above the dressing rooms at the front end of the rink Jack Follis acted as master of ceremonies and director of traffic on the ice.

RAWDON

Rawdon — About 30 people from Rawdon circuit attended the "World Day of Prayer" service at Bethel United Church last Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Thomas Laycock, president of Bethel W.A., presided over the service and Mrs. William Heath officiated at the piano.

The theme of the service was, "Christ Our Hope," and five verses of Psalm 146 were read followed by the hymn, "Praise My Soul, the King of Heaven." In the Adoration period a part of Revelation I was read.

During "Penitence" all sang, "My Faith Looks up to Thee." The Assurance closed with "O God Our Help in Ages Past."

Prayers Offered

Mrs. John Mulheron offered prayer for the nations of the world, and their leaders.

Mrs. S. J. Elliott for Royalty and the Dominion of Canada, and the Commonwealth.

Mrs. Burton Morton, Wellman's for the homes of the land and its young people.

The pastor, Rev. R. R. Bonsteel, led in prayer for the church universal and younger churches and he also pronounced the closing benediction.

Mrs. John Holmes, Mount Pleasant gave a prayer for all missionaries everywhere.

Mrs. Frank Jeffs, Mount Pleasant, gave a paper entitled, "Where Our Money Goes?"

Mrs. Walter Warren, Bethel, sang, "My Task."

This service was one of those held in 104 countries from dawn to dusk.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Today's courtesy tip

If your first inclination is to criticize, try a new trick. . . look around for something to praise. Believe it or not, you'll have a better time. . . and you'll be a nicer person to have around!

When grace is said at the wedding reception

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Have you ever heard of having grace said at a wedding reception? I never have, but my godchild tells me that she wants to make this plan, and has asked me for my viewpoint about it. She is a very religious girl, and she and I have always been very close, always talked over things together. Her uncle, who is the clergyman of our church, is to perform the ceremony, and her cousin, graduated from theological college, is to be present at the wedding and reception. At the reception there will be about one hundred guests, and there is to be a seated service. Under these circumstances would you advise having grace said, and this is her other question) should she ask her uncle or her cousin to say it?—Godmother.

Indeed I have heard of having grace said at a wedding reception. To me it is a deeply touching experience to hear grace said on this occasion. . . and I am sure you will be proud of this spiritually-minded godchild of yours who has made this fine and reverential plan. And it is an easier procedure to plan, of course, when there is a seated service.

If grace is to be said. . . and I do hope it will be . . .the clergyman who performed the ceremony would, I am sure, expect to be asked to say grace, and it is he who should be asked. Also . . . and this is most important. . . there must be a definite plan as to who is to direct the attention of the guests; perhaps the bride should ask her father to rise and announce that grace is to be said. And the one who is responsible for the serving should be informed about the plan, so that the service will be held up until after grace has been said.

She should thank for intended courtesy

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

To settle a discussion between my sister and me, will you please answer this question: When a girl drops something, a book or her handkerchief, for example, and a man who is nearby or passing at the time attempts to pick it up, should she thank him, even if she has succeeded in picking it up before he could? —Edith N.

Yes. . . her "thank you" is her gracious expression of appreciation for his courteous intention. She would be crude indeed if she disregarded his effort to be of service to her.

Widower's children should be invited to the wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My fiance is a widower with two grown children. I have tried in every way I could think of to be cordial and pleasant to them, but they have not responded with any enthusiasm about our coming marriage. We are inviting about thirty guests to our very informal church wedding. Do you advise that I invite them? (My fiance says I should do as I wish about this.)—Josephine B.

Yes. Yes indeed. . .I do advise you, urge you, to invite them. You will then be showing your good manners, your knowledge of what's what. . . you will be evidencing your kindly intentions. . .you will, I am sure, make your fiance proud and happy about your poise and dignity and graciousness. . .and you will courteously be giving his children the choice as to whether or not they wish to accept your invitation. Also. . . and this is most important. . . if you don't invite them, you may, probably will, deeply regret this in the future.

Feel grouchy? Change your shoes

Corns are the battle scars of vanity. If your shoes are too small, too short, or too narrow, you will have corns, sure as fate. If, when selecting shoes, you consider style and appearance before comfort and foot-health, you can expect to have your toes twinge like a guilty conscience.

It would seem that some women do not consider their feet as a part of their body; they neglect them and, in the course of time, the poor feet rebel. When they suffer, the central nervous system is upset; the result may be headache, backache or a nasty disposition. The effect of uncomfortable shoes on the mind is admitted by physicians; so when buying new ones, why not get precisely the right size and kind?

By their soles, shoes kill or cure. If they are made of flexible leather, the chances are that your feet will cause you no trouble. If the sole is rigid and slants triangle-wise, it will offer you a grim future. The uppers should be made of soft leather that neither chafes nor restricts movement.

The foot is a complex network of bones, muscles, ligaments, tendons, blood vessels and nerves. It is a marvelous mechanism, and should not be abused.

The wise woman will have a shoe wardrobe, so she can make frequent changes. The idea that you can have one pair of shoes, and use them until they wear out, is poor reasoning and does not make for money-saving. When a shoe loses its shape, it no longer gives proper support; and support is necessary for comfort and wellbeing.

Should it happen that you have mistreated your feet, and have suddenly come to your senses by buying correctly designed shoes, you can make your feet stronger by certain exercises.

Stand with feet parallel or toeing in slightly. Rise on the toes slowly and return to first position. These movements strengthen the calf muscles, which are the chief support of the arch.

Walk along a straight line bearing the weight on the outer side of the foot, one foot closely following the other. Bicycling is an excellent exercise to put human hoofs in better shape.

There is a rocking exercise that is recommended by specialists. Hold the edge of a table with one hand. Then rock from the heels to the tips of the toes, shifting the entire weight. Toe in as you rock. This strengthens both the forward and middle arches, and strengthens the toes and the tendons of the heel.

Women's Activities

CENTENARY M.C.

Centenary — The February meeting of Centenary Mission Circle was held at the home of Mrs. Roy Thrasher with ten members present.

The meeting opened with the usual business. Mrs. Gordon Garrison invited the group to her home for the next meeting. Mrs. Fred Edmondson read a letter of congratulations from the Dominion Board secretary for Mission Circles. The group decided to make a quilt and this was discussed. Miss Doreen Ray was nominated for supply secretary with Mrs. Ralph Loney and Mrs. Gordon Garrison as assistants. Mite boxes were discussed.

Mrs. Orval May and her group had charge of the worship period. This followed the theme for the World Day of Prayer "Christ Our Hope." Responsive readings and hymns made up the most part of the program.

Mrs. Ralph Loney conducted a contest and refreshments were served.

MADOC

Rev. M. W. Heslip Speaker at World Day of Prayer Service

Madoc — On Friday afternoon the women from the various Protestant churches in Madoc met in the St. Peter's Presbyterian Church for the World Day of Prayer making one unbroken chain of prayer the world round from dawn on the Figi Islands to dusk on the Arctic Island of St. Lawrence. As the women came to join in prayer with others of the world, soft music was played by Mrs. Irene Crawford.

Mrs. Field Allan, of St. Peter's Church, led in the call to worship. The service day program was carried out completely by the various church representatives from St. Peter's — Mrs. F. Allan, Miss Vankleek, Mrs. Heslip; Trinity United—Mrs. Carmen, Miss Holmes, Mrs. Lane; St. John's Anglican — Mrs. C. Barton, Mrs. E. T. Nayler; Holiness Movement — Mrs. E. Armstrong, Mrs. Vandusen, Mrs. Poynter.

A very appropriate solo: "Just a Whispered Prayer," was sung by Mrs. Armstrong.

Mrs. Curry and Mrs. Blakely received the offering.

Christ Our Hope

The speaker was Rev. M. W. Heslip, using the theme, "Christ Our Hope," and text from Timothy 1:1 verse.

Mr. Heslip paid tribute to the Women of Canada, who, he said had been instrumental in so many outstanding events such as the Worlds Day of Prayer; also the Women's Institute, which had become almost world wide and had helped so much, the women of the world.

Regarding the theme, "Christ Our Hope," he said, "all we have in this life and all we hoped for in the life to come rests with Christ. He cited Germany as an example, which previous to the war, closed their churches and lived Hitlerism. The outcome of which was a false philosophy. He also mentioned the need of workers in the Sunday Schools and the various organizations of the churches. All too busy to heed the call of work for the Master.

In closing he referred to the allocation of the collections received at the prayer service. With the singing of, "The Day Thou Gavest Lord Is Ended," and the benediction a memorable service was concluded.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Causeway, of Oshawa, spent a few days in Madoc and vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Courneya are spending a few days in Toronto where Mrs. Courneya will attend the Hairdressers' Convention.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Rodgers and children, of Perth, spent the weekend with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Moon.

RAWDON

Seventy Five Women Assemble at St. Paul's For World Day of Prayer

Rawdon—On Friday afternoon about 75 women from the various churches in Stirling gathered for a service of prayer in S. Paul's United Church.

Mrs. J. B. Thompson was the hostess and welcomed the ladies to the service and passed the programs.

Mrs. Ernest Munroe, president of St. Paul's W.M.S. presided and took charge of the portions dedicated to "Adoration and Penitence."

She was assisted by Mrs. Hiram Rodgers of St. John's Church of England, who presided over "Assurance and Intercession" and by Mrs. Louis Rodgers, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, who was in charge of "Dedication, and Offering."

Special Address

Mrs. Ross Hermiston gave the special paper and Mrs. George Heasman sang "Abide With Us."

Mrs. Russell Stapley presided at the piano throughout the service.

The prayers were given by Mrs. H. C. Secker, Mrs. Thomas Tanner, Mrs. W. H. V. Walker, Mrs. Walter Elliott and Mrs. Volney Richardson.

The offering was gathered by Mrs. N. E. Eggleton and Mrs. R. A. Patterson.

The programs were prepared by the Women's Inter - Church, Council of Canada with headquarters in Toronto.

God's Children

To the millions of God's children who wait upon Him in prayer and seek to learn His plan for all, the call goes out for spiritual fellowship across and through all barriers. Such united prayer, by God's grace, may become a great power, because it builds understanding and mutual concern for one another and binds together all the people of God.

The offerings gathered in 1951 were used to promote Christian literature in Africa, India, Japan, Korea, Latin America, Pakistan and in many places and departments in the United States and Canada.

CENTENARY

World Day of Prayer Held at Church

Centenary—Mrs. R. Edmondson led the World Day of Prayer service at Centenary Church on Friday afternoon which opened with the call to worship, "Praise Ye the Lord."

Following the theme, "Christ Our Hope," Mrs. Edmondson led in responsive reading of "Adoration," "Intercession", and "Dedication," while Mrs. S. Hubble led in responsive readings of "Penitence," and "Assurance." These readings were interspersed with hymns. Prayers were said for the nations of the world by Mrs. D. Holton; for the Queen and her consort, and all the Royal family and the British Commonwealth by Mrs. F. Aikens; for homes and families by Mrs. W. Slavin; for the church by Mrs. J. Kelley; for all missionaries by Mrs. G. Sills.

Mrs. B. Roblin spoke on the topic "What Your Money Does." She told of projects from all over the world which gifts help to make possible. Mrs. R. Hart and Mrs. R. Thrasher sang a duet, "Dear Lord, Forgive."

The offering was taken and dedicated. The hymn "The Day Thou Gavest Lord, is Ended" was sung and the benediction, "Now the God of Hope Fill You With Joy and Peace in Believing that We May Abound in Hope through the power of the Holy Ghost. Amen." closed the meeting.

In the absence of the regular pianist, Mrs. Harold Hollomby kindly assisted.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

VICS HERE TONIGHT!

Dark clouds of disappointment hang heavily over the Scugog. Lindsay's proud Kinsmen hockey club, considered earlier in the season to be almost "shoo-ins" for the junior "B" group title were eliminated in the semi-finals playoffs.

Coach "Red" Mitchell had built a team which, augmented later in the season by starry Oshawa juniors, seemed destined to be a powerful contender for group honors. And its seasonal performance substantiated that. It swept through the schedule and finished on top of the group standing with a good margin over the second-place Hawks.

On schedule performances the wise ones figured Belleville and Lindsay were certain starters in the finals, with a proviso that the Peterborough club stood a fair chance of knocking off the Hawks. The Hawks did just that but it took the best they had and only two sensational third-period rallies sent the gallant Links into oblivion.

Dimming even the defeat of the Kinsmen has been the sensational last-minute and playoff performance of the amazing Kingston Vics. "Weak sisters" of the group, considered by some as stepping stones to playoff spots for the rest of the pack, the Vics have the Kingston fans (what few supported them) and the rest of the group wondering what Maestro Maxie Jackson infiltrated into the hockey veins of his proteges that caused the startling form that has swept them through to the finals. They defeated the proud Kinsmen twice, lost one decision and held the Scugog group favorites to ties in another pair of games. They played a brilliant consistent brand of hockey that paid off in a spot in the finals sun.

Tonight in Memorial Arena the Vics square off with the junior Hawks in the opener of what should be a thrilling series. The Vics, fresh from their success over the Kinsmen, are hotter than the south end of a firefly. They are fully confident they can take the measure of the Hawks. Their record against the Hawks during the schedule is not an enviable one. But that is water under the bridge. This is a brand-new chips-down series that past performances have no bearing on.

The Hawks too, after their successful semi-finals series against the Peterborough Links are confident. But they should not be too confident. On playoff performance, this is not the Vics team they met and defeated in schedule play. It is a hot hustling squad that has tasted the wine of well-earned victory, and has no intention of acknowledging defeat without giving its all. And if the Lindsay series is a criterion, that is plenty.

We are not trying to put the Vics on the pedestals of junior supermen, but the fact they met and defeated the powerful Lindsay team in a playoff series should be sufficient reason for the Hawks to go out there and give all they've got if they want to annex the group title. And in our opinion, they will have to do just that.

PLUCKY CREW!

Belleville juveniles put up a plucky fight against the Peterborough Marines in the second game of their OMHA playdowns here last night but again the well-coached experienced Petes youngsters flashed a fine brand of hockey to oust Jim Ethier's kids by a 10-4 score. Having played together for the past six years, the Marines showed plenty of evidence of team play and brilliant individual effort. They have two or three players that should "go places" in junior hockey and the team on a whole showed plenty of speed, hustle and ability. The Belleville kids battled them to the last ditch and only the fine work of the Petes goalie kept the score to four goals. Russell in the homesters nets despite the score turned in a fine exhibition.

The Belleville peewees battled against a team much heavier than they and came out on top of a 5-4 score to take the first game of a two-heat exhibition series. The youngsters provided lots of fire and zip and gave a very creditable performance.

"UP, THE GLENS!"

Don McNevin's Glen Roys blazing a furious third - period offensive scored five goals against a single return to take the first game of their best-of-five Trent Valley League southern section finals in Brighton last night. The Glens were down 4-1 in the first; 5-3 in the second and blasted the props from under the air crew's feet in a fast and furious third chukker. A crowd of over 600 watched the game, a rugged hard-hitting affair. The teams play the second game of the series here tomorrow night.

He will run in the 60 yards and 300 yards at Hamilton and will enter the 50 and 500 yards at Montreal. He is still spare goalie for the St. Michael's junior "B" Buzzers but works out in practice only since Dobbs the sensational double-blue goalie, is the talk of the circuit.

TROUT ON RECORD!

Thanks to the efforts of that conservation-minded gentle-Major Perc Ketcheson, aided and abetted no doubt by his estimable company colleague Tommy Rightmyer, the haunts of the elusive speckled trout in Hastings and Addington counties have been recorded on motion picture film.

The Carling Conservation Club, in furtherance of its policy, went to much expense in filming this beautiful colored record of the trout, its life, evolution, habits and never-ending duel with man. The film was "shot" in the Land o' Lakes, select trout haunts in this district and is one of the most colorful educational films of its kind ever recorded.

The premiere will take place at the Queen's hotel, Friday night where the film will be viewed by the tourist and publicity committees of Hastings, Belleville, and Lennox and Addington.

Detroit Practically Assured Of Finishing in Top Position With 3-2 Victory Over Hawks

Detroit, March 4—(CP)—Detroit Red Wings moved to within a single game of their fourth successive National Hockey League championship here last night by staging a typical late-game rally for three straight goals and a 3-2 victory over the lowly Chicago Black Hawks.

Trailing 1-0 at the end of the first period and 2-1 by the finish of the middle session, the league leaders clicked for two more goals in the final stanza and their important win.

Well Ahead

The victory over the tail-end Hawks—Detroit's 38th win of the campaign—gave the Wings 87 points, 17 more than the runner-up Montreal Canadiens. It will take nine Montreal wins and nine Detroit losses if the Canadiens are to win the league crown.

Al Dewsbury gave Chicago its first-period 1-0 lead with 19 seconds left in the opening session with a screened 50-footer that bounced off goalie Terry Sawchuk's shoulder into the net.

Jimmy Peters combined with Bep Guidolin and Jimmy McFadden for Chicago's second goal after 38 seconds of play in the second period and Metro Prystai started the Detroit parade two minutes later.

Marty Pavelich's tying counter came at 2:29 of the third period on a 10-foot swipe of Tony Leswick's pass-out. Red Kelly's winner at 9.51 originated from a scramble in front of the Chicago net with Metro Prystai and Marty Pavelich drawing assists

Leo Reise, Red Wing defenceman, was injured midway through the second period and missed the rest of the clash. He is reported to have suffered severely bruised ribs that may keep him out of action for several games.

Only one game is scheduled in the N. H. L. tonight. The fourth-place Rangers meet the Bruins who trail them by but two points in a game at Boston.

Manitoba Wins Double Victory In Curl Tourney

By AL VICKERY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, March 4—(CP)—Manitoba came up with two wins on yesterday's opening play in the five-day Canadian curling championships, the only rink to score a double victory.

But the experts were of the opinion that the Billy Walsh-skipped rink would have to get by British Columbia today before they'd go along with the handicappers that the host foursome was "the ones to beat."

Walsh was expected to get his toughest opposition from Reg Stone's Trail rink, who broke even on the first two rounds.

Other matches on the morning draw sent New Brunswick (1-1) against Ontario (1-0); Quebec (0-2) against P. E. I. (1-1); Saskatchewan (1-1) against Nfld., (0-2); and Nova Scotia (1-0) against northern Ontario (1-1). Alberta, who split on two matches yesterday, drew a bye on the third-round.

Manitoba's two victories came at the expense of Saskatchewan and Quebec. Walsh's rink defeated Frank Hastings of Nipawin, 9-8, on the first round then took Ken Weldon of Montreal, 10-7, last night.

The Manitobans didn't look too impressive in victory as the front end was missing badly on the early rounds.

Nova Scotia's Henry Blanchard of Truro went to the last rock to edge Art Simpson of Alberta, 8-6, on the second draw. Blanchard had a bye on the opening round, while Simpson was blasting Newfoundland's Tommy Tomelin, 23-7.

Glen Roys Win First of Series From Flyers, 8-6

Spotting the R.C.A.F. Flyers three goals in the first frame and still behind 5-3 at the end of the second, Glen Roys roared to the attack in the third canto and scoring five markers with only one reply from the Airmen, defeated the Flyers 8-6 at Brighton Monday night to win the first game of their final series in the southern division of the Trent Valley Hockey League. The second game of a best of five series will be played at the Memorial Arena on Wednesday night. On their showing last night the Glen Roys should capture this series and make the final series for the championship.

The winners had a little too much speed, better combination and showed more savvy when in close. It was a fast game of hockey, played on a good sheet of ice and with about 500 supporters of both teams on hand. The Flyers outplayed the eventual winners for the first two periods and only good goal tending by Plumley kept the boys in the game. In the third frame, however, still backed by good defence the forwards took over and literally skated the opposition into the ice. Cousins, Mulvihill, Loveless, Williams, Bone and Goyer carried the mail in this heat and when Bone scored the wining goal early in the third period, the Flyers had had it They did come back to get within one goal of the winners but while pressing to get the equalizer, Mulvihill broke out in the clear and flicked home the assurance goal.

A Rugged Game

It was a rugged game, with fourteen penalties being handed out. Belleville took seven of them, six coming in the last period. Bowman and Parnall, and Attrill were the marksmen for the Flyers with Parnall and Bowman standing out although Beatch played a strong game. For Glen Roys, Mulvihill led the scorers with three goals while Loveless got two and singletons were scored by Williams, Cousins, Bone. Leo Goyer assisted on four and incidentally played a smart game. The refereeing by Carson and Goyer was excellent, there being no protests on their calls.

Lineups:

Glen Roys: Goal, Plumley; defence, York and Hurst; centre, Cousins; wings, Williams and Mulvihill. Alts. Goyer, Loveless, Hatfield, Bone, Adams, Jones, F. Mulvihill, D. Whalen.

R.C.A.F. Flyers: Goal, Scott; defence Bruce and Pumple; centre, Parnall; wings, McDonald, O'Meara. Alts. Beatch, Bowman, Attrill, Robefge, McLean, Dickson, Hampson, Faulkner.

Referees: M. Carson and V. Goyer, Belleville.

Marlie Juniors Might Play For Leafs

Toronto, March 4. (CP)—Conn Smythe, managing-director of Toronto Maple Leafs, announced yesterday that Earl Balfour and Eric Nesterenko of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A Toronto Marlboros would practise with the Leafs today.

Smythe also hinted that Balfour and Nesterenko, both forwards on the first-place O.H.A. Junior A Club, might play for Leafs in their Wednesday game against Montreal Canadiens.

Under N.H.L. lend-lease rules, both players are allowed to play three games with the parent Leafs and still retain their amateur status.

Belleville Peewees Edge Peterborough 5-4

Playing against a much heavier team, the Belleville peewees defeated the Peterborough peewees last night by a 5-4 score. The game was played prior to the Peterborough-Belleville juvenile playoff game.

The moppets showed a fast brand of hockey and referees Hec Lalande and Bob Wilson had little to do other than whistle-blowing. Only two penalties were handed out, one to Foster of Belleville and the other to Henry of Peterborough.

Pint-sized Ab Wright paced the Belleville youngsters scoring three of the five goals. Boulter and Garrison scored the others. "Gilly" also stood out.

Heig, a tall over-sized player, was the individual star of the Petes notching all four counters mainly on individual efforts.

National Hockey League 'Toughies' Really 'Nice Guys', Says Stick Boy

New York, March 4 — (AP) — Hockey's bad men are some of the nicest people. If you don't think so, ask a stick boy. Like baseball's bat boys, they have their own ideas, and they seldom jibe with the attitude of the average fan.

Mortson a Gentleman

"Maybe Mortson wouldn't think twice about wrapping the business end of his stick around his grandmother," says Marchfeld, "but off the ice he's a gentleman.

"When most players want water, they just say: 'Water, boy!' But Mortson, he's different. The other night on the bench I'm sitting next to him and he says: 'Alex, will you please get me a cup of water! I start to go for it, and he says: 'Not now, Alex, when you get up. Not now!'

"Earlier that day Mortson was up for a hearing in Campbell's office. He was supposed to have kicked the Rangers' Hy Buller. But when he was sitting next to me, he says: 'I didn't kick Buller. All I do is raise my foot, and everybody says I kicked him.'

"Just then, Buller breaks up a two-man rush by himself, and Mortson nudges me: 'Another year and Buller will be one of the best defencemen in this league. He's great!' "

Lindsay Nice Too

"Remember when Ted's stick slashed the face of Edgar Laprade," Alex says. "The crowd thought it was a deliberate slash, but on the bench Lindsay says to me: 'Of all the guys to get in the way of my stick. He's the last guy I'd want to hurt.' "

Marchfeld regrets that Bill Ezinicki is no longer in the league.

"Another sweetheart," he says. "Really high class. I know he threw his weight around pretty good on the ice, but on the bench he was a gentleman. In fact, a gentleman golfer.

"Maybe that was the trouble. They tell me he would play 36 holes of golf the day of a game, when everybody else was conserving their energy. Maybe his coaches didn't like that, but to me he was a nice guy."

KILLED BY TRAIN

Woodstock, March 4 (CP) — Adrian Cardinal, 37, of London, was killed today when a passenger train struck his automobile at the Governor's Road crossing four miles west of here.

Police found his body 30 yards from the wreckage of his car.

Saddler Disqualified in Rhubarb With Savoie for 'Illegal Tactics'

Montreal, March 4—(CP)—Sandy Saddler, world featherweight champion found himself in hot water today for the second time in less than six months.

Saddler was disqualified between the third and fourth rounds of his scheduled 10-round bout with Canadian lightweight champion Armand Savoie of Montreal on charges of illegal tactics.

The disqualification produced a first-class rhubarb. Fans milled about the ringside and fights broke out among them. Three carloads of police hurried to the Montreal Forum to stop the brawling and shoo the crowds away. Saddler's handlers were wrathful at the disqualification.

Saddler weighed 130½ and Savoie 134.

Last Oct. 5, chairman Bob Christenberry of the New York State Athletic Commission, suspended Saddler indefinitely as an aftermath of a bout with Willie Pep, a rough-house affair in a title bout at the Polo Grounds in New York Sept. 26. Pep had his licence revoked. Saddler was reinstated in New York Dec. 5.

Last night's disqualification came after Saddler was repeatedly warned by referee Tommy Sullivan for holding, heeling and other illegal tactics.

Stopped After Third

After the third round ended, Emile Gauthier, president of the Montreal Athletic Commission, climbed to the apron of the ring and told Sullivan to stop the fight. Sullivan then declared Saddler disqualified and walked over toward Savoie's corner.

The crowd—there were 8,334 paid admissions—sat as if stunned fora minute and then let out a roar. Then hundreds began milling about the ring and fights broke out between bettors.

The athletic commission officials went into semi-official huddles and planned a full-dress meeting today.

Saddler was warned at weighing-in time about illegal fighting. President Gauthier said he told the New York boxer that he was known as a dirty fighter, particulerly since the Saddler-Pep brawl.

Gauthier said Saddler told him: "You have no right to talk to me that way."

Gauthier said when he climbed to the ring after the third round Saddler told him to "go to hell."

"Continually Fouling"

Referee Sullivan said Saddler was "fouling continually—heeling, holding and hitting on the breaks and sending in low blows," and "it looked to me for a while as if he wanted to be disqualified."

Matchmaker Raoul Godbout refused Gauthier's orders to freeze Saddler's purse, saying he had to pay the fighters "and I think you exceeded your authority."

Charlie Johnson, Saddler's manager, claimed Savoie kept turning his back and Saddler was doing nothing illegal by keeping on punching.

Bert Briscoe, Saddler's trainer, exploded: "We'll ruin Montreal as a fight town. We'll warn American fighters to stay away from here or they'll get the business."

The three rounds of the fight produced almost continual clinching and in-fighting, with Saddler hammering away with both hands at close quarters. He had a good margin in the first round but had the second taken from him because of illegal tactics.

In that round Savoie got him against the ropes and pummelled him with short-range blows for nearly half a minute. Then Saddler broke away and turned the tables briefly, connecting late in the round with a long looping left. Saddler went back strictly to in-fighting in the third round and was warned several times by the referee.

Mixed Commercial Bowling League

There were five seven-point winners in the Mixed Commercial Leauge at the Bowl-O-Drome last night. Whiz Bangs, Symons, K.V.A.'s, Short Circuits and Sun Rays were the winners over Live Wires, Marketeers, Bombers, Power Pins and High Liners respectively. Hy Rollers took a five to two decision over Jets, while Smasheroos edged Eggheads four to three.

For the ladies Marg. Fairbairn had 758, Helen Reeves 672, Grace Clapp 661, Dot Bone 656. Doris Mansfield 658, Nora McDonald 634. Dot Mansfield 627.

The scores: Whiz Bangs 3310; Live Wires 2890; Symons 3305; Marketeers 2892; K.A.V.'s 3120; Bombers 2515; Short Circuits 2963; Power Pins 2545; Sun Rays 2839; High Liners 2488; Hy Rollers 2994; Jets 2800; Eggheads 2603; Smasheroos 2562.

Petes Drop Eagles To Third Place

Peterborough, March 4 —Peterborough Petes pushed Peterborough Eagles down into third place in the OHA Senior "B" Central Ontario group standing with a schedule-ending 6-3 defeat here last night.

It was 2-1 for Petes in the first period and 5-2 going into the third. The winners drew seven of the 13 penalties.

Chum Fryia counted two for Petes, singles going to Don Floyd, Earl Leonard, Gus Leonard and Junior West.

Eagles goals were by Jim Munroe, Bert Hill and Bus Jensen.

Obscure Negro Whips Brion

San Francisco, March 4 (AP)—Bob Dunlap, obscure Negro heavyweight from Oakland, Calif., punched himself into the National boxing picture last night when he scored a 10-round decision over Cesar Brion of Buenos Aires.

Dunlap, a 3-1 short ender, dropped the Argentine heavyweight in the second and ninth rounds and was floored himself in the wild second round. Dunlap weighed 182½; Brion 198.

It was a tremendous upset, watched by a crowd of 4,000 which paid gross receipts of $8,034.75.

The decision was unanimous. The Associated Press score sheet gave Dunlap seven rounds, Brion one and two even.

Burke Takes Baton Rouge Golf Tourney

Baton Rouge, La., March 4 (AP)—For 91 holes it looked like the inaugural $10,000 Baton Rouge Open golf tournament would never end.

Then in a driving rain, poker-faced Jack Burke Jr., propelled a ball over a flooded green to break the deadlock, end the sudden death extra playoff, and win his third straight major tournament in three weeks.

The tournament was supposed to end Sunday. But at the end of 72 holes three pros—Burke of Houston, Tex., Bill Nary of Albuquerque, N.M., and Tommy Bolt of Durham, N.C., and Houston—were tied with seven under par 281s.

An 18-hole playoff was held yesterday but the trio was still tied with two-under-par 70s. Then came the sudden death playoff.

On the 19th, Bolt dropped by the wayside when he fell short with a six-foot putt. That left it to Nary and Burke, and the little Texan birdied the 20th with a 20-foot putt to take first prize.

In winning his third straight tournament, Burke shoved his winnings above the $6,000 mark for three weeks' work.

Sport in Brief

(By The Canadian Press)

Ottawa got Regina's goat Sunday.

"Ruffie," former mascot of the Saskatchewan Roughriders' football team, was shot after Ottawa decided it could be a carrier of foot-and-mouth disease.

The goat, a gift to the team's booster club in 1949, has been in semi-retirement since 1950. But in its heyday, the mascot was a popular figure at Regina football games and even took a road trip to Calgary for a short visit with the Stampeders' mascot, a Shetland pony.

Ruffie, first goat in Saskatchewan to fall before police bullets in the current campaign against the disease, was housed in Regina with some bulls, property of the federal government. When the bulls contracted the disease and had to be shot, the white goat had to go to the death pit with them.

Some 355 athletes from 39 Canadian and U. S. track clubs and universities will compete in the annual indoor track meet sponsored by the 91st Highlanders.

Eliminations will begin Saturday afternoon with 44 heats scheduled in the first section of the program. The finals, 38 in all, will be run off in the evening.

Hill Prince, the 1951 handicap champion, has run his last race. Christopher T. Chenery, owner of the Virginia-bred five-year-old, said Hill Prince developed a filling in a foreleg after last Saturday's $100,000 Santa Anita handicap, in which he finished fifth and will be shipped to stud at the Claiborne farm at Lexington, Ky.

Argentine chess champion, Miguel Mardorf and his compatriot, Erick Eliskases drew in 39 moves Sunday night in one of the most interesting games yet played in the International Chess Tournament in Havana, Cuba. It was the seventh round. Mardorf now leads the classification with six victories and one loss (draws count as half a win and half a loss).

The University of Western Ontario kept alive their hopes for the intercollegiate intermediate hockey title yesterday by coming from behind twice to beat the University of Toronto Jay Vees 4-3 at Varsity Arena in Toronto. If the Colts beat Ontario Agricultural College of Guelph, Wednesday, they will force a play-off for the title.

Hialeah Race Course at Miami, Fla., ended the most profitable season in Florida turf history yesterday with both attendance and betting figures setting records: A total attendance for the 40-day meeting of 771,708, more than $3,000 above the previous record set in 1946, and a whopping $60,637,049—pari-mutuel take—first $60,000,000 race meeting in Florida history.

Jack Latter, president of Quebec Aces, said yesterday in Quebec that a Montreal report that his club was planning to offer Jean Beliveau, its star centre, a three-year contract at $15,000 a year "is so ridiculous I won't answer it."

The tall spectacular centre player has turned down offers previously with Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League. He is generally credited with being the big factor in attracting hockey crowds of upwards of 9,000 persons for the Ace's games in Quebec.

Cleveland Boss Confident Team Can Beat Yanks

By GAYLE TALBOT

Tucson, Ariz., March 4 (AP)—Some of the things which happened to Al Lopez in his first season as manager of Cleveland Indians might have turned the man from Tampa into a waspish individual given to long moody reflections on the perversity of baseball players in general.

But they haven't. The senor is his same gentle smiling self. He is able to speak calmly of the failure of his big men—Luke Easter, Larry Doby, Al Rosen—to hit up to expectations last year. He is confident he will lick the Yankees this time.

"I think they're going to miss Joe DiMaggio even more than they realize," he said. "I don't care what Joe hit last year. All I know is that when he was in there against us we felt like we were facing a different club than when he was out.

Yeah, Who?

"Who's going to be their take-charge guy now? Phil Rizzuto? I don't think Phil can take Joe's place. Phil is a great shortstop but he's just a little fellow that they like and kid around with. Yogi Berra? the same thing — a fine catcher but scarcely possessed of the qualities which set DiMaggio apart.

"Maybe Mickey Mantle can hold down centrefield for them but it's asking a whole lot of the kid.

"If they lost Jerry Coleman to the Marine air force, as it looks like they will, and Gil McDougald goes to second, who's going to play third for Casey? They've got some problems, same as everybody else.

"Outside of the Yankees I can't see any club we need to fear except possibly Detroit. I have a feeling they're going to be better. I can't see where Chicago White Sox figure to improve, for all their speed. Boston? They could be in bad shape if Ted Williams goes back in the service.

"Tell you where I do think there's going to be a big difference in our league. Those St. Louis Browns are going to make their presence felt."

Metals Trim Office In Electric Playoff

Sheet Metals took the first game of the best-of-three Northern Electric Hockey League finals in Memorial Arena last night defeating the Office team by a 6-3 score.

Metals staged a three-goal attack in the third to put the game on ice with Woods, Bell and Salter scoring and Lynch tallying the only goal for the losers.

Bell and Salter scored twice for the Metals with Woods and Totten getting singles. Taylor, Woodley and Lynch were the Office marksmen. Only two penalties were handed out by officials.

Juveniles Lose To Peterborough By 10-4 Score

Peterborough Outboard Marines juveniles swept into the third round of the OMHA playdowns here last night, defeating the Belleville team by a 10-4 score to win the goals-to-count round 23-4.

The well-coached Peterborough squad was given a much tougher battle than the 13-0 game won at home the other night. The Belleville team, outclassed, went down fighting and battled their more experienced foemen to the last whistle.

Better Than Score

The game was much better than the score indicates. The Petes met by a hard-checking crew of homesters were held to a 2-0 score in the first period. They unleashed a smooth offensive in the second period to sling home five more goals before Belleville scored its first goal of the series with a minute to go.

The third period produced the best hockey of the night. Petes grabbed a pair in the early minutes but the gallant Quinte crew got those back in seven minutes and the teams split a pair before the final whistle blew.

While a bit rugged at times it was clean hard-fought hockey with the officials handing out seven penalties four going to the Petes. A mild rhubarb occurred at one time but referees Ben Bowen and Tom Schreider had little difficulty in handling the game.

Frizelle led the Petes offensive with three goals and an assist. Cupola got a pair of tallies with Doris getting three helpers. Spencer got one and a pair, with McGrath, Dodd, Hunt and Pammett getting the rest.

Gerry Goyer scored two goals and an assist for the homesters with Meyer getting two assists and Philp and Brooks the remaining goals.

Jack Russell, Belleville goalie turned in a fine job despite the score and Delahie, Petes goalie turned back many potential Belleville tallies.

The teams:

Belleville: Goal, Russell; defence, Thompson, Baker; centre, Meyers; wings, Casey, Cook; subs Philp, Brooks, Goyer, Atkins, Burrows, Bovay, Canning, Ashley, Stolliker.

Peterborough: Goal, Delahie; defence, McGillen, Byrne; centre, Corbett; wings, Dores, Pammett; subs McCormick, Jones, Hunt, Spencer, Cupola, Frizzelle, Dodd, McGrath.

Referees: Ben Bowen, Trenton; Tom Schrieder, Belleville.

Player Efforts Reason Wings Lead National

Montreal, March 4 (CP) — Detroit Red Wings have just about clinched first place in the waning 1951-52 National Hockey League season.

Today, the Wings have 87 points, 17 more than the second-place Montreal Canadiens, made up of 38 victories and 11 ties in the 61 games they have played. They have dropped but 12.

Main reasons for Detroit's strong position in the six-team league can be found in the individual performances of Detroit players.

Gordie Howe of the Wings leads the league in points and goals scored and goalie Terry Sawchuk has chalked up 11 shutouts for a goals-against average of 1:85 a game.

Howe's league-leading point total is made up of a record 39 goals and 32 assists. In second place is Montreal's Elmer Lach who has 13 goals and a pace-setting 46 assists for 59 points.

Ted Lindsay of Detroit holds down third place with 54 points —21 goals and 33 assists—and Don Raleigh of New York comes next with 51 points, 16 goals and 35 assists.

The closest to Sawchuk is Al Rollins of Toronto who had a 2:11 goals-against average. He has five shutouts, the same number as Jim Henry of Boston.

The Leafs are the most penalized club with 702 minutes spent in the penalty box and the Rangers are the least-penalized club with 478 minutes.

League bad man "honors" go to Gus Kyle of Boston who has spent more than two full games —123 minutes—off the ice.

BUILDING TWO BRIDGES

Sudbury, March 4—(CP)—The Ontario highways department is taking advantage of winter cold to build two wooden bridges—one span crosses the west arm of Lake Nipissing between St. Charles and Noelville and the other will cross the west bay of the lake. Traffic is detoured over the ice which now is 20 inches thick.

Marlies, Bilts Hawks, St. Mike's Start Playoffs

Toronto, March 4. (CP)—Ontario Hockey Association Junior A officials yesterday announced dates for two playoff series.

Senior A series will see the league-leading Toronto Marlboros meet Guelph Biltmores in a best-of-seven series opening in Toronto March 9.

Galt Black Hawks and Toronto St. Michael's will open the best-of-five B series at Galt March 5.

Dates for the C series between Kitchener Greenshirts and St. Catharines Teepees will be decided today following a game between Kitchener and Galt. A victory for Kitchener would tie them for fifth place with Teepees in the 10-entry league.

Other dates for the first series are: March 11, 14 and 20 at Guelph and March 16, 18 and 21 at Toronto. In the B series, games will be played March 7 and 10 at Toronto and March 8 and 12 at Galt.

North Bay Hawks Oust Sudbury; Meet the Soo

Sudbury, March 4 — (CP)—Vic Jackson's goal after only 50 seconds of a second and sudden death overtime period last night moved North Bay Black Hawks into the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior A finals against Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds.

The goal gave the Hawks a thrilling 3-2 victory over Sudbury Wolves in the fifth and deciding game of the best-of five series.

Goals by Vic Jackson and Fred Valenti gave the Hawks a 2 1 lead in the first period. Ron Castelane scored the Sudbury marker. Andy Milne deadlocked the game in a solo effort late through the third period.

Red Barret of Sudbury was sitting out a tripping penalty when the winning North Bay tally was scored. He had received the sentence in the final minute of the first overtime session and the Hawks capitalized on the one-man advantage.

THE Calvert SPORTS COLUMN

by Elmer Ferguson

Have YOU ever heard of Canada's Athletic Hall of Fame, and the names of those who dot the mythical enclosure?

Probably not. Yet it is a record of a long and important cross-section of Canadian sports life and endeavour, significant because it reveals that in Olympic competition, Canada, despite its comparatively sparse population has compiled an amazingly fine record.

We think Canadians should know more about this particular Hall of Fame. It was first suggestion in 1947 by Lt.-Col. George C. Machum, E.D., President of the A.A.U. of C., adopted by that body in 1949, officially inaugurated by the Governor General in 1950.

First members are first-place gold medal winners at the Olympic Games, for Canada, and the number of these might surprise you.

The first member was a brawny Montreal police officer, Zenon Desmarteau, who won the 56-pound hammer toss at the St. Louis Olympics in 1904. Then came little Billy Sherring, of Hamilton, who galloped home in front of the world's athletes over the original marathon course in Greece, at the 1906 games. Bobby Kerr, of Hamilton, winner of the 200-meter event at the 1908 Olympics in London; George Hodgson, who won two swim events at the 1912 Olympics in Stockholm and the great Canadian walker George Goulding, who won in the Antwerp Games in 1928, help swell the roster.

Vancouver's slim whippet, Percy Williams, who scored a double at Amsterdam, winning the 100 and 200 meter sprints; Ethel Catherwood, the beautiful western girl who captured the women's high jump there, and the Canadian girls' relay team of Fannie Rosenfeld, Myrtle Cook, Ethel Smith and Florence Jane Bell, all won places in the mythical Hall. In 1932 at Los Angeles, Toronto's Lefty Gwynne, a boxer and the western high-jumper, Duncan McNaughton, both won championships. In 1936 at Berlin, Frank Amyot, of Ottawa, defeated the world's best paddlers. And in 1948, at St. Moritz, it was Canada's sweetheart, Barbara Ann Scott, who added to the Dominion's sport glories by winning world and Olympic fancy skating honors.

The Hall committee hasn't stopped at that. Louis Rubenstein, who won the world fancy skating title in St. Petersburg over half a century ago; the late Charlie Gorman, of Saint John, N.B., one of the greatest bladesmen to come from this hotbed of speed skaters; three Canadian Diamond Scull winners, Lou Scholes, Joe Wright, Jr., and Jack Guest, Sr., are listed. So is slim Phil Edwards, one of the great modern runners, three times on Canadian Olympic teams.

There will be many more to come, such as Moncton's Jimmy Humphrey, Montreal's Frank Lukeman, Hamilton's Tom Longboat. There's John C. Caffrey and Johnny Miles, each of whom won the Boston marathon twice, and slim Gerard Cote of St. Hyacinth, who took this classic four times. These are only a few. You could rattle off scores of illustrious names that over the years figured in international competition and brought glory to the Dominion. There are the great professionals, George Young, Hod Stuart, Howie Morenz, George Dixon, Sam Langford, Tommy Burns, whose names would grace any Canadian athletic roster.

But, as it stands, the Hall's list reveals more strikingly than perhaps you imagined that Canada has sent some great athletes to the international wars.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

A good defender in bridge prepares himself for emergencies. If he makes a bid that may be dangerous, he usually has an out. Unles he has, his dangerous bid in the first place was inexcusable.

Conclude our discussion of this deal:

♥Q 8 6 4 2
♦Q 8 6
♣10 4 3 2

WEST	EAST
♠Q 9 6 5 4 2	♠10 3
♥J	♥A 10 9 7 5
♦9 5 2	♦None
♣A K 5	♣Q J 9 8 7 6

SOUTH
♠A K J 8
♥K 3
♦A K J 10 7 4 3
♣None

Assume the bidding sounded like this:

South	West	North	East
2 D	Pass	2 NT	3 H
Pass	Pass	Dbl

East is ready with a bid of four clubs. South passes again. The bidding is open for north. West prefers clubs of the two east suits and will pass. What does that make north?

North must either make double for penalty or bid. He bids four in the diamond suit to show his support. East will pass and south should bid five diamonds. Why not go to slam in diamonds?

By a reply of two no-trump north denied having a sure trick. If so, opponents must have two aces. South knows slam is a gamble. For which I have no rule. Which may not stop you.

Over five diamonds, west may go to six clubs. With what east has shown, six clubs doubled may not lose more than south can make at a game. At least, some west players would consider this.

If west goes six clubs, south may say six diamonds. This can be defeated with a heart lead and heart return. Which south does not know but can suspect from the bidding.

With any opening lead other than a heart, south can make six diamonds. So, if you know a rule for assuring such a lead go to it.

South might have rebid diamonds on the second round. North may have used other bids on the second or third round. Opponents might bid over the slam. But before we get involved again, let's forget the whole thing.

Training Camp Briefs

Phoenix, Ariz., March 4—(AP)—Manager Leo Durocher of the New York Giants hinted today that catcher Ray Noble may be traded.

Noble checked into camp yesterday and Durocher remarked that the hefty Cuban receiver would make a good catcher for several clubs, especially Pittsburgh and Boston.

The Giants have three catchers—Wes Westrum, Sal Yvars and Ray Katt, in addition to Noble, and probably would be willing to trade him for a left-handed pinch-hitter.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 4—(CP)—Rookies Andy Carey and Jim Brideweser and Billy Martin figure prominently in New York Yankee manager Casey Stengel's plans.

Carey will be given a full crack at third base. If he wins it, Gil McDougald will shift to second. If Carey fails, Martin and Brideweser will battle it out for second base with McDougald returning to third.

Lakeland, Fla., March 4—(AP)—Vic Wertz, home run blasting outfielder, has his initial try at first base yesterday in what has been billed as manager Red Rolfe's "great experiment."

Afterwards Wertz, who has never played the position before, had one observation:

"At least I won't have to chase those ground balls—the ones they hit through me in the outfield—all over the park."

Bradenton, Fla., March 4—AP—Manager Tommy Holmes of the Boston Braves is impressed with the all-round ability of George Crowe—the big Negro rookie first baseman—although he's watched him in just one workout.

Crowe, who hit .339 for Milwaukee last season and .336 in the Puerto Rican winter league, belted some long balls in his first training drill yesterday.

Former Gridders Star Curlers

Hamilton, March 4—(CP) — A rink of former players in the Big Four Football Union yesterday piled up the biggest scores in the first two rounds of the 31st annual Hamilton bonspiel.

Skipped by Ray Broadway, the rink is composed of Tiny German, Chubby Dunne and Gord Perry. After squeaking through with an 11-9 victory over J. W. Currie's Ayre, Ont., rink in the first round of play for the Spectator Trophy, they swamped C. A. Birge's Toronto Curling Club foursome 17-0.

W. Peterson and his Chicago quartet were nosed out 9-8 in the opening round by C. C. Noseworthy of Sarnia. E. Sowerby's Winnipeg rink bowed 9-5 to C.W. Meakin's Thistle combination in their opening play, but fared better in consolation Westinghouse Trophy play by downing Bob Sutherland of Guelph 9-8.

H. G. Turnbull of the Hamilton Thistle Club was the only local two-round victor, coming through with a 12-5 decision over Rev. R. T. Young of Brantford and an 11-10 win over S. Smither's Galt crew.

Little Benny's Note Book

This morning pop was drinking his coffee in back of his paper and ma was eating her grapefruit diet, saying, Oh dear, I wish this day was behind me instead of ahed of me.

G, ma, what's the use wishing you were a day older? I said, and ma said, I feel 5 years older when I think of the ordeal facing me. Tuesday is my bizziest day even under normal conditions, and on top of that Mr. and Mrs. Tippster are coming for dinner and I'll have to have the house spicken span and shining from top to bottom, because Mrs. Tippster's nose is in everything and her eyes never stop roaming. And then there's all the marketing still to be done, and the whole diner to prepare and the dizzert to make. Oh dear, by the time the Tippsters arrive I'll just about be able to greet them at the frunt door like a walking ghost. There's just no sense to it and I dont see why I do it, she said.

Well jimminies, ma, if you get exhausted enough, may be the docter will send you to some swell place to rest where you wont have to do anything but lie in the sun and pick flowers, I said, and she said, Thanks for the practical and inexpensive suggestion, I'm sure.

Being sourcastic, and pop said, Cheer up, my dear, there's always a chance that something will happen and our guests wont show up.

Oh dear, that would just be the crowning blow and final straw, ma said. Dont even suggest sutch a gassly thing, she said, and pop said, Well, Benny, we've done our best. We'd better just leave the house as quietly as possible, he said.

Which we did, and tonite Mr. and Mrs. Tippster came and ma seemed to have the best time of anybody.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, March 4 — (AP) — Few actors get a second chance at the big-time in the movies. That's why it's news when Peter Lind Hayes starts his fourth film career.

That's not bad for a lad in his mid-30s.

Peter was born and bred in show business, his mother being old-time entertainer Grace Hayes. Pete tried everything including a job as stand-in for Ted Healy, the comedian.

"That lasted for two years," he recalled. "Then Healy died and I was out of a job."

Grable and "B"s

His second career began when he was signed to an acting contract at Paramount. His first picture was "Million Dollar Legs," with Betty Grable. After 17 pictures, mostly "B"s, he was washed up.

Then came the Second World War and Pete toured with "Winged Victory." After he returned from the service, he tried the night club circuit and scored a big hit.

His first picture under his new contract was "The Senator was Indiscreet." It was a flop and turned out to be his last.

Pete returned to New York. He and his talented wife, Mary Healy, latched onto television. They now are veterans of three sponsored shows and one sustaining, which makes them old-timers in the infant industry.

Hollywood Again

Mary and Pete are back in Hollywood, this time to star in a Stanley Kramer film with the weird title of "The 5,000 Fingers of Dr. T." Pete isn't bowled over by his latest movie break. He and Mary still intend to live in New York.

"You can keep people off-balance back there," he reasoned. "If you fail in one medium, there are three others you can jump to. In Hollywood, if you fail in movies, there's only one place you can jump—in the Pacific Ocean."

Three Detroit Girls Awarded $55,000 Damages

Windsor, March 4 — (CP)—A supreme court jury Saturday brought down a $55,000 verdict in favor of three Detroit girls who sued an Ontario construction company in an automobile accident case.

Mary Kraljevich, 20, who bears permanent scars as the result of injuries received in the October, 1950, accident, was awarded general damages of $36,020. Her sister, Florence, 19, was awarded $9,840 and Mitzie Frye, 19, a friend, $4,788.

Special damages to relatives of the girls totalled $4,429.

The three girls were injured when a convertible driven by Mary Kraljevich crashed into a trailer-transport driven by Lawrence Muxlow, Courtright, Ont., an employee of the Shaw Construction Company, Sarnia.

The jury found Muxlow 100 per cent responsible for the accident.

Isidore Levinter, Toronto, counsel for the Shaw Company, said the verdict will be appealed.

Evidence indicated that Muxlow was backing his vehicle onto a highway when it was struck by the automobile.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is according to the stars.

For Wednesday, March 5

March 21 to April 20—(Aries)—Excellent Mars rays, plus other favorable planetary aspects, promote benefic day. Be sure motives are honorable; do think of other's rights as you strive to achieve.

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus)—Very favorable influences. Personal gains in your occupation are indicated, sponsored. Artistic professions, mental work and labor can achieve.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—Mild influences, but going to very favorable strong Mercury rays for tomorrow. So plan, work accordingly. Writings, law, secretarial interests in high gear. Forward all!

June 22 to July 23—(Cancer)—No room now for personal whims or thinking others' opposition to you isn't well founded; it may be better than yours. Do your tasks with your usual thoughtfulness and efficiency.

July 24 to August 22—(Leo)—Peak rays for honest endeavor, commendable interests, perhaps attaining favors. Be grateful to God for all blessings, you will gain more. Hard work, difficult problems under benefic Sun aspects.

August 23 to September 23—(Virgo)—Not all generous or favorable for matters that call for keen brain work. You may have to work harder, plan wiser. Much is promised for living rightly every day.

September 24 to October 23—(Libra)—Read Taurus, your indications similar now. In going after big achievement, don't neglect little but telling details. Honorable trades, professions, religious under fine influences.

October 24 to November 22—(Scorpio)—Benefic Mars and Sun rays today sponsor activities that need vigor, courage and stamina—and you have these inherently. But don't be over-forceful.

November 23 to December 22—(Sagittarius) — Your Jupiter stresses personal accomplishment. Much is really up to you. Fine day for private interests, sound financial, all worthy activities.

December 23 to January 21—(Capricorn)—Do not let difficult problems, troublesome people stump you. You have the quiet determination and courage for all "comers". An agreeable day for steady advancement.

January 22 to February 20—(Aquarius)—Your planet Uranus today saya review, rest some cases for a refreshed mind later. Gain by garnering the benefic offerings from others. Be ambitious, keep busy.

February 21 to March 20—(Pisces)—Similar advice and advantages to Aquarius today. Nothing to be gained by worrying and a lot always to be had by attending essentials quickly, efficiently. Earn time for fun.

YOU BORN TODAY: Likeable characteristics, including kindliness, understanding, generosity, and personable manner. Urge yourself to compete with the smartest. Know you have the ability and talents, but improve them daily, too. Many notable writers, artists, designers of wearing apparel, also sound business managers are Pisces-born.

Why We Say--
SECRETARY

. . . Private notes

"Don't tell a woman a secret," the saying goes, but many a business man who dictates to his secretary does just that. The word secretary is derived from SECRET. Secretaries formerly recorded only the private notes of their employers.

WELLINGTON

Wellington—Mr. and Mrs. Burnett Reid and son, of Bloomfield, spent last Friday with Mrs. James Reid.

The picking room of Canners Seeds finished for the season on Saturday morning last.

Independent Movement, Once Major Factor in Alta. Politics, Disappears, Member Join S.C.

Edmonton, March 4 (CP)—The Independent Movement, once a major factor in Alberta politics, has disappeared.

The lone survivor of the organization formed 12 years ago with the chief purpose of upsetting a Social Credit government, H. B. Macdonald of Calgary announced Friday in the provincial legislature that he will support the province's Social Credit administration.

Mr. Macdonald, referring to Premier E. C. Manning's government as the "best private enterprise" government in Canada and as having the "best leadership' of any Canadian government, said it represents the principles on which he was elected twice and that he planned supporting it "absolutely".

The Independent Movement, a coalition of Liberals, Conservatives, former members of the United Farmers of Alberta and others opposed to Social Credit, was formed a few months before the 1940 provincial general election.

In their first try at the polls, the Independents won 17 of the legislature's 57 seats and became the official opposition. The Social Credit government was re-elected winning 35 seats.

J. Percy Page of Edmonton, more widely known as the coach of Edmonton Grads, perennial women's world basketball champions, was elected president of the association and also won a seat in the legislature.

Another man without previous political connections, J. H. (Jim) Walker of Raymond, was chosen first house leader. The rotating house leadership later was assumed by J. H. Mahaffy of Calgary and the late Alfred Speakman of Red Deer.

A few months before the next general election, the Liberals left the Independent Movement and only 3 Independents were elected. Then in 1948, Mr. Macdonald was the only survivor.

"We could see no use in carrying on and so we decided to disband," said Mr. Page, who was house leader from 1944 to 1948 and continued as president of the Provincial Association.

Mr. Macdonald's decision to support the Social Credit regime ended the 12-year-old movement.

Canucks to Wear Bullet-Proof Vests

Mary Ann Kennedy, U. S. Marine private, models the bullet proof vest that is now saving Allied lives in Korea. The vest, weighing just over eight pounds, drapes over a man's shoulders, front and back, like a bulky naval life-jacket. The strips which can stop any bullet, except at very close range, hide away snugly in a plain olive drab vest. The vests will be issued to Canadian troops in Korea. — Central Press Canadian.

Special Funds Made Available For Research

Ottawa, March 4 (CP)—Special funds were made available last year for research in the action and uses of the drugs ACTH and Cortisone in Canadian universities and hospitals, the national research council's medical research division reported Monday.

Experimental use of these hormones was made possible as a result of generous contributions from provincial departments of health out of dominion-provincial health grants," report said.

Only small amounts of the drugs were available previously but "the Connaught Medical Research Lobaratories (at the University of Toronto), with assistance from this fund, have extracted a large amount of ACTH which is made available to investigators (across Canada) by the council."

These rare drugs are distributed to various medical research men who apply to a special committee headed by Dr. R. F. Farquharson, Professor of Medicine at the University of Toronto.

The report said "radio-isotopes are used to a great extent in current medical research."

Those are the radio-active substances which make it possible to trace with a geiger counter the progress in the body of whatever chemical substance the scientists are interested in. The scientist adds a minute quantity of radio-active matter to the subject of his study, follows its course in the body with the geiger counter.

In a statement, the N. R. C. said it is giving "substantial support" through its medical research division to "studies in the basic sciences related to medicine and investigations into the cause and treatment of acute and chronic illness . . ."

$3,000 IN LOOT

Hamilton, March 4 CP—Yeggs hammered a hole through an 18-inch vault at National Grocers Company Limited early today and escaped with nearly $3,000 in loot.

Besides the loot—approximately $2,500 cash and $350 worth of government bonds—the safe raiders too a 32 calibre revolver from an office desk.

Safecrackers in Hamilton in the last three weeks have netted thieves a total of nearly $15,000.

Warfare Emerges In Labor Congress For Control

Ottawa, March 4—(CP)—Warfare has emerged openly in the 350,000-member Canadian Congress of Labor, where a sub-surface struggle for power has been waged for months.

Outwardly dormant since September, the explosive issue has been revived by a sharp attack on the Canadian chief of the big United Steel Workers of America. It came in the official journal of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, which is headed by C. C. L. president A. R. Mosher.

The magazine says in an editorial that Pat Conroy quit the secretary-treasurership of the C. C. L. in Sept., because "an unashamed drive for power, conceived in cunning and carried forward with craft, was aimed at changing the congress from a vehicle for many to a juggernaut for one."

The editorial adds Conroy, in walking out of his job at the Vancouver convention, "hoped his action would rouse the membership to the danger they faced, to the danger the congress faced."

The C. B. R. E. organ did not name the object of its attack, but the Sunday punch was unquestionably aimed at Charles Millard of Toronto, Canadian director of the 55,000-member steel union, about the largest single body in the congress.

Scored Win Over Conroy

Millard headed the behind-the -scenes forces that scored a win over Conroy and a majority of the C. C. L. executive on an involved issue of internal congress politics. The upshot of his defeat was that Conroy, for several years the C. C. L.'s chief policy-maker, quit immediately.

Openly, the scrap was over the election of members of the congress executive. Behind that were the fears of Millard's opponents that, with the backing of some other big international unions, he was trying to pick off too much power.

Those fears now are expressed openly for the first time in the C. B. R. E. editorial. Up to now, the parties on both sides of the dispute have been saying nothing for publication on its actual causes, apparently hoping that the rift might be closed without having it dragged into the open.

There had been some belief here that the 71-year-old Mosher and the steel-union chief actually had patched up their differences and come to a practical working arrangement for the next C. C. L. convention to be held in the fall. But the unveiled attack on Millard in President Mosher's own publication, its meaning obvious to any C. C. L. member, seems to throw a big question mark over any such arrangement.

U.N. Prisoners Get Quilted Chinese Uniforms

Emphatically denying any abuse of U.N. prisoners of war, communist war correspondents produce photographs to show healthy-looking prisoners sometimes playing games on prison grounds. This photo, according to communists, shows captured U.N. officers, dressed in the quilted Chinese uniforms, in front of a prison hut in North Korea. — Central Press Canadian.

Millionaire Says Money 'So Hot' Cannot be Passed

Reno, March 4—(AP) — Millionaire Laverne V. Redfield said the burglars who carted off his safe with $2,500,000 got currency "so hot they might as well light their cigarets with it."

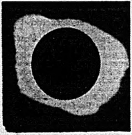
Most of the $310,000 in the safe was in big, old-fashioned bills, including two $10,000 notes. The eccentric millionaire said they would be almost impossible to cash; and so would $2,000,000 in negotiable securities. The balance was in distinctive jewelry.

Police appeared more concerned about the Friday robbery than did Redfield.

Five people were picked up in Montana last night but Sheriff Jesse Harris at Elko, Nev., said all five were in his jail — for investigation — at the time of the daylight burglary.

Police were deluged with tips—fruitless so far. Officers were reported to have uncovered heel prints, palm prints and a miscellaneous assortment of clues at the Redfield home.

Solar Eclipse in Anglo-Egyptian Sudan



This striking photograph of the recent solar eclipse was made at Khartoum in Anglo - Egyptian Sudan. Information gained from studies of the eclipse is expected to be useful in improving long-range radio communication, eventually. The eclipse occurs when the moon is directly in front of the sun. — Central Press Canadian.

BURR'S

Burrs — The movies shown of missions across Canada by the Rev. A Poulter at the Bowerman's Sunday evening service were interesting and helpful in showing that phase of the church work.

Mr. and Mrs. Ewart Harns and Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Harns were guests at an evening dinner at the home of Mrs. J. Wallbridge and Mr. and Mrs. R. Barber, Huffs Island, on Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Huffman, Jimmy and Mr. George Huffman, were Sunday guests of relatives near Whitby.

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. H. Hall are pleased to hear of their pleasant voyage and safe arrival in England. After an absence of over 30 years they note many changes.

The springlike weather has brought some of the winter birds out into the open, crows, horned larks, nuthatches, hairy woodpeckers, chickadees and snowbirds have been seen locally.

Mrs. C. Sprague, Mountain View, was a Wednesday guest of Mrs. Ross Burr.

Canadian Convict Wanted For Michigan Slaying

Washington, March 4 (AP)—A Canadian, described as extremely dangerous and wanted for the killing of a woman in Michigan, today was added to the Federal Bureau of Investigation's list of "10 most-wanted men."

He is Isaie Aldy Beausoleil, 49, known by the nickname "Frenchy." FBI records listed his birthplace as in "Simcoe County, Ontario."

Michigan authorities have charged him with murder in the roadside slaying of Rose Trahan, 47, of Danielson, Conn., and Worcester, Mass.

Miss Trahan's body was found in a ditch on Aug. 17, 1949, with her head caved in.

The FBI said the RCMP co-operated in the hunt for the former convict, once deported to Canada after a long record in the United States.

In 1929, he was given a long prison term for attempted robbery, escaped and was later convicted for assault and robbery at Providence, R.I.

He is a replacement on the list for Thomas Kling, convicted murderer and prison escapee picked up in New York Feb. 20.

More Precious Than Rubies

By Nina Wilcox Putnam

Alma Conroy couldn't understand the queer tone in her husband's voice. Bright was there, with Tommy, apparently—but wasn't Bright Muncie one of the thieves?

"What does he say?" Alma asked over the phone. "How did he explain . . ."

This time Tommy interrupted her "Bright is dead," he said. "Shot in the back. Brown shot him when he was dying."

It was almost impossible to grasp the horror of what Tommy was telling her. But it was more than a mere recital of facts. There was an urgent something, yet hidden quality in Tommy Conroy's voice, as though he were trying to convey something to her without being forced to say it.

Suddenly it occurred to her that the wire they were talking over might not be private. It might be in a police station, where officers might listen, unseen by Tommy. It was a creepy, unreal feeling that Alma had—this was the kind of thing she'd read about in newspapers and detective stories, but which she'd never thought of as being anything she would ever experience herself.

Still, that was in all likelihood, the reason for Tommy's strained voice and cautious answers. She was supposed to say something and Tommy was trying to make her say it. But what was she supposed to say? Had Tommy given her a cue and had she missed it?

Then she remembered, "Yes, Bright and I caught them." But Tommy had gone after Bright. Well, then, did Tommy for some reason want it supposed that he and Brighton Muncie had left together? She had to chance it.

"Oh, Tommy, how terrible!" she said. "Poor Bright! How ghastly your having to take his body in all alone. Are you in trouble over it, darling? Did you tell them I saw you leave here together?"

"Well, I'm not in serious trouble but there has been some questioning." The relief in his voice was unmistakable. "I think perhaps it would make matters easier if you hopped on down here and—well, just tell what you know."

Now she was sure she was on the right track. Tommy was using the fact that Bright was dead as a means of exonerating the name of The Head of Trumbull's.

"You mean what I know about you and Bright suspecting Mrs. Denton and trying to catch her before she and that man got away?"

"Well, poor Bright can't say anything one way or another," he said significantly, "so I'm afraid you'll have to, Jewels. Get hold of Joe Denton and have him bring you down. They want to talk to him, too of course. And, incidentally, the cops here think I may have stolen his car."

It was a long and hectic 48 hours later before the three of them—Tommy, Joe and herself—found themselves back in Alma's apartment.

Because the day was Sunday, they could take their leisure over the beautiful luncheon Alma had prepared from some of Gran' Bijou's best French recipes. The wintry sunshine poured into the breakfast nook as impersonally as if there were no such thing in this world as violence, thievery and sudden death.

Alma serving the two men, found it hard to believe that she had not dreamed the hectic scenes in the courthouse at that little Pennsylvania town—the blurred faces of the spectators, cruel, curious, or sympathetic! the crowding reporters, the flash of bulbs, the clicking of cameras, with herself, Tommy and Joe Denton the centre of attention.

The entire fantastic pageant of crime and heroism which had brought the obscure little village of Longtown to the front pages of every newspaper in the country now seemed remote and unreal. But the story in the newspapers bore evidence of its actuality, the headlines shouting triumphantly.

"Police say Brighton Muncie killed saving British Royal Jewels. . . Sacrifices life to return property stolen from Trumbull & Co. . . . Loyal assistance brings body and recovered loot into custody of police."

Then followed the story, as told by police reports quoting Tommy and corroborated by herself and Joe Denton, of how Bright and Tommy had long suspected Mrs. Denton of not being crippled, and set a trap for her: how Apollo Brown had stolen Bright's car been followed by Bright and Tommy until the stolen car cracked up on a lonely road, killing the woman and fatally injuring Brown who in a dying gesture had shot young Muncie while the latter was removing the stolen jewels from the wreckage. And lastly the reports told of Tommy's rushing his friend's body to the nearest help in the vain hope of saving young Bright's life.

Joe Denton was reading the account carefully, gripping the newspaper in one hand and attacking a dish of civet de rognon with the other.

The authorities at Longtown had separated him from the Conroys after the court formalities were over, in order for him to attend to the last services renderable to his mad old stepmother. This was the first time he had been able to talk to Tommy and Alma in private.

When he had finished reading what Tommy had told the police, and what the police had said, he put aside the paper and looked challengingly at his host.

"Well now, my dear Lone Ranger," he said, "or shall I call you Mr. Scattergood? Will you please for the love of tripe tell me what actually happened before you cooked up this horse opera and made Alma and me your corroborating witnesses?"

Alma Conroy suspended the making of crepes suzette to watch the cool, somehow infinitely older and more poised Tommy retell his story. She had been given some uneasy moments in the police station at Longtown, Pa., when she had been questioned. But actually she wasn't expected to know a great deal—only that Tommy had been suspicious of Mrs. Denton and that he and Brighton Muncie had gone in pursuit of her after the disappearance of some jewels at the House.

Now Tommy began his story. "I didn't have to invent much," he said simply. "I caught up with the three of them—Bright, Mrs. Denton and Apollo Brown—riding in Bright's car near the Hampton Circle. It's a new road with no buildings on that stretch.

"Brown was driving. Just ahead of me the car skidded in the snow and crashed into a telephone pole. Your—well—she was pinned under the car, probably killed instantly. Brown was hurt badly and I thought he was dead too, but Bright was thrown clear. I stopped my—or rather, your car, got out and ran toward Bright. He was stunned but uninjured otherwise and after a few seconds began to come to. I helped him to his feet and started to lead him towards your machine. Then I heard a shot and Bright folded.

"Brown had raised himself on one elbow for the shot—just as I told the police. Then I saw in a flash just how the whole thing could be handled. Brown had rolled over on his back and I saw he was gone too. Nobody would talk now. I put Bright in your car, found the jewels, and the rest you know."

"Humph!" said Joe, drawing a long sigh. "This winds things up very nicely, especially as the authorities here in New York seem satisfied that Apollo Brown did the Mammoth job—on his own. They found his fingerprints there, I see. Some papers were missing from the files and I'm betting they were the proof that Mammoth's offer on the sweeping had been suppressed."

"Yes," Alma agreed, "but," she wondered aloud "what about Higgins & Company? Won't they talk?"

"Only to back up my story," Tommy grinned. "It's a perfect out for them. They helped trap the old lady, period."

Joe stood up and buttoned his coat.

"Thanks for the meal, folks," he said. "And the usual apologies about running afterwards. But I'm dead on my feet, and you both must be, too. We'd all better get some rest."

For a while after Joe had gone Alma moved about the apartment quietly, putting things to rights, her mind fixed on one last problem. It was all very well for Joe to say that the whole dreadful episode was wound up, but there was one thing Joe did not know about. He had never been told of the gold and moonstone cufflink which she had picked up in Mr. Wheeler's office immediately after murder. Since the day she had shown it to Tommy neither of them had mentioned it to anyone, not even at the police station, when an inventory of belongings had shown that the matching link was in one of his shirt-sleeves at the time he was killed. The more she thought of it, the more its possession worried her. It was still in her handbag and had been all through the investigation. Was that inquiry really ended? She paused in her work, standing in front of Tommy, who looked up from his reading.

"Tommy," she began, "do you realize that we are the only two people in the world who could prove that Bright was at the very least, an accessory to Mr. Wheeler's murder?"

"You mean that cuff-link?"

"So you've been thinking of it too! What if the police look for it?"

"They won't. It's presumed to have dropped out on the road after the car wreck." This answer did not reassure her.

"But it didn't drop out!" she persisted. "And, being found where it was found, is positive proof that Bright was at the Mammoth offices earlier in the day. Suppose the police realize. . ."

"Forget it. They wont, but someone else might."

"Who?" she asked in sudden fright.

"Bright's father," Tommy said solemnly. "I'm not satisfied that The Head won't want to wind up even the most minute detail about his son. That's the sort of person Mr. Muncie is. What worries me is that he may question me privately.

"And if he does?"

"Ought I to tell him the truth?"

"After all you've done to protect him from it? Good heavens, Tommy!"

"Hold on a minute, Jewels! Mr. Muncie isn't an ordinary person, satisfied with ordinary explanations. He's hard to fool and he's the soul of honesty. He must have known what Brighton was like — that he was weak, in spite of all his father's efforts to make him otherwise. Of course, Mr. Muncie's glad to have his son's name kept clean, but he's the type who probably feels that the truth is more than being hurt himself."

She considered the matter for several seconds. How would she feel in Mr. Muncie's place? How had she felt when she had been suspicious of Tommy and then found out he was innocent? Would she have preferred to face the fact?

"I see," Alma said softly. "You mean that perhaps Mr. Muncie has a right to know."

Suddenly all their years together were there with them in the familiar room: all the lovely things they had done together, all the shared precious thoughts, the small quarrels which now seemed so unimportant.

Mysteriously Tommy had become in reality the man she had mistaken him for when they first met.

The offices of Trumbull & Co. were closed on the day of Bright's funeral which was held very quietly and in private. And on the day following Tommy received the long expected summons to an interview with Mr. Muncie in his private office. Alma was requested to go with Tommy, but by the time they arrived at The House they had still not decided upon what course to take.

Alma carried the incriminating piece of jewellery over which she had once labored with so much love in the inner compartment of her purse, in case it should, for any reason be needed. She could feel the tense expectancy in her husband as they went up in the elevator, and realized that she herself was trembling slightly.

After all, she thought, they, neither of them, had any idea of what lay ahead. None of the many rumors which permeated the shop grapevine ever sprang from the inner sanctum and consequently there had been no gossip about what The Head intended to do where the Conroys were concerned. She began to wish the interview was done and over with.

At the third floor they were joined by Old Victor Blanchard who announced his intention of accompanying them.

"You are going up to him—but yes?" he spoke with a slightly palsied shake of his head. "I too go along, for this is my concern. It was I who advised Bright's placement, and so it was also I who, indirectly, sent the boy to his death. If there is anything bad—I will face it with you!"

The private office was beautiful, severe, and carefully unpretentious and from behind the big desk, the almost legendary Mr. Muncie arose for a second as they came in and then indicating chairs for them, resumed his own. To Alma the Head's face had the same detached familiarity as the faces in a history book—Washington, Lincoln or General Lee: it was something she knew well but only as an axiom for good behavior. He was she thought probably the only man in New York who still wore a cutaway coat and striped trousers to business every day. He looked from one to the other of them in wholly impersonal, cool graciousness.

"My friend!" said Old Victor. "I can say nothing. What has happened is the will of God. But there is left to one a splendid memory. . ."

He bowed his head, unable to finish. Mr. Muncie's Adam's apple moved visibly in the cleft of his wing collar and the hidden muscles in his large, heavy face tightened.

"Are you sure, Victor, that it is a splendid memory?" His voice though a stependous effort, was low and controlled.

"Yes, mon ami, it appears certain." The old man, it appeared, actually believed this. Alma was surprised and relieved. The unpleasantness her grandfather had anticipated could not have concerned Bright's possible guilt in any connection. The Head turned to Tommy.

"And are you positive that I have been given all details?"

For a moment Alma felt panic-stricken. Now it had come, the moment of decision. But how could anyone tell these two suffering old men the truth? After all, Bright was dead. That was all that really mattered.

"I have nothing further to tell you," Tommy said. "But I would like to say that Bright died gallantly. If he failed to come back to prove his worthiness of the trust which was put in him, it was only because he gave his life when he might have bargained for it."

Tommy had been speaking to the immovable man behind the desk but he was also watching Papa Victor, who listened with fire in his eyes—the fire of faith renewed — Tommy comforted his life-long friend and hero, his impeccable superior, The Head of the House of Trumbull.

There was a moment of complete silence. Then Mr. Muncie cleared his throat and he assumed a business-like manner.

"Mr. Conroy," he said briskly, "your recent magnificent performance in the recovery, with my son's aid, of those stolen jewels, puts a new light on your character. We want men of your calibre, and we'd like to keep you with us. I understand that you are a good commercial photographer. We have an opening for you as head of that department. Would that be agreeable to you?"

"Would it?" said Tommy startled out of his formal manners. "Would it—oh boy!"

"Now at last it arrives!" said Old Victor delightedly. "Now we carry on, and maybe the next born of Blanchard blood shall carry on some day, as for the 100 years past —a good workman for a good master!"

Outside the snows were melting at last under a warmer sun. At the corner of the street an angry torrent rushed along, carrying bits of refuse and the grime of many winter months down the gutter grating. As she passed it, Alma opened a surreptitious hand and something golden flashed as it fell into the hurrying water and was rapidly sucked down out of sight.

"Did you drop something, dear?" Tommy asked absently.

"Yes," said Almaa, "our last unpleasant link with the past!"

Portable Helicopter for Rescue Work

Development of a new-type helicopter, which can be dropped from larger planes and unpacked by two men and in the air in approximately 20 minutes, has been revealed by the U.S. Army. Weighing less than 300 pounds, the new craft is six feet high and can be collapsed into a 5 x 5 x 14-foot container. Designed for air evacuation as well as observation, it can carry two men side by side, or tandem, in twin external little carriers. — Central Press Canadian.

Six Nations Win Snow Snake Title

Brantford, March 4—(CP)—The Six Nations Indians yesterday won the International Snow Snake championship in the final game of a six-game competition.

Three of the competitions were held in North Tonawanda, N.Y., Feb. 24 and 25 and the remaining three on Grand River Reservation near here Sunday and yesterday.

Albert Porter and Lawrence Jonathan brought the Canadian Indians their win yesterday by outdistancing any of the other 14 competitors. They tossed their snow snakes down the frozen track for more than a mile in the U.S. and just under a mile on the slightly upgraded Canadian track.

Plan Conference To Settle Problems Of Meat Marketing

Drew Calls Situation 'Major Calamity'

Import Embargo Imposed to Protect Canadian Market

- - - Gardiner

Ottawa, March 5 — (CP) Agriculture Minister Gardiner said last night the federal government's embargo on imports of livestock and cattle from other countries was imposed to protect the Canadian market for the Canadian producer.

"The government had no other objective than to make it possible for producers in Canada to have access to the only market that is available to them," said Mr. Gardiner.

He made the statement after George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, said:

"The Canadian Press indicated that the consensus was that this was not intended really as a barrier in the movement of cattle from the United States so much as it was intended as a device to force the provinces into submission to the wish of the agriculture minister that they should abandon their embargoes."

(The Canadian Press said yesterday, in reporting the import controls, that the ban also appeared to be an attempt to break restrictions established by British Columbia and Quebec against livestock and meats from other provinces.

British Columbia, Manitoba and Quebec have imposed restrictions on the imports of livestock and meat from other provinces.

Mr. Drew said Mr. Gardiner had not said anything to alter the impression given by the news report. In fact, Mr. Gardiner had said much to support it.

Embargo Means Nothing

The minister had said in the Commons that the embargo, in effect, was not going to mean anything; the United States was not going to export cattle to Canada at the prices that will prevail as a result of the outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease in South Saskatchewan.

Unless some explanation was given, said Mr. Drew, members would pass the bill with the knowledge that the federal government was nothing but a "club to force the provinces into submission."

Mr. Gardiner replied that the government had no other objective than to make it possible for producers in Canada to have access to the only market available to them.

The only way the Canadian consumer would suffer as a result of the federal embargo was through provincial restrictions. Such restrictions could prevent adequate Canadian meat supplies from reaching them.

Mr. Drew said the provinces had the right to impose the restrictions. Agriculture was one of the things that was as much under provincial as under federal jurisdiction.

No one wanted to see erected barriers to a free flow of trade among the provinces, but the provinces had a right to act to protect themselves from the negligence of the federal government.

Ottawa, March 5 — (CP)—The Canadian government plans to call a federal - provincial conference at the "earliest possible" date to deal with problems arising from the outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease among livestock of southern Saskatchewan.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner told the Commons yesterday the conference with the provinces will be held as soon as they can be given proof that there is no danger of the dreaded disease spreading through the movement of livestock and meat from one province to another.

While he spoke, the network of provincial and international restrictions on livestock and meat trade continued to cause widespread marketing disruptions.

George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, described the situation as a "major calamity." He urged that not a day be lost in bringing the provinces together to study problems.

Outside the Commons, Elia Trepel, president of the Winnipeg Stock Exchange, said the situation is becoming a national calamity.

Restrictions Maintained

British Columbia, Manitoba and Quebec all maintained their restrictions on imports of livestock and meat from other provinces. Manitoba banned the entry even of livestock shipments destined for eastern Canada.

Meanwhile, Nova Scotia placed a three-week embargo on all western livestock, including horses. The action was announced last night by Agriculture Minister Mackenzie in the legislature.

In Lethbridge, Alta., W. T. Hill, a livestock feeder and dealer, said he was investigating the possibility of airlifting lambs to the Toronto market.

As a result of the import restrictions, employees of meat packing-plants in some areas were threatened with unemployment. Shortages of meat were expected to boost prices in some areas.

In the Commons, Mr. Gardiner said his department believes the outbreak of the disease has been confined in a 50-square-mile quarantined-area around Regina. Veterinarians have reported no new cases since Feb. 19.

Gardiner Optimistic

"We think we have it sufficiently under control that it will not spread," said Mr. Gardiner.

The Commons debate centred on emergency legislation to compensate farmers for livestock, crops, buildings and equipment destroyed in efforts to stem the outbreak.

GIVES DELINQUENCY CAUSE

Windsor, Ont., March 5 (CP)—Secularism in modern education is an underlying cause of a growing juvenile delinquency problem, Sheriff George Blaine of Tulsa, Okla., said last night. He told 600 delegates of the Pentacostal Assemblies of Canada that a secular emphasis in education — as opposed to a Christian emphasis — had, in 60 years, altered the pattern of criminal action in the United States. In 1890, the average criminal was 48. Now he was 17.

These sunny skies are expected to continue throughout the province on Thursday.

Married 16 Times to 14 Women El Paso Plumber Takes Another Wife

El Paso, Tex., March 5 — (AP) —El Paso's marrying plumber, 72-year-old Bruce Steele, has a new wife — his 17th, he says. She is Mrs. Estell Lloyd.

"Yes, Estell is No. 17," Steele said proudly. "I've been married 17 times to 14 women. I wanted to set a record and I guess I have."

The grey-haired plumber said his matrimonial merry-go-round began in 1911.

"I was a boxer travelling with a show and I met a girl named Mary," he said. "Yes, Mary was the first. I moved on and she got a divorce. After that, I wooed and won girls in other towns but I had to keep moving so the marriages didn't last. I believe Ruth —she was a platinum blonde — was next. Then there was Catherine and Rose and Peggy — she was the chorus girl — and Goldie and Annie and Rose (again) and Nellie and Fannie and Frances. There must be a few more but their names slip my mind just now.

"I married Nellie twice and Fannie three times. They come and go. Some are dead, some divorced and some still living."

Children?

"I've got 31 children — 24 boys and seven girls," said Steele.

Steele attributes his success to his method. "The trick is to find a woman's weakness," he confided. "Then cultivate it."

U.S. GOVT. WILL NOT TAKE KOREAN WAR INTO CHINA

Policy Announced By Assistant Secretary

Washington, March 5 (AP) —The Truman administration has decided against any move to carry the Korean war to China even if the truce talks collapse.

Officials said that is the present basic policy but how it is applied if and when a collapse occurs will undoubtedly depend on what the communists do and what the American people think about it.

In the highest levels of the defence and state departments, it is recognized, officials privately concede, that popular indignation could force the United States in some circumstances to take action which would either contradict or diverge from its present policy.

A clear indication of the administration's attitude came last night in a speech sent by John M. Allison, assistant state secretary to the Philadelphia Bulletin Forum at Philadelphia. It was delivered by his assistant, U. Alexis Johnson, who returned 10 days ago from talk with Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway and other top United Nations military men in Korea.

"It is our policy," Allison said, to confine the conflict to Korea. We do not propose to widen the scope of the war. That has been our policy from the start. That remains our policy. It is up to the communists. If they want to widen the conflict and engulf the world in a terrible world war, then they must be the ones to do it."

Truce talks at Panmunjom are deadlocked now over several issues. Allison and his closest associates as well as military leaders are reported to believe still that the odds are at least even on the possibility of agreement on a truce.

They have been considering for many weeks, however, what the U.S. should do in event of a collapse of negotiations. It is known that consideration has been given to carrying the war directly against China. It now is apparent that the decision has been reached to avoid this if possible.

Five MIG Jets Shot Down Near Yalu R.

Seoul, Korea, March 5—(AP)—United States warplanes surprised a flight of communist MIG-15 jets today and shot down at least five near the Yalu River. There was no announcement of any U. S. losses.

Another MIG was listed as probably destroyed.

The wild 30-minute morning battle was touched off when 28 F-86 Sabre jets pounced on a flight of 70 MIGs as the reds came out of their Manchurian sanctuary.

It was the biggest bag of red jets since Jan. 25, when Sabre pilots destroyed 10.

Another MIG crashed behind the Manchurian border without a shot being fired at it. Two allied pilots said the plane was stunting when it suddenly went into a tight spin and roared to the ground.

Fighting on the battle front continued light but the reds stepped up their fire in some sections Tuesday.

Diseased Immigrants to Cost 'Enormous Sums of Money,' Phillips Tells Legislature

Toronto, March 5 (CP) —Health Minister Phillips told the Ontario legislature yesterday that the province and municipalities will have to pay "enormous sums of money" for medical care of European immigrants unless the federal government changes its immigration policy.

The federal government has been "lax" in its immigration policy, Dr. Phillips said during the Throne Speech debate.

Ontario has paid more than $200,000 since the first of 1948 for medical treatment of European immigrants, he said.

The Throne Speech debate also saw a motion of non-confidence in the government made by W. J. Grummett (CCF-Cochrane South). The motion charged the government "failed to supplement old-age pensions for needy persons between 65 and 69 and to provide relief for unemployed who are able to work.

The motion, coming from the two member CCF group, faces sure defeat by the government forces which hold 79 of the 90 seats. It will come to a vote at the end of the Throne Speech debate.

Today the legislature will debate the principle of bills ratifying Ontario's share in Hydro development of the St. Lawrence River's International Rapids in conjunction with the St. Lawrence seaway project.

Province Responsible

Dr. Phillips said the Federal government's responsibility for medical expenses of immigrants ends one year after their arrival. After that, the province was responsible for tuberculosis and mental illness expenses of immigrants and the municipalities had to pay for other illness.

Tuberculosis is 2 1-2 times more prevalent among European immigrants than among native born Canadians, the minister said. The disease was usually contracted about a year after their arrival.

The problem was a "very serious situation which in the future is going to cost our municipalities and our provincial government enormous sums of money unless the federal government changes its present immigration policy."

Dr. Phillips also said that early treatment of mental illness promises to keep 36 percent of mental patients from becoming chronic cases.

Most Progressive Step

The government's plan of aid to general hospitals for the building of early-treatment mental health clinics was "the most progressive step that has been taken in the mental health field in any country in the world."

Mr. Grummett said provincial old age assistance was "totally inadequate" and the amount was often less than the recipients could receive from local relief agencies.

He also urged the province to reach agreement with the federal government on a division of responsibility for unemployment relief.

The province was "passing the buck" in claiming the federal government had all the responsibility. "The municipalities have to pay it in the end."

Mr. Grummett noted that the government planned to introduce a new plan of grants to northern Ontario mining municipalities. He urged that the plan be introduced soon so that municipalities could give their opinions before the end of the session.

Relief Speeded to Homeless Thousands Caused by Quake

Tokyo, March 5—(AP)—United States occupation forces and the Japanese government today rushed relief supplies to victims of an earthquake and tidal waves in snowswept northern Japan.

Planes, trains and boats carried blankets, medicine and food to stricken areas of sparsely - settled Eastern Hokkaido Island and the more-populous sections of northeastern Honshu Island.

The official U. S. Army estimate stood at 31 Japanese dead and 170 injured. Japanese police announced they have recovered 20 bodies.

Kyodo news agency reported the quake left a fishing village submerged and pushed up a new 40-foot hill. Both were on Hokkaido, northernmost island of Japan.

A Kyodo reporter who flew over Kiritappu reported most of the 1,691 villagers were marooned atop their submerged homes. He said a rescue boat was on its way to the coastal town.

The news agency said the new hill appeared near the village of Niikappu. Inhabitants said a lava-like substance flowed from the hill and then hardened. Two years ago a quake thrust up a similar hill in the same area.

Japanese government agencies reported incomplete surveys showed the quake and 10-foot-high tidal waves caused this damage:

Railway Tracks Snarled

1. Railway tracks were twisted and snarled in places. One section of 500 yards of track was swallowed by the earth.

2. An uncounted number of fishing boats were sunk, 44 damaged and two piers smashed on northeastern Honshu, main island of Japan.

3. Seven coal miners were killed — two in a mine cave-in and five when their homes collapsed. Coal-mining operations in Hokkaido were disrupted by floods and broken power lines.

4. Tidal waves washed away 277 houses in Hamanaka village on Hokkaido, leaving 1,600 persons homeless. Reports from other villages placed the number of destroyed homes at around 2,500.

Associated Press reporters flew over Kushiro, largest city on Hokkaido suffering from the quake, and reported few signs of damage. The harbor wall appeared to have been battered by the seas

Cost-of-Living Index Declines 7-10th of Point

Ottawa, March 5 (CP)— Some cheaper foods, home furnishings and clothing led the cost-of-living index into lower ground for the second time in three months during January.

The seven-tenths of a point decline, biggest such monthly drop in nine years, brought the Dominion Bureau of Statistic's index to 190.8 on Feb. 1 from its peak of 191.5 on Jan. 2. The 1935-39 prices equal 100 on the index.

The decline resulted from lower prices for eggs, beef, pork, lard, shortening, men's woollen apparel, women's nylon hosiery, furniture, wool blankets and soap.

While Canadians paid less for those items, they paid more for butter, cheese, fresh fruits and vegetables, laundry, telephone rates, health care, haircuts, electricity and coke. But the lower prices outweighed the higher ones during the month.

Wholesale Prices Down

Wholesale prices also took a dip during January. The index for 30 industrial wholesale prices declined by 9.7 points to 269.6 for the week of Feb. 22. For the week of Jan. 25, it was 279.3.

The major items in this decline were steers, hogs, oats, raw rubber, raw cotton, raw wool, beef hides, white lead, zinc and copper.

The decline in the whole price index was 11.4 per cent since February, 1951, a fall of 33.8 points.

On the retail side, the price index has climbed by 89.3 per cent from August, 1939, to February 1952.

January's seven-tenths-of-a-point decrease was the first since last November when it took a drop of one-tenth of a point, the smallest the index registers. The last time the index took such a big dip was the 1.7 points in December, 1942.

FURTHER BOMB TESTS

Los Angeles, March 5 (AP) — The Atomic Energy Commission is laying the groundwork for further A-bomb tests at Frenchman's Flat in Nevada and Eniwetok Island, a member of the A.E.C. said last night. Thomas E. Murray said in an interview that present plans call for use of the present proving grounds in Nevada each spring and fall with the Eniwetok tests at longer intervals.

TWO ARE DEAD, 5 UNACCOUNTED FOR AT MONTREAL

Fire Destroys Building Housing Theatre

Montreal, March 5. (CP)—Two persons today were reported dead in a three-alarm fire which destroyed the building housing the Montreal Repertory theatre on uptown Guy Street and firemen are combing the rubble for five or more others as yet unaccounted for.

One of the occupants of a block of apartments above the theatre said he knew of seven, including his family, who escaped of the dozen or so who lived there. Firemen said two had died, one of whom, an unidentified woman of about 30 was taken to the morgue.

Firemen said they found the woman's body at the bottom of stairs leading to apartments above the theatre.

Shortly after the fire broke out, a violent explosion almost ripped the roof off the theatre, the walls caved in and the whole structure collapsed in a flaming pile of rubble.

Before the explosion firemen said some persons were shouting and yelling from the top floor and they now are combing the rubble to see if any of them were trapped.

One of the tenants above the theatre, George Perkins, said he made his way to safety with his wife and mother and that he knew for sure of four others who escaped of the dozen or so who lived in the six apartments.

One Fireman Injured

One fireman was reported injured in the explosion.

Firemen poured tons of water on the blazing building and tried to keep it from spreading to the rear of an adjoining five-storey 60-apartment block. The heat was so intense, however, that the roof caught and soon flames were ripping through the top apartments.

Occupants, who had been milling around the front of the apartment block with a few belongings in their hands were ordered out as soon as the fire caught hold.

A number of aged and ill persons were removed to various hospitals, some people went to the nearby headquarters of the Red Cross where they were given shelter and provided with clothes and hot coffee. The Red Cross also cared for several young children, right down to providing fresh diapers.

Mother Escapes After Tossing Boy Through Window

Early Morning Blaze Destroys Farm House

Sharbot Lake, Ont., March 5 — (CP) —A father and his three-year-old daughter died today in an early morning blaze in their farm home about a mile southeast of nearby Mississippi. The mother and a young son escaped from a second storey window.

Dead are Gerald Gemmill, 29 and his daughter, Deborah. They died when Mr. Gemmill, the baby clutched in his arms staggered through the blazing dwelling to the lower floor only to collapse near the door.

Smashed Window

Mrs. Gemmill saved her own life and that of her son Francis when she smashed the bedroom window and tossed the child 15 feet to the ground below. She then cried out to her husband who had reached the lower part of the house and when she received no answer, crawled through the window and leaped to the ground.

As the mother rushed to the home of a neighboring farmer about a half mile away, her husband and daughter lay unconscious as the flames rapidly consumed the frame dwelling.

Provincial police at Sharbot Lake said the cause of the blaze had not yet been determined.

Aroused Husband

They said Mrs. Gemmill, 24, was awakened first and discovered the fire. She aroused her husband who grabbed Deborah, confident that he would be able to make his way to safely through the lower door.

When Mrs. Gemmill, the former Ruth Killingbeck, received no reply to her cries, she assumed that her husband had left the house. She then made her own leap.

Everything the family owned was lost in the fire.

The only fire fighting in the district is done by neighbors who form a bucket brigade. The Gemmill home was only a smouldering mass of embers when help finally arrived.

The farm is located about a mile from the main highway.

HIT BY WOMAN

Whitby, March 5 — (CP)—Mrs. Alexsanorri Bolotenko yesterday was given a suspended sentence when she pleaded guilty to assaulting Jeftovic Slavko, an employee of the Federal Labor Department in an immigration camp at nearby Ajax. Slavko said he refused to give Mrs. Bolotenko a meal ticket for her husband because he was away in Toronto at the time and she hit him.

QUESTION REFERRED BACK

Toronto, March 5 — (CP) — A clergyman said yesterday that "some elders give ministers ulcers." Rev. Robert Kerr made the statement at a meeting of the East Toronto Presbyterian Presbytery which debated whether elders should remain active members of the church session for life. The question was referred to a committee.

BROTHERS ARRESTED

Hamilton, March 5 (CP) —Two brothers were arrested last night at the National Drug Company, Mary Street, after police sped to the scene in answer to an electric alarm system call. Chester Louisier 27, and his brother Lawrence, 23, pleaded guilty today to two charges of shopbreaking.

They were remanded until March 12.

New British Drug Aids in One Form of Leukemia, the Blood Cancer

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE

Cincinnati, March 5—(AP)— A new British drug is helping some people with one form of chronic leukemia, the blood cancer.

It came after a 20-year search into the cause of cancer, and that hunt promises far better cancer killers to come.

described today to the second na-

The drug and research were tional cancer conference by Dr. Alexander Haddow, director of the Chester Beatty Research Institute, Royal Cancer Hospital in London.

The drug is GT-41, a code name in honor of George Timmis, the chemist who created it. It is a butane chemical, in a new family of anti-leukemia drugs.

In early tests on small numbers of humans in Britain and the United States, GT-41 brought temporary remissions or improvements in 25 to 50 per cent of cases of myelogenous chronic leukemia, Dr. Haddow said. One patient has stayed improved for a year.

The drug does not affect any other forms of leukemia, including any of the acute or rapidly-progressing leukemias which usually affect children.

GT-41 can be taken by mouth and has no serious bad effects. Dr. Haddow termed results to date "as good as with any" other drugs used for leukemia.

The work of Dr. Haddow and associates earlier led to urethane and nitrogen mustards in tablet form for use against leukemia.

All were based upon clues turned up in their main research —of learning just how a normal healthy cell grows, and exactly what happens to turn the healthy cell into a cancer cell.

Two Killed In Car Crash At Barrie

Barrie, March 5 (CP)—Two persons were killed and three others were injured in a highway collision between an automobile and a truck five miles south of here early today.

Fred Crawford, 34, and Phyllis Sticklen, 19, both of Newmarket, were fatally injured when the car driven by Crawford collided with a truck on a curve on No. 11 highway.

Audrey Hills, Donald Cudney and Leonard Russell, also of Newmarket, were injured. Hospital officials in Toronto said Cudney and Russell were in serious condition.

Civilian Steel Users Cut Back Too Sharply

New York, March 5. (AP)— The Iron Age, metal-working trade weekly says today that controls officials in Washington have come to realize. "what industry has been howling about for some time—that some civilian steel users were cut back too soon and too sharply."

But it adds that the officials are "slow to do anything about it."

Reporting that signs of a softening market for some steel products have been piling up for three months, the publication says:

"While it was to be expected that controls officials would be reluctant to relax their grip on distribution, the delay in the steel wage price settlement is causing them to drag their feet even more.

"Washington policy has been opposed to decontrol of any product that might later turn up in short supply.. A strike (still a very real possibility) would do just that to steel."

MINOR CRASHES CAUSED BY STORM

Slippery streets and highways caused by last night's snowfall, were the cause of several minor accidents. No one was reported injured.

Four accidents resulting in fender and grill damage occurred in various parts of the city, while on the highway several cars were reported to have skidded off the road into the ditch without damage.

TRAILER HOME OF DAN DORDAN BURNS IN NIGHT

Waking up to find his trailer home on St. Paul Street afire, Dan Dordan, local paper collector, barely escaped early this morning from his blazing quarters. Cause of the blaze was not determined.

A neighbor, Mrs. W. Asselstine, St. Paul Street, said she wakened about three o'clock to see flames out her bedroom window. She woke her husband who investigated and found the Dordan trailer at the rear of their home ablaze. Mr. Dordan was already out of the trailer.

Firemen extinguished the blaze but reported the trailer and its contents almost a complete loss. Dordan lived alone in his trailer.

Marmora Wins Over Wellington To Even Series

Marmora—Playing good combination with an outstanding performance by Killian in the nets, Marmora got revenge at Wellington on Monday evening for the shutout sustained at home on the previous Thursday and won decisively by 6 goals to 2.

Mantle opened the scoring after ten minutes of play, receiving an assist from Jones. Trumble, the Marmora captain also registered shortly before the close of the first period on Lavender's assist.

The southerners retaliated with a goal as the second period got merely started, but in short time Lavender beat Parks on a pass from Trumble. Stewart added another for the visitors as the period was ending. Another goal came to Wellington in the third as a Marmora player accidentally put the puck into his own net.

Mantle got his second goal and Brown unassisted also beat Parks to end the scoring.

The game attracted the largest crowd Wellington has had this season, a good contingent of Marmora fans helping to swell the attendance.

For the fifth game to decide the champions of the central section of the Trent Valley League at Marmora tonight a bumper crowd is expected.

Gerald Clancy Heads Rawdon Junior Farmers

Gerald Clancy, R.R. 2, Harold, was named president of the Rawdon junior farmers at their annual meeting held in the agricultural office at Stirling.

Other officers named were Grant Richardson as vice-president, Glen Wilson, secretary, and Carl Reid, treasurer.

Directors include George Cooke, Claire Hagerman, Harold Bush, Claude McInroy, Douglas Cotten and Francis Wrightman.

During the meeting a film entitled "No Hand Stripping" demonstrating the five fundamental steps in proper milking procedure, was shown. The film emphasizes the importance of washing the cow's udder before milking; keeping machine in good repair and operate according to manufacturer's directions; treating the cows gently; no hand stripping and milking quickly and thoroughly.

Enos David Wins Free Trip to Europe

ENOS DAVID

Enos David has just been advised that he has been one of the winners in the recently concluded Philips and Rogers Majestic Trip to Europe contest. David's Electric Shop who have been Philips dealers for five years won in competition with hundreds of other radio and television dealers in Ontario. The prize in the contest is a seat on a luxury trans-Atlantic Constellation airliner which has been chartered to fly the winning Philips and Rogers Majestic dealers from Malton to Amsterdam on April 19th.

Following arrival in Amsterdam the dealers will be taken on a tour of the ancient city by the canals. Other points of interest in the vicinity will be visited in order to give every visitor a complete picture of Holland as it was and is today. The whole trip has been planned so that the winners will arrive in Holland at the height of the tulip season. From Amsterdam the dealers will visit the tremendous Philip parent plant at Eindhoven. This plant is one of the world's largest electrical plants and is the headquarters for Philips organizations all around the world. Brussels is the next stop on the trip. From the Belgian city the dealers will travel to Paris to view the delights of that French city in the spring. From Paris a plane will take the party on to London where the dealers will enjoy a sight-seeing tour planned to take in all the famous sights of London as well as a visit to the Philips headquarters in England. From London the dealers will once again board their luxury Constellation airliner for the return flight to Toronto.

Thirty-three dealers and four salesmen in the province will make the trip.

Purse Recovered By Quick Action Of Manager

City police are on the lookout for a "brazen" man described as dragging one leg, who yesterday walked into the second floor office of the Canada Life Insurance Company on McAnnany Street and made off with the stenographer's purse. The purse was later recovered but in the excitement the man made good his escape.

The office manager, Mr. Ralph Knowlton, went in pursuit of the man and locating him in the stairway at the Army and Navy Veterans on Front Street, took the purse from him. Mr. Knowlton then called police but the man had disappeared.

Stenographer Miss Dorothy Sherry hadl she had left the outer office to speak with Mr. Knowlton in his office. While she was away she thought she heard a sound in the outer office but paid no attention until she came out and saw her shoulder bag was missing.

The noise of some one going down the stairway was heard and Mr. Knowlton went in pursuit, catching up with his quarry at the landing of the Army and Navy Veterans. The man was hiding the shoulder bag under his coat.

Obituary

DONALD FREDERICK HULIN
(Toronto—Stirling.)

After a lengthy illness, Donald Frederick Hulin, 29 Kimbourne Avenue, Toronto, died at the Wellesley Hospital on Thursday morning, February 28th. He was in his 28th year.

Born in Stirling, Ontario, Don resided there until 1942, when he moved to Trenton. In 1943, he went to Toronto to live. At the time of his death he was a permanent employee of the Post Office Department.

Affectionately known as "Buck" or "Buckeye" Don's many friends will sadly miss his cheery words and friendly smiles.

Always actively interested in sports, he was the goalie for the Post Office Hockey team and played in a game the day previous to his illness.

Surviving to mourn his loss are his wife, the former Lorna Winnifred Phalen, his father, Mr. Frederick Thomas Hulin, Trenton, Ontario; and two sisters, Mrs. H. Boyd (Dorothy), of Ottawa, Ontario, and Miss Betty Hulin, of Kingston, Ontario.

Don rested at the Trull Funeral Home, 1111 Danforth Ave., Toronto. The funeral service was conducted there on Saturday by the Rev. C. F. Pashler, the minister, who performed Lorna and Don's wedding ceremony, seven years ago.

The large number of friends who made their way to the Funeral Home and the masses of beautiful floral tributes, attested to the high esteem in which he was held.

The bearers were all fellow workers.

Interment was made in Pine Hills Cemetery, Toronto.

SAMUEL LAKE

Veteran of the Northwest Rebellion, Mr. Samuel Lake, of St. Mary's on the Lake, and formerly of Trenton, died in the D.V.A. hospital, at Kingston on Tuesday. He was 88.

Born in Sidney township, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Lake, he had spent the last five years in hospital and took seriously ill two weeks ago. He was a member of the United Church. He never married.

He is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Priscilla Page, of Grand Rapids, Michigan, and Mrs. Robt. Wallace, of Harold, and one brother, Robert, of Stirling.

The funeral announcement appears elsewhere in this edition.

PAUL DAVID DEGENOVA

The funeral of Paul David DeGenova, age six months, was held Tuesday morning at St. James Cemetery where the committal was conducted by Rev. J. J. Buckley. The bearers were John LaPenette, Johnny O'Brien, John Rawson and Jim Murphy.

ROBERT GORDON MOYNES

The funeral of Robert Gordon Moynes, eleven-day-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Earl Moynes, 32 Sinclair Street, was held on Tuesday afternoon.

The child was born and died in Belleville General Hospital.

Interment was in Coe Hill Community Cemetery.

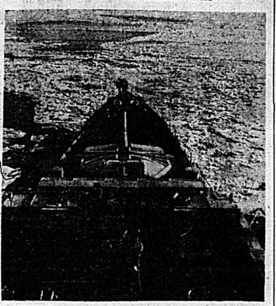
MOUNTIE REPLACED

Ottawa, March 5 — (CP) — Samuel de Champlain, the great French explorer who died more than 300 years ago is replacing the traditional scarlet-coated "mountie" on the cover of the capital's tourist guide booklet. Largely at the instance of Mayor Charlotte Whitton, who said Ottawa had other things to offer besides mounties, the tourist and convention committee decided to scrap the mountie and replace him with Champlain, an Indian and the Rideau Canal.

Young Scientists Compete for Prize

Forty U.S. youngsters gathered in Washington to compete for $11,000 in science scholarships. The group demonstrated their own science projects to about 1,000 government, civic and science leaders. John Robert Seaman, above, 15, of Oceanside, N.Y., smiles as one little hamster nestles in his hand and another perches on his shoulder. The youthful scientist demonstrated how he studied the intelligence of hamsters. — Central Press Canadian.

On Last Patrol of Korean Waters



HMCS Sioux, now on her way back home after completing a second tour of duty in the Far East, is shown above making her way through an ice field during her last patrol off the west coast of Korea. Operating with a task unit close inshore, the Sioux spent her last patrol defending islands north of the 38th parallel. She is scheduled to return to Esquimalt, B.C., on March 8. — Central Press Canadian.

Len J. Foley Again Heads Dealers' Assoc.

Picton (Special)—Len J. Foley, Foley Farm Supplies, Picton, was re-elected as President of Quinte District Farm Equipment Dealers' Association when members and their wives, more than one hundred in number, met in Picton Wednesday night. Ivan May of Belleville is Vice-President with Earl Morgan of Belleville as secretary-treasurer.

The meeting took the form of a banquet at the Legion hall, with the Ladies' Auxiliary catering for an excellent repast.

Following grace, said by Earl Morgan of Belleville, the toast to the Queen was responded to by singing "God Save the Queen." Harold Meyers, Belleville, secretary of the Provincial Association, introduced the head table guests. Belleville, Frankford, Picton, Wellington, Cobourg, Smiths Falls and Napanee were among centres represented at this happy gathering.

President Foley, who made an able chairman, announced that the executive planned to hold a general meeting in Napanee in April; meeting in Stirling in June with Frankford dealers co-operating; ladies' night in Sept., at Belleville; election of officers in October and the new executive in charge for the November meeting. He extended a cordial welcome to the vistors, and expressed appreciation of the support given him during the past year.

H. Meyers introduced Doug Tannahill of Smiths Falls of the Cockshutt Co., who represented James Dryden, president of the Ontario Retail Farm Equipment Dealers' Association. The speaker stressed the many benefits derived from this association and urged that the district associations strive to increase their membership. He was thanked by Ivan May.

Thanks Expressed

Bob Hook, Picton Motors, expressed thanks to the legion ladies and this was greeted with hearty applause.

Jack Brown, Toronto, secretary of the Ontario Association, introduced Frank Wilson, representative of Federal Mutual, who explained a group insurance plan which covers employees, proprietors and managers and their families. A gifted speaker, Mr. Wilson used apt illustrations to put across his message. He pointed out that other groups are achieving results through their organizations which give them one strong voice. The more members the O. R. D. E. D. A. has, the more effective its efforts. He illustrated the need for unity and effort with amusing anecdotes.

A toast to the ladies was proposed by Clarence Jeffery with response by Mrs. H. Meyers.

Win Door Prizes

Several firms had donated fine door prizes. These were won by Mrs. G. J. Meiklejohn of Stirling; Mrs. Percy Johnston, Wellington; Mrs. Gerald Ferguson, Picton; Roy Holland, Frankford. Mrs. W. R. Box, Napanee. W. R. Box was also a winner but returned his prize, and in another draw, this went to Pat Lappen of Cobourg.

Francis Wrightman of R. R. 3 Stirling was unable to be present to receive the trophy donated by Club 10 of the association to the highest standing member in the Hastings County Tractor Club. He had scored 903 points out of a possible 1000.

Prior to the dinner, Bill Fraser gave piano selections, and later played for community singing. Two vocal solos by Miss Florence Barber were heartily applauded, as were feats of magic by Herb Hyatt. Television entertained some of the guests, while others rounded out the enjoyable evening by dancing.

Truck Hits Tree, Two Colborne Men Injured

Trenton, (Special.)—Two Colborne men, James R. Davis, 42, and his son, Beverley James Davis, 21, are in Trenton Memorial Hospital with shock and lacerations suffered when their truck skidded off the highway, struck a tree and went into the ditch.

The accident occurred on an ice-coated highway west of Trenton shortly before nine o'clock this morning. The transport tractor in which the two men were riding went out of control and skidded off the road into the tree. The truck was not badly damaged.

Still Searching for Pair

Montreal, March 5. (CP)—One of five prisoners awaiting trial for auto theft glanced disconsolately out of the window of his cell yesterday. Then he brightened.

"Hey, look at the pretty girl," he told his companions.

Edouard Tremblay grabbed the iron grille of the window as he took a good look. The grille came away in his hands.

Police are still searching for Tremblay and Andre Pilon. The other three prisoners stayed behind.

Kiwanis Club Hears Address On Education

"A Human Relations Approach to Education" was the topic of an informal address to the Kiwanis Club on Tuesday noon by George L. Gray, High School inspector for the counties of Durham, Northumberland, Hastings and Peterborough as well as sharing with other inspectors, the schools of Toronto.

Mr. Gray referred to the many comments in the newspapers regarding the education system and stated that in dealing with this matter, it depended greatly on the information which is selected or repressed.

The speaker dealt with the journey of man from the beginning of time until now, through the savage stage, civilization, and now into the atomic age. "This atomic age began in 1945," he said "when we were thrust into it by a handful of scientists."

"We must learn the scientific language," he continued, "if we are to cope with the atomic age. The barriers are down, our powers to do evil or do good are increased one hundred fold."

"What happens now," Mr. Gray emphasized, "depends on human nature. The world must have faith in human nature and hurdle creed, color and race, and judge people by the merit of their work alone.

"We must encourage ourselves and others," he said in conclusion, "not to be engulfed by the size of problems. The problem, facing everyone of us, of what to do in this incredible world calls for faith, for hope, and for charity."

Mr. Gray was introduced by George Currie with the appreciation of the club being expressed by Dr. John Clarke.

Guests and visiting Kiwanians, introduced by Mark Vanner, included Glen Archer of Peterborough, Ebbie Hare and E. R. Holland of Kingston. Vice - president John Thornbury extended the official welcome of the club.

Kiwanian Dr. Harold Craig reported that an inter-club meeting will be held in Madoc on March 14th at which William Slade of Belleville club will be the guest speaker.

President Harold Carruthers reported that Kiwanian Bill Lockyer is now resting comfortably at his home following a lengthy siege in the hospital.

The attendance prize, donated by Don Allan, was won by E. R. Holland of Kingston.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, March 5 —(CP)—Stock market prices made little headway today in early afternoon dealings after mixed support checked early gains.

Industrial dealings spread slowly from leading issues and a growing list of metals, golds and oils attracted speculative interest. Volume for the first three hours was 1,853,00 shares.

Papers, liquors and retail stores formed industrials' strongest sections while utilities, manufacturing companies and miscellaneous issues drew steady support. Agricultures, steels, foods, banks and textiles weakened.

Base metals were mixed as Ankeno, Consolidated Smelters, East Sullivan, Makeno, Opemiska, Osisko, Steep Rock and Yukeno strengthened while Falconbridge, Normetal and United Asbestos weakened.

Western oils posted a slim majority of gains. Calnorth, Del Rio, Dome Exploration, Dragon, Roxana, Selburn and Western Leaseholds were among issues higher.

Senior golds dipped as Giant Yellowknife, McIntyre and Wright-Hargreaves turned [illegible]ndary issues showed little trend.

HOGS

Allies Request Accounting For 174 Prisoners Held by Reds

Panmunjom, Korea, March 5. (CP)—The United Nations Command today handed the reds a list of 174 Allied prisoners it said were unreported prisoners of the communists, and asked for an accounting.

The list apparently contained the names of the only four Canadians listed in Ottawa casualty lists as missing.

The Canadians were listed today as Cpl. J. R. Toole, B801850; Pte. S. G. Allain, JT9811; Pte. S.D. Baker A155660; and Pte. C. Bellefeuille, JA850907. No hometowns were given.

Most of the names on the list were those of United States servicemen. Two others were Britons and one was from the Royal Australian Air Force. All the men have been mentioned in red propaganda broadcasts, publications and other sources.

While there are some differences in initials and official numbers, the Canadian apparently are:

Pte. Joseph Terence Allain, SG9811, of Rexton, Kent County, N.B.

Cpl. John Richard Toole, B8018-50, of Hamilton, Ont.

Pte. Arthur Baker, SD155660, of 1715 Elgin Avenue, Montreal.

Pte. Joseph Armand Bellefeuille, C850907, of Hull, Que.

The army in Ottawa said it had earlier information that Allain was taken prisoner and that his next-of-kin had been informed although the casualty-list entry of "missing, believed killed" had not been changed.

Before today's U.N. list of unreported prisoners was made public, the total of Canadian casualties reported on official casualty lists was 650—including 121 dead, 469 wounded, 55 injured, one captured, and the four missing who now are listed by the U.N. as unreported prisoners.

One prisoner listed officially at Ottawa is Gnr. Orval John Jenkins, of Hamilton, Ont. He was on the communist prisoner-of-war list handed to U.N. truce negotiators last Dec. 19.

Ontario Labor Federation Slams Present Policies on Immigration

Toronto, March 5 — (CP) — Criticism of the "present drastic scheme" of immigration was made in the brief of the Ontario Federation of Labor (C.I.O.-C.C.L.) presented today to the Ontario government.

The brief said immigrants from Britain complained that "the Ontario representative in London has painted untrue pictures of life in Ontario, thereby luring workers from home and job security in Great Britain to comparative insecurity in this province."

". . . The present drastic scheme can only create havoc, and harm the immigrants as well as people already here."

The brief, which summarizes legislative proposals of the O.F.L. at its Feb. 1 convention in Hamilton, urged that a labor representative be added to the Ontario government's immigration staff.

It also said 112,000 persons were unemployed in Ontario Feb. 21 and said unemployment could be "abolished entirely" through co-ordination and planning among federal, provincial and municipal governments.

The federation's chief criticism of the Labor Relations Act was "the protracted delay that has become virtually a normal part of the procedure" in settling union-management disputes.

The brief suggested two alternatives: Abolition of the present conciliation boards to permit conciliation officers to make the final attempts at settlement; or permission for a union to be legally free to strike "after all legal time limits in the existing conciliation procedure had elapsed," whether a conciliation board has reported or not.

"It was never intended that delays of some months should be the normal practice," the brief said.

". . . We believe that a union should be legally free to strike within 30 days from application for conciliation."

The federation repeated its request made in past years that certification votes of unions should require only a majority of those voting, rather than a majority of all those eligible to vote.

It also asked deletion from the labor act of the provision which permits municipalities to declare themselves free from the provisions of the labor act.

The act proclaims a worker's right to join a union of his choice and this provision discriminates against certain classes of workers."

Livestock Sales Begin to Show Effects of Disease

Toronto, March 5 (CP) —The Ontario Department of Agriculture reported today that Ontario livestock sales are beginning to show effects of western Canada's outbreak of the foot-and-mouth disease and ensuing precautions ordered in Ontario.

The department's weekly report said there is general state of uncertainty among farmers. Dufferin County reported cattlemen alarmed over the outbreak and prevailing prices for cattle.

Simcoe County: cattle were selling at $50 a head less than the farmer expected.

Wellington County reports: "Owners of dairy cattle are satisfied that more rigid culling will be exercised in their herds as a result of the outbreak."

Elgin County reported Holstein prices off from $100 to $125 a head. Frontenac County reported 'drastic' drops while "bargain prices" prevailed in Glengarry County.

BLOWN TO PIECES

Antoine Pinay Agrees to Form New Cabinet

Paris, March 5. (AP)—Right-winger Antoine Pinay formally agreed today to try to form a new French Cabinet and said he will ask the National Assembly to confirm him as premier tomorrow.

Pinay, 60-year-old leather manufacturer and Transport minister in the Cabinet which resigned last Friday, is expected to ask for a drive against tax evaders as a solution to the government's financial crisis.

Only if this fails, it was reported, will he seek tax increases to meet government costs swelled by a proposed defence budget of 1,400,000,000,000 francs (about $4,000,000,000). It includes cost of the Indo-China war and France's contribution to Atlantic Pact defences.

The assembly last weekend rejected a proposed 15-per-cent tax increase, causing the resignation of Premier Edgar Faure.

Pinay is listed as an independent. The group of independents, which also includes ex-Premier Paul Reynaud, promised him its support yesterday. That gave him a start of 102 votes on the 313 he needs for confirmation.

Pinay wants to use both persuasion and force on delinquent taxpayers, who he estimates are cheating the government of about 600,000,000,000 annually. That is almost 40 per cent on the 1952 defence budget.

PLAN CONFERENCE

The bill, given second reading—approval in principle—will be debated again today.

Mr. Gardiner accepted an amendment by John Diefenbaker (PC-Lake Centre) to make it clear that compensation will be in addition to payments provided in the Animals Contagious Diseases Act.

The act provides for payments of $40 for grade cattle and $100 for purebreds in addition to the commercial value of the carcass. Under the new bill the farmers will receive these payments plus what the government considers a "fair and reasonable" amount.

Mr. Gardiner rejected a second amendment by Mr. Diefenbaker that would have required the government to pay the "economic value" of animals slaughtered. Mr. Gardiner said the amendment would cost the treasury more than had been anticipated.

Mr. Drew said a federal-provincial conference should be called immediately to consider a plan for orderly marketing during the crisis. The meeting should consider a plan to prevent the complete collapse of prices for Canadian livestock. Panic selling could result in the loss of herds which it would take years to replace.

Mr. Gardiner said he plans to go to Regina later this week to satisfy himself that all necessary steps have been taken to prevent the movement of cattle and meat out of the quarantined area. As soon as possible after that a federal - provincial conference will be called.

PRIVATE TRUCK LINES DEFENDED

A short time ago, officers of the Canadian National Railways announced they were going to launch fleets of trucks in eastern Canada in an effort to recover some of the business which, they said, had been taken away from the nationally-owned railroad system by privately-owned trucking firms.

Perhaps we shall see fleets of Canadian National trucks on the highways of Ontario, competing with the privately-owned trucking companies for whatever business is available, but there are indications that any trucks which the C.N.R. puts on the highways of Quebec are likely to encounter metaphorical snags and barriers.

At his last weekend press conference, Hon. Maurice Duplessis, the premier of Quebec, declared that the suggestion that freight rates were higher than they should be in western Canada because of the severe competition provided for the railroads in eastern Canada by privately-owned autobus and truck lines was "supremely ridiculous."

"I am convinced that this propaganda does not come from the federal government itself, but is the result of persistent centralist tactics directed by federal bureaucrats," Mr. Duplessis stated. "It is contrary to the national interest to stir up the western provinces against Ontario and Quebec."

Mr. Duplessis continued that the Quebec government had been "vigilant" in the matter of federal encroachments in the field of transportation. He mentioned the trans-Canada highway project, in which Quebec had refused to participate with the federal authorities.

Since a provincial government has a good deal of control, if not complete control, over what vehicles traverse its highways, Mr. Duplessis and his National Union government are in a position from which they can throw a monkey wrench into the machinery of any organization which tries to operate truck lines across Quebec without his approval.

Mr. Duplessis may not always be right, but he is consistent. In no way is he more consistent than in his hostility to those whom he calls "federal bureaucrats" and their efforts to extend what is described as "public ownership."

CURIOUS OCCUPATIONAL SHIFT

In 1920, total employment in Canadian manufacturing concerns contained a salary-earning population of 78,334 and wage earners numbering 520,559. Latest corresponding figures are 221,551 salary earners and 949,660 wage earners. Thus, while factory workers increased by 82 per cent, "white collar" workers increased by 183 per cent in the manufacturing industries alone.

The figures quoted are for industrial plants and do not therefore include the vast army of clerks employed in other lines of business and by the various governmental agencies.

The foregoing curious bit of information is contained in an article written for the Financial Post by Kenneth White, a former editor of the semi-weekly newspaper published in Trenton. Mr. White attributes his figures to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

Clerks and other white collar workers are necessary in the operation of a business, industrial or otherwise, perhaps increasingly so in view of modern trends and conditions.

But it still seems strange that more than twice as many white collar men and women are required by industry today, in relation to the number of actual producers, as were required three decades ago.

WELCOME BACK, MONSTER

Things must be getting back to normal in Scotland. After having concealed himself during the war years and the almost equally troubled post-war period, the Loch Ness monster has emerged from his lurking place and begun again to make public appearances, like a Hollywood glamor woman.

Last Saturday, he appeared for three employees of a Scottish trucking firm whose work took them to a lonely glen on the shores of Loch Ness.

During the nineteen-thirties, the monster used to appear frequently, so frequently that thousands of tourists flocked to the Loch Ness area to see him. So rich was the harvest reaped by resort proprietors that some cynical folk suggested that the whole thing was a publicity stunt.

A more charitable viewpoint would be that the monster has just learned of Britain's economic difficulties and is going to do his share in luring dollar-spending tourists to Scotland.

Anyway, the Loch Ness monster is back on the job, basketball eyes, tombstone teeth and everything.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

KIND FATHER

I can't imagine He would say:
"My child, I wish you'd go away.
I'm busy now, and weary, too,
And have a lot of things to do.
Get some one else your friend to be
And don't forever bother me.
You're always asking why and how.
I have no time for questions now.
For any reason I could tell
Some passer-by will do as well.
Off with you! Trouble me no more.
And don't forget to shut the door."

* * *

I can't imagine when I pray
The Father of us all would say
In answer to my fervent plea:
"I'm busy now. Don't bother me."
I'm sure He'd draw me closer by,
And understand the reason why
In every troubled moment grim
With confidence I turned to Him.

EMOTION COUNTS ALSO

People are deterred from evil chiefly by the feeling that certain things are wrong and other things are right. Thought goes into such decisions and so do a number of other factors, such as family background and fear of consequences. But the factor which usually leads one to choose a certain course of action because it appears to be right and to reject another course of action because it is wrong, is an emotional factor.

There is much being said today against making our decisions on the basis of emotion. If we make them only on the basis of emotion, that is wrong, but emotion enters into the making of every true decision. Think of talking about romance and ruling emotion definitely out of the picture. Experience proves that the people who are most happily married are those who fell in love for no reason that they could definitely express in words, and have continued through the years to be in love on the same emotional basis.

Our feelings can become so damaged by wrong decisions that they are no longer trustworthy guides. But if we give our feelings a chance to mature as they should, they will be a real help to us in making decisions. Our feelings about situations have some value, a value indeed which should always be taken into consideration.

Keep your emotions clean and wholesome and they will help you in making your moral decisions.

LADIES' DAY

I did a little piece the other day about my wife's poodle cut and said that such styles are part of the age-old story of girl getting (and holding) boy.

For some reason I've never been able to figure out, this always makes a large number of ladies mad.

Typical letter from Zeta Graysen up in Williams Lake (God's country) and she says fashion is merely an indication of women's progress and their alert sense of competition and that before you know it the gals will be taking over.

"Can't you sense the girding of armor and the muffled clink of swords," she writes, "as the females of the race flex their muscles and calmly wait, patiently marking time until the day arrives when they will be overlords."

Maybe so, Zeta. I thought they'd taken over years and years ago.

I'm still convinced that gals dress not for each other, as they claim, but for dat old black magic.

I remember one summer my wife and a bunch of other wives of newspaper guys took a summer camp where we husbands would join them on the weekends. The gals freely admitted that, alone, they went around looking like death in the afternoon, but whenever "boat day" came around they started pulling themselves together.

Me, I like it that way.

A charming letter from Mrs. J. H. Garrod, or White Rock, who says, "There is no need for you to be alarmed about America. She is quite able to take care of her own affairs. Your employer should be alarmed at the prospect of a drop in the circulation of the Sun newspaper if you continue to be anti everything but Russia.

"I see in your letter that you are thinking of looking up some of your old school teachers. Why not spare them? I am sure you were just as dogmatic and a hateful brat in those days as you are now. You can print this letter over my name if you think it will do you any good."

Gosh, you're mean, Mrs. Garrod. Tell you what! You meet me next Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock under the Birks clock. We'll see a show and have some dinner and talk. I can't have you going around thinking I'm hateful when really all you mean is that you think I'm wrong.

Is it a date?

Here's a nice letter from up in Powell River and there's a clipping enclosed of a column by Gord Crockett, of the Powell River News. Crockett sounds like the honorary president of the Hate Scott Club. Good column Crockett! Lots of the old vitality.

In criticizing some recent opinions of mine, the Powell River writer says this:

"While jabbing with his right at U. S. radio, Scott managed to get in a left hook at newspaper comic strips that picture communists as spies and thugs because, he says, he wants his kids to grow up with the hope we can do business with Russia.

"Surely his memory isn't so short that he can't remember that Neville Chamberlain nurtured that some hope about Hitler and I am again willing to lay a small wager that we'll get no further trying to to business with the present World Gangster No. 1 than Chamberlain did with A. H."

I do not see that at all, Crockett. You are entitled to the opinion and it may even be right. But surely it's wrong to plant it so firmly in young minds. Far better to teach the kids to judge facts without prejudice or a hatred prefabricated by adults.

Several letters on this subject of comic strips, most of which mention the Joe Palooka strip.

I honestly think that publishers should look carefully at this strip and, if they decide that it might be harmful to impressionable young minds, to keep it out during such sequences as the present one.

Incidentally, this sort of cold war propaganda for kiddies is being dished up in England, too. The Daily Mirror comic page features the adventures of a detective named Buck Ryan. Normally this gent is tracking down robbers, murderers and the like; but recently he has turned his attention to the activities of the "World Disarmament Movement," who are presented as very shady types busy sabotaging ammunition dumps.

Swell education on disarmament, eh?

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE AIR WE BREATHE

The air about us is what keeps us alive. But with the inventive process of man's minds he has made the air a medium for the enjoyment of the humblest human being. Voices in song and story, messages of hope and inspiration, instructive knowledge now occupy the air and reach us in our homes. We witness miracles all about us!

The very atoms of the air forever carry about in them the beloved voices of those long gone, but still cherished in life. Intermixed in the air are the voices of Springtime bird songs of yesteryear, as well. In silence we hear them again and again, though Winter's cold may have taken their visible presence to warmer climes for a spell.

Memories fill the air that we breathe, and they, too, add to our lives, preserving their substance, and reminding us of the immortality of love and happiness once experienced. How interesting it is that some air affects us more than the more familiar. Is it because there is more love and beauty to it? The doctor tells us to go to Arizona, Florida, or California—"for the air." Why? Well, because that air may have more warmth or less moisture to it. We are sensitive creatures. Change alone may often prove to be corrective.

It's all very wonderful, anyway, this air that is forever moving about the earth. It can well be called the ozone and oxygen of the soul! It has been said that a pebble dropped in the water of the ocean sends its ripple on an endless journey. So the human voice, the instrument's tone, or the Robin's morning song may just as well enjoy its immortality! Nature slays, as well as conserves, but it never wastes.

How many times I note the golden rays of the sun stream through the millions of minute particles that the air tosses about, and I wonder what each infinitesimal atom or fragment is carrying on its back. Perhaps the echo of a lover's appeal, or the last words of a dying hero, or the message of some inspiring prophet or sage. We never know what touches our cheeks or consciousness from just a draught of air!

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Into a busy little stationery store on an uptown shopping street burst two well-dressed ladies the other afternoon in that state of impatient haste that often characterizes well-dressed ladies in the afternoon.

They were obviously dressed up for a meeting of some kind. The small shop was crowded with customers. There were only two sales people; and both were busy attending customers, with others waiting and ready.

Our two new arrivals hurried forward and then registered the usual dismay at finding they could not be attended to at once. They uttered small exclamations of distress. They murmured at each other, and began walking about, searching the counters. They pushed themselves forward, and leaned over the counter towards one of the saleswomen.

"Do you keep hymnals?" one enquired, in that deprecating and modest manner in which gates are crashed, precedence ignored and all human rights set at naught by well-dressed ladies in a hurry.

"In a moment," said the sales girl, quietly, and a little pointedly, as reminding the lady of her manners.

"We want a dozen," the other lady put in, impressively.

"In a moment, please," repeated the sales girl, firmly, fully aware of the mounting indignation of the other customers standing about.

The two ladies, muttering "Oh, dear!" and other such expressions of ladylike distress, stood back.

Finally, their turn came.

"We're late," apologized one, "for our committee meeting at the church. And besides, we're parked outside in a prohibited area..."

They got their dozen hymnals, and then the two good ladies dashed on their worthy way.

The second paragraph was as follows:

> The menu doesn't specify any particular variety of cheese. Take your choice—as long as it is real cheese and not a fabricated product.

The Public Relations Committee of the Dairy Council of Canada asserts that there is no such thing as "cheese-type food" permitted in Canada although these are common in the United States. The Committee complains that many readers in Canada will interpret my remark as applying to Canadian progess cheese....

In the first place, if no such thing as cheese-type food is permitted in Canada, how could my remarks apply to it? In the next place I haven't any idea what Canadian process cheese is, so I could hardly have intended to give Canadian readers a wrong opinion of Canadian process or any other cheese.

Finally, it seems to me that the Public Relations Committee of the Dairy Council of Canada needs a change of spectacles. In the article I said everything good about cheese that I could think of closing with this:

> No other item anywhere near as good to eat better deserves the designation "health food."

Frankly I don't know what "Canadian process cheese" is all cheese and not a mixture, blend, concoction or product fabricated of divers items including a dash of cheese.

I do hope that "Canadian process" means a method or way of making cheese. If it turns out to be just a Canadian twist to the Yankee trick of selling unwary customers a concoction that looks, smells or tastes like cheese, I hope the Public relations Committee of The National Dairy Council of Canada may be sentenced to eat some of the stuff every day for ninety days. I'm not at all vindictive, but dammit I like cheese and I have a responsibility to protect the health of readers.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Chemical Preservative

Will drinking two or three glasses of sweet cider a day hurt me—I catch colds frequently and have sinus? A man in the store told me the sodium benzoate in it is harmful. (C. J.)

Answer—Sweet cider, my eye. The man is probably right, about the chemical concoction you drink.

Wonderful

I have had such wonderful results from your booklet The Calcium Shortage. How long should I take the calcium and D? My trouble was asthma. (W. M. F.)

Answer—Only as long as your diet supplies insufficient calcium. You had better read the booklet again, particularly pages 21 and 22, and try to get through your solid ivory head the fact that calcium, vitamin D and the other nutritional elements I recommend are not medicine. Readers who don't understand what we're talking about send 25c and stamped, self-addressed envelope for the booklet The Calcium Shortage.

Microscope Required

Your column has long been a joy of our daily life—a joy to read and a blessing to our health. It saddens us to see it shrinking so much...that is, when we are able to find it at all without a microscope. (C. H.)

Answer—I prepare an article of 500 words and several questions and answers 365 days in the year.

British, U.S. Sea Lords Confer

Member Wants Federal Probe Into Seaway Plan

(By The Canadian Press)

A Liberal member of the Nova Scotia legislature wants a federal inquiry into the St. Lawrence Seaway project to study "with a neutral eye its economic implications.

S. W. Proudfoot, (Lib.-Pictou West) yesterday told the Nova Scotia legislature during the Throne-Speech debate that there is some doubt as to what effect the seaway will have on Maritime industry.

In the British Columbia legislature, Premier Byron Johnson, who is also provincial treasurer, brought down a record budget of $142,000,000 for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1953—$24,000 larger than the previous budget.

A cheerful note was that no new taxes were announced. Estimated expenditures were put at $141,905,433 and revenue at $141,986,869 for a surplus of approximately $81,000.

H. B. Macdonald (Ind-Calgary) became the first member of the Alberta legislature to cross from the opposition side of the House to the government benches. The move was made after a caucus of Social Credit members invited Mr. Macdonald to make the change.

Will Support S. C. Party

He is the lone survivor of the Independent Party Movement formed in an effort to defeat the government in the 1940 provincial election. Mr. Macdonald said he will support "abolutely" Social Credit party theory and economic doctrine.

The New Brunswick legislature heard a plea by Louis A. Lebel (Lib.-Restigouche) for rehabilitation of roads in southern New Brunswick. Speaking in the Throne-Speech debate he also rapped what he called the Progressive Conservative opposition practice of speculating on possible cabinet changes. He termed it a "Tory shuffle game."

Lloyd Stinson, (CCF-Winnipeg South) introduced a resolution in the Manitoba legislature asking the government to consider appointing a standing independent commission to readjust representation following each decennial census. Debate on the resolution was adjourned. The effect of such a readjustment would be to increase urban representation and decrease the number of rural members.

Political Civil War Raging In Republic

Pusan, Korea, March 5 (AP)—A political civil war is raging in this embattled Korean Republic despite the pressure of a mighty communist army massed near its northern frontier.

With a presidential election only three months away, antagonism between President Syngman Rhee and the one-house national assembly has flared into a running fight.

Political observers here agree almost unanimously that Rhee has little chance for re-election—even if he seeks another four-year term.

Rhee, although convinced the Korean people will insist that he run, told The Associated Press he made up his mind "long ago" not to seek another term.

But political intimates of the 76-year-old "father of the Korean Republic" say Rhee could be induced to run if he thought he would be elected easily. Under the Korean constitution, the president is elected by the national assembly.

In January, Rhee sponsored a proposed amendment for direct election of the president and for a two-house national assembly. Critics said Rhee introduced the measure as a move toward his re-election.

After only two days of debate, the assembly turned down the amendment by a 143-19 vote.

Rhee suggested that the voters should recall the legislators.

Two weeks ago, several hundred persons gathered at the national assembly carrying placards and shouting for recall of the assembly. Petitions were drawn up. The assemblymen were incensed.

They noted that there is no constitutional provision for recall. They also claimed that the recall move had been carefully planned by Rhee supporters.

The proposed amendment has not been forgotten. Rhee said he might reintroduce the measure after the present legislative session which ends March 20.

Pathologist Calls Victim's Wounds 'Vicious'

Cornwall, March 5. (CP)—The murder trial of a 21-year-old farmhand whose alleged victim died of knife wounds reported to be at least six inches deep entered its third day today.

Dr. William Hay, of Queen's University, Kingston, provincial pathologist, testifying for the Crown in its case against Elias Meek, charged with the fatal stabbing of Mrs. Allan Alguire last Sept. 28, said the knife wounds that caused her death were among the "cruellest and most vicious" he had seen in his experience.

Dr. Hay said death was due to a severed artery within the abdomen from a knife that had penetrated at least six inches.

The body of the wife of Meek's employer was found in a walkway on the Alguire farm, 10 miles north of Cornwall.

The victim suffered severe wounds on the head and on the side of the abdomen, Dr. Hay said.

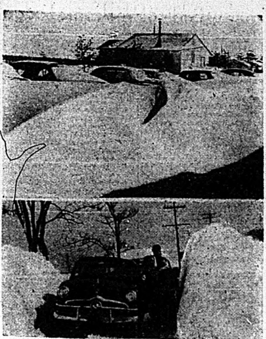
Meek was arrested a mile from the scene of the slaying at his father's home. He had been hiding in barns for 14 hours.

Yesterday Mrs. Ross Alguire, mother-in-law of the slain woman, told of going to the farm with two women friends to pick apples and of finding the body.

When the trial opened Monday, after a preliminary hearing found Meek mentally fit to stand trial, Allan Alguire, 29-year-old husband of the dead woman, said he had never found Meek quarrelsome or quick-tempered. He had left his wife and Meek alone at home and gone to a neighbor's farm the day of the slaying.

Dr. Hayes said yesterday there was no evidence Mrs. Alguire had been sexually attacked.

Storm Paralyzes East Coast



One of the worst storms in years has swept the Maritimes and the New England coast bringing air and highway traffic almost to a standstill. Two are dead and many others feared lost in Nova Scotia alone. These photos show Cape Cod, Mass., where 20-foot snowdrifts buried hundreds of cars. Quinte Belle Lodge Holds Euchre Party

On Monday evening, a most enjoyable time was spent by Quinte Belle Lodge, 260, Ladies' Society of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, at the Engineers' Hall, Pine Street, when 12 tables of euchre were played.

Those winning prizes included —ladies', Mrs. Hawley and Mrs. Kingston; consolation, Mrs. Shaddock; men, Messrs. Kingston and Bishop and consolation, R. E. Berry.

A draw was also held the winner being R. E. Berry.

Refreshments were served at the close of the evening. The committee in charge consisted of Mrs. E. Spring, Mrs. R. Shortt and Mrs. T. White.

Fine Chinchillas Have Big Story For Fur Breeders

Moorefield, Ont. (CP)—The story of the chinchilla is almost as romantic as the Andes slopes whence it came. Breeders such as Garfield Kopas know it well.

Mr. Kopas, a hatchery and poultry farmer in this district 30 miles northwest of Kitchener, began raising chinchillas five years ago, starting with one pair. Now he has 48 of the valuable animals.

No other animal has such a luxurious and warm coat as the chinchilla. Each hair usually is made up of 80 cobweb-thin strands springing from one root. The roots are close together.

While the animals eat hay and special pellets, they also enjoy carrots, sunflower seeds, rolled oats, raisins and apple tree bark. They are kept in small wire cages because they will gnaw through wood. Their hind legs are like springs and they can jump 25 feet.

Mr. Kopas says the animal's story began 400 years ago during the Spanish conquest of the west coast of South America. The Chincha Indians of the high Andean slopes were discovered using fabrics made of a fine wool, as well as using the fur itself. These furs were taken back to Spain and soon became popular in Europe.

The result: the animals were hunted out of their burrows among the loose rocks of the mountain ranges of Peru, Chile and Bolivia.

Saved from Extinction

In the 1920s a mining engineer hired Indian trappers to scour the mountains for the few remaining. Four females and seven males were brought to California in 1923. There a ranch was established and from these remaining chinchillas have come the stock now scattered in breeding farms in various countries.

The first chinchillas arrived in Canada in 1937, and in 1946 the National Chinchilla Breeders of Canada were organized.

Mr. Kopas said he looks forward to the day when he can move his herd into a cement ranch building. He said at present breeders are not concentrating on supplying pelts to the market but upon breeding stock. This will be a five-to- eight-year project.

Paris Styles No Challenge London Says

London. (CP)—We've seen it all before.

This was the unexpected reaction of British fashion writers attending Paris spring shows, after previously viewing the London collections.

This season, London had anticipated every Paris couture line of any importance, thereby knocking at least one hole in the old belief that Britain cannot compete with Paris in production of "new" lines.

London designers can also boast that the "masher" suit by Lachasse, its unwaisted jacket half-belted low at the back, previewed the Fath-Dior agreement on hip-length waistlines.

Independently, the two masters of Paris Houte Couture showed around 600 dresses with the waist-round-the-hips look. Dior showed a low waistline emphasized by cuff, belt or band, above a long straight skirt. London designers gave the same hip emphasis above full skirts.

Another similarity was the "breadth without thickness" look shown in London by Digby Morton and in Paris by Desses. Colors and materials also followed a general trend. In London, colors were dark gun-metal greys, all-black, all-white and pinky bieges. Paris followed suit and also favored the London use of silk tweeds, silk straw, Paisley-patterned silks, cloudy prints, Donegal tweed and Shantung.

London Has It

British women who want a Dior touch to their spring wardrobe can get it right in London. They can buy a gun-metal grey dress and combine it with the straw or moss green velvet hat. Dark wool coats with contrasting lining of polka dot or print silks that match a summer dress, are also procurable on the home market. And it's easy to find a brilliant silk coat to wear over a plain summer frock.

In fact, British buyers who usually pay thousands of pounds for reproduction rights on French styles have this year been holding back, says Audrey Whiting of the London Daily Mirror. For the first time, she adds, they have told French designers: "Women in Britain prefer the simplicity of British designs."

Certainly the unpinched, unpadded waistline favored this year by a majority of the Paris style dictators cannot challenge the exquisite English tailoring of suits and coats by Norman Hartnell, Lachasse and others of London's Big Ten that favor classic styles with tiny waists and curved hiplines.

Worthy Mistress Sister Ostofi tendered appreciative thanks to all present for their kindly co-operation in making the evening so enjoyable, and expressed the wish that this might be an annual event.

Sea Food-Penny Plain And Three Dollars Fancy

By Mary Moore

Over the weekend we visited a city of one hundred thousand population in the States and I was impressed with the number of family people who were eating in restaurants.

We were being entertained by a glamorous New York business girl so had our choice of the town and went to a very swish sea food restaurant and ate Florida pompano.

On the previous day we had taken a rather dim view of the attitude of two American gentlemen to all of the ceremony observed over our beloved King George's death both in England and Canada.

But nothing we do can equal the ceremony which went with the service of that Florida pompano. A young lady had taken our orders, and all went quietly while our jumbo shrimp cocktails were served, eaten and cleared. Then through the doors swung three male waiters each bearing a large tray with one pompano for each of us on his. The table next to us being unoccupied was cleared for their next action. With the skill acquired from long practice those boys slit open, boned the broiled pompano, folded back the top fillets and placed them before us in one minute flat. The fish were broiling hot and super delicious with Tartare Sauce.

We were hugely amused with their concentration on this tricky task. When our plates were in place we grinned our appreciation, and only then did they permit themselves to smile too.

In different ways, for instance over broiled lobster for a family of four, all of the diners were given this courteous and skilful attention. The atmosphere was charged with service-plus. (I use the word "charge" advisedly.)

But we are home again now and I think had nearly as much fun at our own table, with Pete for a waiter, over a casserole of smoked whitefish that my sister Doris dreamed up. I raved over it so much that she said "I wondered if it would make the grade." (meaning reach this column).

SMOKED HADDOCK CASSEROLE

Buy a piece from the centre portion of a smoked haddock—the kind with skin and bone still present—it should weigh 1 1-4 lbs. to yield the 1 lb. flesh you need for this. Peel off skin, pull flesh from bones with strong fork and place fish in buttered casserole. Cover with 2 sliced hard cooked eggs and pour over 1 1-2 cups medium white sauce (3 tablespoons each butter and flour and 1 1-4 cups milk). Sprinkle this with 1 cup grated old cheese. Bake about 20 minutes at 375 deg. Fahr. or until heated through and bubbling and golden. With this we had fluffy boiled rice and sliced new beets and the finest shreddest new cabbage salad our sharpest knife could produce. I highly recommend this dish.

Dear Miss Moore: Recently my husband was dining at the —— —— hotel and ordered Country Style Scrambled eggs. They were delicious and creamy looking. I don't think they were cooked in a skillet. . . .would you kindly give me the recipe for fluffy scrambled eggs?— Edna K.

CREAMY EGGS

Three eggs, 1 tablespoon butter, 3-4 teaspoon salt, shake of pepper, 2-3 cup whole milk. Beat eggs slightly, add soft butter and seasonings and milk. Cook over hot water and, as the mixture begins to thicken around the sides and bottom draw it away with spoon. Continue until all of the mixture is cooked, but do not stir continuously. Serve as soon as it is "set" on toast garnished with parsley. A good variation is to add a little grated cheese or chopped bacon.

Women's Activities

SHANNONVILLE W.M.S.

The W.M.S. of Shannonville United Church observed the World Day of Prayer on Friday p.m. in the church hall with the ladies of the Anglican Guild as guests. The service was well attended and the program printed was used the theme being "Christ Our Hope". Mrs. Damon Hinchey, pianist, played soft music and accompanied all the hymns. Mrs. L. W. Scott, president, opened the meeting with prayer. A few items of business were disposed of. Mrs. W. D. Robertson, secretary, gave the minutes of the last meeting which were adopted as read; also a letter from Mrs. Walter Coates saying that Miss Margaret Hockin, the missionary for special prayer is at present in Birmingham, England, and expects to arrive in Canada in May in time for the board meetings.

A quilting was arranged for in the church hall on March 6. The Supply secretary, Mrs. Damon Hinchey, has donated two quilt tops and lining and Mrs. Alfred Little has again made and donated blocks for a quilt.

Mrs. Scott was leader of the first part of the program "Adoration"; Mrs. William Houston, in the responsive readings in the next part "Penitence"; Mrs. Charles Wood for the part "Assurance"; Mrs. Scott for "Intercession". Mrs. Robertson, Mrs. Sam Elliott, Mrs. K. R. Vivian, Mrs. Saul McFarlane and Mrs. Everett Stratton were chosen to offer prayer for the different subjects given on the program.

Mrs. Scott gave a short inspirational talk. "We should pray expecting to receive. Not by might or by power but by My Spirit sayeth the Lord. What kind of an example are we setting the children? Does our home life show the young ones entrusted to our care the better way of Christian living."

Offering was collected by the treasurer, Mrs. E. Stratton and Mrs. Saul McFarlane and dedicated by Mrs. L. Scott. Mrs. F. Doxtator read a leaflet "What Your Money Does Showing How the Offering For World's Day of Prayer was used".

Before the closing hymn all repeated The Lord's Prayer. Mrs K. R. Vivian, group leader and her assistants served refreshments and a social time was enjoyed by all.

Far North Indians Retain Moccasin Telegram Method Of Transmitting Messages

Winnipeg (CP) — Modern communications have competition in the "moccasin telegram," a form of messaging used by Indians in the northern Manitoba bush for generations.

Mrs. Jane Ross, raven-haired nurse from Nova Scotia, says she recently received a message on the "moccasin telegram" at her station at Nelson House, north of the 55th. parallel on the Hudson's Bay Railway.

The message asked for help for two Indians severely scalded out on lonely trap line. It was passed from Indian to Indian and reached Mrs. Ross and her husband in time to get the injured men out by plane for treatment.

Mrs. Ross is one of five nurses who operate stations for the Indian health services department north of the 53rd. parallel in Manitoba and northwestern Ontario. They came to Winnipeg recently to attend a refresher course.

Fast Operation

Mrs. Wilmer Raynor, a field nurse with headquarters at Norway House, Man., says she once sent a wire to a clergyman at Indian Lake, notifying him of a death. He received the message long after he heard the news via the moccasin telegram.

Mrs. Evely McMullen of Big Trout Lake, Ont., and Mrs. Alma Faubert, of Lansdowne House, Ont., say not all their visits to Indian patients are emergency calls.

"Sometimes they call us for trivial things," says Mrs. Faubert. "We always have to answer in case it might be an emergency. Then after a journey by canoe in summer, snowmobile, or plane in winter, the patient is quite likely to have nothing worse than a toothache."

"The Indians get frightened," says Mrs. McMullen. "Besides treating their sickness is only part of our work. Our main job is to encourage them to eat a more balanced diet."

Mrs. Raynor says the city-folk notion of idle, shiftless Indians is not true of the trapper families of the north.

Women Work Hard

"The women work as hard as the men in the winter," she says. "Their job is to cure the skins of animals their husbands trap, to look after household arrangements and sew moccasins.

"They work very hard and it irritates us when tourists come up in the summer, see the Indians doing nothing and accuse them of laziness."

Many of the Indian homes are spotlessly clean and some families are beginning to eat diets considered necessary, she says. Schools for Indian children make a tremendous difference. The children pass on what they have learned and it makes it that easier to improve living habits.

NEW TRADE PACT

Tokyo, March 5 — (AP)— The Japanese foreign office yesterday announced conclusion of a new trade and payment agreement between Japan and Sweden. Japan will import $17,000,000 worth of goods during the 1952 calendar year from Sweden and will export $10,000,000.

21 STUDENTS ESCAPE

Ashburnham, Mass., March 5 — (AP) — Twenty-one students escaped unharmed early today after lightning struck and set fire to the main building of Cushing Academy, a private school. School officials said the boys were awakened when the bolt struck the building's tower and had time to make their way to the street before the flames spread to their third-floor dormitory.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Her loving heart is lonely for love

Everybody knows how it feels to be away from home and lonely. Something infinitely worse than that, however, is to be right at home and still feel alone.

Here's a girl of 16 who is in that dreadful predicament. She has been washing dishes, scrubbing can remember, and sees no hope of ever being anything else.

"Ever since I've been 10 years old," she writes me, "I have been washing wishes, scrubbing floors and cooking for my family. Three years ago a little sister was born, and I have been the one to take care of her ever since my mother brought her home from the hospital. I like children and housework very much, and my one ambition is to be married and raise a family of 4 or 5 children.

"What I want is someone to call my own who I can love and who will love me. I know my parents love me, and I love them very much, but they have never shown me their love. As a little girl, I was always afraid to climb up on my father's knee and kiss him, and I can never remember my mother kissing me when she put me to bed the way she does my little sister.

"What would you suggest for me to do to get over this longing to be loved? At times I feel so lonely that I can't stand it to hear my oldest sister talk about her boy friends I feel very funny because I don't have one. I make very good grades in school, and I get along well with the fellows, but they never date me. They'll walk me to class, and sit with me in the movies, and at games, but they never date me.

"Will you please answer my letter in your column? Oh, please do! I'm so lonesome!"

Feels Left Out

See what I mean about being lonely at home? Here's a teen-ager with a great love in her heart for home and family, and who gives freely and gladly of her time and strength to "do for them", as the saying goes. Yet apparently the members of the family take it all for granted, and never think to show her that they love her, too, and that they appreciate all she does for them. So she feels left out when she sees her mother kiss the little sister of whom she is so fond, and the longing to be loved is all the keener when she hears her sister talk about her boy friend.

How the family is to be roused to realize this girl's need, is a difficult problem, and one that can scarcely be solved by an outsider like myself, who is far away. What the situation calls for is for some kind and understanding older person to look into the matter, to make friends with the family and eventually try to get them to understand. What is needed here, too, is for the girl herself to get out more with young people and increase her circle of friends. As she does this, the feeling of loneliness will, of course, decrease.

I suspect she has been spending so much time at home with the housework and taking care of the baby that she has left herself little leisure to do things with other boys and girls. Or could it be that she is such a shy and retiring girl that it seems easier to stay home and do chores there, than to make the effort to join other young people in their activities?

Whichever reason is responsible, it is time for her to attack her problem by associating normally with those her own age. As a first step, I think she should find a way to become a member of some teen-age group. There must be clubs in school she could join, and I am sure if she would pay a visit to the YWCA in her town, she would find a number of them there that would interest her. If she is uncertain how to begin, let her have a talk with some teacher at school, or with someone at the Y who is used to helping girls with problems.

DIRECTIONS

This meat loaf and cake rang the bell at dinner last night so I am passing along the methods before the memory of them grow cold.

I liked two things about the meat loaf besides its wonderful flavor. It went together quickly and sliced neatly while hot.

EMEM'S NEW MEAT LOAF

Enough for 8 people or for 4 once hot and once cold.

Two lbs. minced beef, 2 slices back bacon, 4 slices 100 per cent whole wheat bread, 2 stalks celery with leaves, 1 medium onion, 1-2 clove garlic, 1-3 cup catsup, 1 egg, 1-3 cup milk, 2 tablespoons flour, 2 teaspoons salt, 1-2 teaspoons MSG, 1-4 teaspoon pepper.

(I dislike thinking some of you may not have MSG. I strongly advise you to buy it for it gives oomph to many savoury dishes and I want to feel free to include it in my recipes for you.)

Put through food grinder the celery, bacon, onion, garlic and bread in that order. The bacon may be slightly cooked or not—just as you wish. Add these to all remaining ingredients and mix in large bowl using the hands.

Pack into well-greased loaf pan. Mine is 9 by 5 by 2 1-2 inches. This makes a good shape for turning out on a large platter to serve surrounded with the baked potatoes. Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. for 1 hour or at 350 deg. Fahr, for 1 1-4 hours. Be careful in turning it out on the platter as some liquid collects around edges. Serve with

TOMATO SAUCE

Heat 1 20-oz. tin tomatoes with 1 bay leaf, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon each chili powder, pepper and sage, 1 teaspoon sugar, for 5 minutes. Make a paste of 2 tablespoons flour and 1-4 cup cold water and stir this into the tomatoes until thick. Strain. Reheat. Pass at table.

HOT MILK SPONGE CAKE

Use electric or rotary beater. In large bowl break 3 eggs and beat for 10 minutes, then gradually add 1 1-2 cups sugar while beating. This must be as high and light as possible. Remove beater. Sift 1 1-2 cups all-purpose or cake flour with 1 1-2 teaspoons baking powder and 1-2 teaspoon salt. Heat to just below boiling point 3-4 cup milk with 2 tablespoons butter. To egg and sugar mix add 1 teaspoon vanilla. Now sift the dry mix over the sugar and egg mixture, one-third of it at a time, folding it in. Now add the nearly boiling milk and butter all at once, stirring it fast but just enough to blend well. Turn into 8 x 8 inch pan—preferably lined with very thin buttered wax paper. Bake at 360 deg. Fahr. about 35 minutes. Cool on wire rack. Frost with

CHOCOLATE NUT ICING

Cream 3 tablespoons butter or margarine and gradually add 1-2 lb. icing sugar and 1 tablespoon cocoa and 3 tablespoons milk or cream, shake of salt; beat until very light and of soft spreading consistency. Spread on sides and top of cold cake, and sprinkle top with 1-2 cup chopped walnuts.

Women's Activities

ST. MARK'S W.A.

Deseronto — The regular monthly meeting of St. Mark's Woman's Auxiliary was held at the home of Mrs. N. Thomas with 15 members in attendance.

The president, Mrs. N. Thomas, opened the meeting.

Reports were read by the secretary and the treasurer.

It was decided to send a parcel overseas early in March to the Rev. A. Shepherd, Birmingham, England.

At the recent annual meeting, Mrs. K. Blatchford was appointed secretary for the Juniors who are now meeting every Monday afternoon.

Mrs. A. Brim invited the members to her home for the next meeting.

After the meeting closed refreshments were served by the hostess.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Today's tip on hostess courtesy

We all like the hostess who warm-heartedly greets a guest with, "I'm so glad to see you!" And who, to the departing guest, says, "I'm so happy that you could come." A most gracious prologue and epilogue to hospitality!

A party to "meet" and welcome an adopted baby

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My sister is to adopt a 16-months-old baby, and she and I would like to know if it would be proper for her to have an adoption-announcement party (or would it be called a 'shower'?) If you approve of this, what kind of invitations would be sent out? And should the age of the baby be mentioned in the invitations? This is such an unusual situation that we have no idea whether or not our plan would be at all correct.—T. N.

I think it would be a delightful plan to have an informal little party inviting the relatives and a few intimate friends of the family to "meet" your sister's adopted baby. This casual kind of party would be better taste than giving a shower, either before or after the baby's arrival. If at a later date one of your sister's friends—or a group of her friends—wishes to give a shower for the baby, this would be both proper and generous-thoughted; but for you a member of the family to give it, isn't in good taste.

The invitations to such an informal and intimate gathering may properly (and perhaps most appropriately) be given by telephone. Or notes might read somewhat like this:

> Dear Aunt Dorothy,
> Our adopted baby, our charming 16-months-old Cynthia, has arrived at our home, and we want so much to have you and her "meet" each other! So won't you please come to a little tea-party I am giving on Tuesday, April 10th, at four o'clock, for relatives and a few friends to welcome this delightful young lady into our lives and hearts? Do say "yes"!

> Lovingly,

Asking to "see" the engagement ring

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When you know that a girl is engager, is it proper for you to ask to see the engagement ring?—Theo L.

It's proper. . If you see that she is wearing an engagement ring. But it's tactless, very often downright cruel, to make any reference to an engagement ring if this ring is not in evidence Only a crude curiosity and an insensitivity to another person's feelings would make one ask. "Are you going to have an engagement ring?" or "When is Bill giving you an engagement ring?"

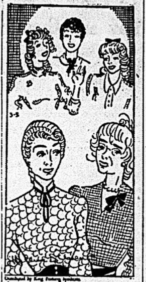
What to do about grey hair



Distributed by King Features Syndicate

The white-haired woman requires a neat, dignified hair-do.

Those first silver threads! A few at the temples, maybe. After that the change from the pristine color can come along quite rapidly. It is terrible only if you think so. There are women who are better looking with their cotton-white crowns than they were before, and they know it. The silvered halos give softness to the skin, seem to make tiny wrinkles less noticeable.

Many women flirt with the idea of having their tresses dyed; and that they should do if greyness makes them unhappy, makes them feel it is not becoming. There are many mops that have come in contact with the contents of dye bottles, and nobody is the wiser. No home jobs, these. It takes the knowledge, skill and experience of an expert to so color salt-and-pepper locks that they haven't the lacquered look. Treatments are expensive. As the hair grows out—as it does to the tune of three inches every six months—there must be a touch-up.

One dye application should not overlap another; only the new growth should be tinted. To do that requires the most conscientious attention.

If a woman tires of dyeing and decides to accept the frosted crown, she is in for a bad time. Certain dyes cannot be removed. One can have a three inch trim and wait patiently until nature has attended to the matter, which means that for eight months or so she will be part-dyed, part-snowy.

Recently, cosmetic chemists have produced color rinses. They are harmless, but it is better to have the treatment given at a beauty shop rather than at home, and the charge is reasonable. These lotions are washed away during the next shampoon. If you like the results, you can continue; if not, you simply stop.

Of all types of women, the white-haired lady requires a neat, dignified hairdo. She can step along with the style trend, no matter where it leads, but she must have no stray ends, no rag-tags or bob-tails. A tress out of place makes her look blowsy.

She must take extreme care as to what shampoo she uses. Strong soaps will put yellow streaks among the snowy growth. No matter what medium is used, it must be rinsed away, every particle. If she has experimented with a coloring agent, and plans a permanent, she should tell the operator what she has been using. Otherwise unpleasant things may happen.

Congregational Meetings

UNITED CHURCH

The United Church, Queensboro, recently held its annual congregational meeting in the Sunday school rooms, with Mr. Lewis, the pastor, as chairman.

Reports of the different activities of the church showed a successful year both spiritually and financially.

Leitz Company To Build Plant At Midland

Midland, Ont. March 5. (CP)— famous camera and precision instrument firm from Germany is going to build its North American factory here.

Ernst Leitz (Canada) Limited announced plans today to put a building in this Georgian Bay town on a 10-acre industrial site purchased about three months ago.

The Leitz Company, best known to the public for its pioneer development of the Leica miniature camera, is better known to industry for its range of precision instruments, which include microscopes, binoculars and instruments for testing the hardness of metals. The parent factory at Wetzlar in Western Germany employs more than 5,000 persons.

The initial plant, which will specialize in the assembly of a broad range of precision products in the early stages, will have 5,000 square feet of floor space and two floors and will represent an investment of approximately 200,000.

Some Canadian Capital

While stock in the 100-year-old Ernst Leitz Incorporated has long been held by the Leitz family, some capital for the Canadian venture will be put up by Walter A. Carveth of Toronto, whose firm now markets the Leitz products.

Fifty men and women will be employed in the new plant during early stages of operations and the number ultimately employed may exceed 1,000. Fifteen key workers from Wetzlar are expected to arrive at Montreal about the end of May.

Walter Kluck, who will manage the Midland operations under the supervision of Gunther Leitz, is scheduled to reach here about April 1.

Construction of the first factory unit is expected to start this month.

ORDERS MILITARY CONTROL

Santiago, Chile, March 5 (AP) —President Gabriel Gonzalez Videla yesterday ordered military control in Tarapaca and Antofagasta provinces, where communist-led strikes have paralyzed vital nitrate plants. The strikes involve about 11,000 workers who demand higher pay.

Nature Lets Go a Broadside

British troops in Ismailia have other foes to contend besides Egyptian Irregulars. Here are two members of the Lincolnshire Regiment as they battle their way through a severe sandstorm while on patrol duty along the Treaty Road north of Fayed, Egypt. — Central Press Canadian.

British Columbia Now Producing Much Tungsten

Vancouver (CP) — British Columbia is rapidly becoming one of the key suppliers of tungsten for the western world.

Two mines are already producing tungsten, at least four more are being developed to start operating as soon as possible, and many properties are being investigated.

Most of the tungsten for North American industry once came from the orient. With these supplies cut off, the price has almost tripled to $65 a short ton unit and defence industries are snapping up any tungsten available.

Doubling of production of Canada's biggest mine, at Salmo, B.C., 300 miles east of here, is expected by spring. A 250-ton mill being run for the Canadian government is being enlarged for the owners, Canadian Exploration Ltd., to make a total capacity of 500 tons of ore a day.

The second producing mine is the Red Rose of Western Uranium near Hazelton, 450 miles north of here, which is shipping to Britain.

Black Diamond Tungsten Ltd. expects to start underground work this spring at a site near Atlin Lake, 900 miles north of Vancouver.

Along the Alaska Highway, five miles north of Mile 701 in the Yukon, the Yukon Tungsten Corp. Ltd. is developing a deposit.

Another property being developed is on the Stikine River, 40 miles south of Telegraph Creek.

British Columbia and Yukon chamber of mines reports properties are being investigated all over the province in a search for this strategic metal.

GOOD FISHING

Tuna fish which congregate along the Nova Scotia shore in summer months are found almost all over the world.

Farmers Advised To Grow More Hay and Grass

Toronto, March 5. (CP)—Ontario farmers should grow more hay and grass—"the cheapest and best feed there is"—to make Ontario independent in livestock production, Professor R. G. Knox, head of the Animal Husbandry Department, Ontario Agricultural College, said yesterday.

He told a meeting of Eastern Ontario staff members of the Veterans' Land Act: "We buy a cow from Calgary and on the next train we have to ship a carload of grain to feed it."

Production of more grass and hay would make possible the raising of more calves in Ontario and reduce the number of cattle brought from Alberta.

In earlier statements, Mr. Knox said public buying habits have influenced the size of cows.

Because women in the home want small cuts of beef, a new breed of cattle weighing about 700 pounds each and called "compresses," have been developed. Scores of butchers in Toronto refused to buy carcasses of beef that weigh more than 400 pounds.

He said the American import ban on Canadian cattle will continue until after the American presidential elections in November.

Mr. Knox told staff members of the Eastern Ontario district, Veterans' Land Act, that he was "neither a crystal gazer nor a politician." But he added he has bet $5 that the ban will continue that long, that it will become a political football.

"The gentlemen of the farm block in Washington are watching the situation just as closely as we are."

Wife's Tears Win Reprieve For Husband

Toronto, March 5. (CP) —A wife's tears yesterday won John David Dempsey, 25, of Toronto, a reprieve from penitentiary.

Dempsey pleaded guilty of theft of two rear-view mirrors from R.C.A.F. trucks Feb. 28. When Deputy Magistrate J. Grudeff consulted Dempsey's record of three previous convictions for theft, he considered a prison term mandatory.

But as he was about to pass sentence, Dempsey's sobbing wife rose and told of bringing up their 3 1-2-year-old child in a background of crowded rooms, unemployment, always under the spectre of her husband's record and of finally achieving a measure of stability and happiness in a small apartment.

"Do you like your husband," asked the magistrate.

"I don't like him," she said in a trembling voice. "I love him. And if you'd ever lived in a cramped furnished room, you'd know how much this apartment means to us."

"Two years probation," said the magistrate.

Public Gambling Under Attack In Germany

Bonn (AP) — Is tax revenue collected from gambling casinos "sin money?" Is it such filthy lucre that it can't even be purified when spend to build houses for refugees from the Communist east?

These are questions posed for the West German parliament by a measure to outlaw the republic's nine licensed casinos (Spiez-Banken). Most of these are in famous spas such as Wiesbaden, Bad Homburg and Travemuende. They attract wealthy tourists.

The bill, introduced by members of Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's Christian Democratic Party, has been sent to committee for further study after a lively debate on morality.

Anti-gambling forces were led by 71-year-old Dr. Helene Weber, former social worker.

"I have had opportunity to visit these hells of moral depravity," she said. "And even if the revenue obtained from licensing casinos is used for social purposes, the end doesn't justify the means. The state must safeguard its citizens. We don't want to use this money — which is tarnished by a dark, demoniac power."

Paul Bausch, another Christian Democrat, backed Dr. Weber.

Bausch question whether German youth would ever rise to defend a country of such doubtful morals that it countenanced gambling casinos.

Hans Ewers, of the right-wing German party, said his party was not only against gambling casinos but against the football pools and lotteries.

"Furthermore," he said, "we are against boozing and lust. But it's childish to try to legislate such things out of existence. Close the casinos and people will gamble in illegal clubs. After all, the casinos are no hells. They attract a lot of fashionable foreigners and why shouldn't German casinos collect this foreign exchange instead of letting it all go to Monte Carlo?"

DRANK A TOAST

Tokyo, March 5—(AP) — Millions of Japanese last night drank a toast in "shirozake" (Japanese vermouth) to the young daughters of Japan, hoping for them to grow beautiful and live happily forever. Yesterday was the annual "dolls festival" observed for centuries.

MARSH HILL

Sidney Federation of Agriculture Elects Directors, Other Officers

Sidney — The annual meeting of the Sidney Federation of Agriculture was held in the 4th. Line Community Centre last Wednesday night.

The president, Mr. Horace Knight, called the meeting to order. Rev. Wesley Neelands spoke briefly, encouraging the people to get behind the federation.

Guest Speaker

Mr. Harold Varty, of Tweed, the county president of the federation, spoke of the work of the County Federation and then introduced Mr. Clarence Milligan, of Napanee, provincial president of the federation. Mr. Milligan stressed the need for strong township federations and gave an outline of a recent federation meeting in Montreal.

In 1949, the cattle population was the lowest and has increased 200,000 head in the last two years. He stated that small surplus in eggs and hogs has forced the price down. He outlined briefly the scheme for the marketing of eggs and poultry.

"Co-op." Insurance

Mr. Bernard Hollinger, of Foxboro, spoke concerning Co-op. Insurance, telling how it brought lower rates of insurance to farmers.

Mr. James Campbell expressed thanks to the speaker and everyone for coming out, Mr. Horace Knight then outlined the work of the federation in the past two years.

Mr. Oliver Dalrymple was in charge of the election of directors and associate directors.

The directors and associate directors are:

Concession 1 — Ridley Wallbridge, director; Harry Rutter, associate director.

Concession 2—Gilbert Sills and Harleigh Hamilton.

Concession 3—Burton Hubble and Alex. Vandervoort.

Concession 4—Horace Knight and Bert Bush.

Concession 5—Harry Phillips and Ronald Longwell.

Concession 6—Leslie Finkle and Colin Donald.

Concession 7—Roswell Reid and Ed. Heasman.

Concession 8—James Campbell and John Kane.

Concession 9—Harry Brown and Doug. Pyear.

The directors and associate directors met later and elected their officers as follows:

President, James Campbell; vice-president, Douglas Pyear; sec.-treasurer, Leslie Finkle.

Mr. Dalrymple showed a color film, "No Hand Stripping," which has been approved by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

After the meeting closed refreshments were servd and a social time enjoyed by all.

Korea Unit Check Reveals no Lack Of Socks, Gloves

By BILL BOSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the Canadians in Korea, March 5 (CP) — A "letter home" to relatives of a Canadian soldier in Korea boomeranged into cordoning of a unit by military police, a kit inspection and a check of unit stores.

A story based on the letter appeared in a Nova Scotia newspaper in mid-January. It alleged a shortage of socks and gloves, said there had been an issue the day Defence Minister Claxton visited the unit, but that these had later been withdrawn.

When the story came to the attention of Brig. John H. Rockingham he ordered the inspection and check, with the unit cordoned to ensure an unquestionable result.

The soldier to whom the letter had been attributed had eight pairs of socks in his kit-bag besides the ones he was wearing. He had one extra pair of black lined gloves plus one pair of the special Canadian army mitt-with-trigger finger, complete with liners. He freely signed a statement denying he had alleged the shortages and adding that no equipment he had ever been issued which had been withdrawn.

The check of unit stores showed enough spares to re-equip completely 60 per cent of the unit.

May Be Parents

How does it happen that scattered complaints of this kind arise where there is no apparent cause for complaint?

Says Brig. Rockingham: "It may be that the parents for some reason or other are disaffected. They may not like the government, for instance. Or perhaps they were against their sons joining the army and have not felt they were being as well cared for here as they would be at home. If it does come from the soldiers' own letters, it may be a way of ensuring that they get credit for simply doing their duty — goodness knows they are entitled to credit—day after day in trying conditions. If that's the way a soldier wants to earn credit it's his own business as long as he does his job here. But in view of the soldier's denial I don't think the reports originate here."

Says Lt.-Col. Norman Wilson-Smith, C.O., of the Princess Patricias: "Some soldiers do feel a need for sympathy; they want their folks to understand that if there isn't much in the papers these days about fighting, they still are not having a pleasant life. They also may feel cheated in not having got into more of the fighting that made Korea such big news at one time."

KEEP OLD SCHOOL

Meaford, March 5 — (CP) — There will be no "frills' in education for a group of St. Vincent township children. Ratepayers of township's union school section No. 2 voted yesterday not to give up their 92-year-old one-room school. They had been asked to send their children to a new $350,000 public school here. "Frills mean nothing to us," a spokesman for those who opposed closing the little school said. Now the one-room school house will undergo some repairs.

Stop-Gap Schools Meagre Equipment Problem in Korea

By BILL BOSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Suwon, Korea, March 5 (CP) — A group of Korean school boys truged along a road outside Suwon, carrying rush brooms, shovels and rice-straw mats.

"We're getting our own school back today," said one. "The Americans moved out yesterday. We're going to clean it up this morning and then classes will begin."

The mats were to be seats, because there was no furniture.

Since last August the 400 students of Sam II. middle school had gone to class in the undamaged Methodist church. Principal Kim Dong Wha said Sam II school would have no heat, though the temperature was around zero, but there were "good paper windows" and a sound, corrugated-metal roof.

As for students cleaning their own school, that was nothing, he said.

"This is sanitation day when all middle school students, boys and girls, come to class with brooms and spades.

"Once a month they must spend two hours cleaning the city streets. It's partly to help the city, because in wartime there aren't enough men to keep the city clean, but mostly it is practical training in citizenship."

Schools Reopened

Wherever possible in Seoul province schools have been reopened. Classroom repair is under way, using free lumber, nails, glass and cement provided by the United Nations civilian assistance command.

"We're working on 155 classrooms now," said the provincial team commander. "We'll increase the allocation as the work proceeds and materials become available."

Jack Purves, of Cranbrook, B.C. the C.A.C. welfare officer said:

"The kids are going to school in buildings without windows, in tents, in unheated quarters — but they're going to school.

"Once school buildings are released by the army they are returned to the civilian authorities."

Texts and notebooks are scarce but there are reports that Canadian pulp is on the way and that it is to be turned over to the ministry of education.

Meanwhile, Seoul's colleges and universities are functioning in tents in Pusan. (The philosophy faculty of one college blew away—tents, chairs and all—in a recent hurricane.)

There is no sign yet that the United Nations will release college and medical buildings now used by the military.

Mr. Mrs. D. Petherick Celebrate Their 55th Anniversary

Allan's Mills — Mr. and Mrs. Daniel T. Petherick, of Stanwood, quietly celebrated the 55th. anniversary of their wedding day on Sunday, February 24th. They, with their six children and families, and two great grandchildren, spent a very enjoyable day at home.

A buffet luncheon was served at noon from a table centred with an attractively decorated anniversary cake.

The couple were presented with a gift and during the afternoon sacred music and singing was enjoyed, with Mrs. Petherick at the piano.

Following the tea the singing of "God Be With You Till We Meet Again" brought a memorable occasion to a very happy close.

NO CHARGES LAID

New York, March 5 (AP) — A bullet from a rifle his brother fired accidentally travelled through two rooms yesterday and killed Robert Kols, 13. The .22-calibre pellet sped from a bedroom doorway, through the dining room and into the kitchen of the Klos home where it hit Robert in the back of the head. Authorities said no charges will be brought against the 17-year-old brother.

Junior Hawks Defeat Kingston Vics 5-1 To Take First Game Of Series

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

ONE UP!

"Red" Doran's junior Hawks flashed, fluttered, and then flew to a sparkling 5-1 victory over the Kingston Sacs in that all-important first game of the finals playoffs last night. The youngsters drove in for three fast goals in the first minutes of the opening period, lapsed during the last five, then straightened away and came up with a fine all-round exhibition to grab the victory.

It was a hard-checking game with the front lines of both teams skating fast both ways. The Hawks defence stood out despite the tendency to back up before an incoming forward. Bob Wilson scored his second goal of his Belleville career while Peter Green hoisted not a few uninvited guests. Up front the shock troops led by Ted DeGray, Lalande, Strahan et al provided plenty of scoring punch and but for the fine job done by Senior, the Vic goalie, would have piled up a more imposing score.

On the other hand the Vics after the first few minutes proved they will be a dangerous threat to Hawk ambitions to the group title. They have developed fine passing plays while each of their first line is dangerous as an individualist especially young Master Reid.

The teams clash in Kingston tomorrow night in the second game of the series in a joust that should be a classic. The Vics at home on the "ten-acre" ice field will be out to avenge last night's setback and the result should be quite interesting. The third game is scheduled for Memorial Arena Saturday night while the boys go at it again in Kingston next Tuesday.

TRENT VALLEY PLAYOFFS

The Glen Roys, perky as a spring pup, are ready and rarin' to go tonight in their second game with the Trenton Flyers in the current best of-five Trent Valley southern section finals. The Glens spotted the airmen but plenty in Brighton Monday night then roared from behind to score a quintet of markers and snatch the victory from under the noses of the air laddies. Back in their own backyard the Glens are confident they can make it two in a row tonight. It should be quite a joust as the section leaders are in no amiable frome of mind after Monday's setback.

Marmora, staging a fine comeback in the central section of the league, came from behind a two-game deficit to even the series at two tilts each on Monday night in Wellington defeating the lakeside crew by a 6-2 count. The teams are back in Marmora tonight for the fifth and deciding game of the finals series.

ROOKIES PAYING OFF

The five fabulous rookies of the Montreal Canadiens are certainly paying off for the Habs this season. Out of 163 goals scored by Canadiens up to the morning of February 28, the rookies had scored 79 of these. This means that almost half of Canadiens' goal output has been accounted for by the quintet of freshmen. The five rookies, Boom Boom Geoffrion, Paul Meger, Dickie Moore, Dick Gamble and Dollard St Laurent, notched 23 of the last 26 goals scored by Canadiens. Never before have rookies taken over from a club the way the Canadiens' five have this season.

Curling Tourney For Sudbury in 1953

Winnipeg, March 5 (CP)—The Canadian curling championship [illegible] next year at Sudbury, Ont., Chief Justice Thane Campbell of Charlottetown announced last night.

It will be the first time the annual sport classic has been held in Northern Ontario.

The Chief Justice said Thomas H. Rennie of Toronto has been named honorary chairman of the Canadian curling championship. He will be succeeded as chairman by Senator John T. Haig of Winnipeg.

Ross Harstone of Hemilton was named a new member of the board.

Three Goals in First Period Pave Way for Initial Win; 1323 Witness Fast Struggle

Three lightning-fast goals by the Belleville Hawks in the first period of play paved the way for their 5-1 win over the visiting Kingston Vics in the first game of a best-of-seven series between these two clubs here last night for the junior "B" group championship. 1323 fans saw the game.

The Hawks took the upper hand from the opening whistle and were rewarded with goals by Gilmour, Mason and Wilson in a space of slightly over a minute, shortly after the game was underway. Kingston, late in arriving could not seem to get untracked until after half way through the period.

Once they gained "their legs" however, play evened out and they made the score sheet shortly before the final bell, while Carey was sitting out a cross-checking penalty on a neat three-way play by Reid, Montgomery and Vallier, the latter notching the marker.

Play was halted for about 15 minutes just after the half-way mark when Hawk netminder Barclay was clipped across the chin by a stick of one of his own defencemen. Two clamps were needed to close the wound.

DON BARCLAY

. . . Stitches and Stops

Goalie Stands Out

Belleville's line of Lalande, Jacklin and Strahan put on an impressive attack to open the second period and but for the fine defensive work of Bob Senior in the visitors' nets, the score could quite easily have vaulted into double figures.

Time and again, not only in the second but also in the third period, Senior foiled scoring attempts by this line. His performance was one of the bright lights in a losing cause.

Barclay, at the other end of the ice, although not called on to make as many saves was brilliant in the clutch. He stopped at least four solo rushes without help of defence, kicking aside shots that appeared to have him beaten.

Neither team was able to hit the score sheet during the middle frame, an indication of the play, both teams having about an equal opportunity.

The homesters held a slight edge in play during the third frame as reflected in the scoring. Senior kicked aside two solo efforts by George Jacklin before Henry Therrien, who was used sparingly, finally beat him. Going in alone from the blue line, Therrien pulled Senior out, leaned to the right and fired a raised shot from about 10 feet outi nto the left hand corner for the prettiest goal of the night.

Kingston bounced back with Montgomery and Hegarty, Reid and Whyte, forming rushing combinations into the Hawk end. Chevrefils and Vallier also formed a dangerous duo on the attack, the former threatening on several occasions only to be thrust aside by the defence.

DeGray Locks the Door

Ted DeGray sank the final goal of the game on a shot from about 10 feet out.

A near brawl threatened with just one minute left to go in the encounter when Hegarty and Green became entangled in the corner behind the Hawk net. Each received a two minute penalty for roughing.

Outstanding players on the ice, aside from the netminders, were Ted DeGray, Hec Lalande and Ross Mason for the winners, and Wilson Reid and Pat Hegarty of the Vics.

DeGray and Mason, alone with "Duke" Doran who also turned in a fine performance, were the penalty killers for the Hawks. DeGray in particular was a standout with his stick-handling performances on several occasions.

The Hawk defence turned in one of its finest showings as a group. Wilson tallied a goal and an assist, Green played a major portion of the game and checked well, and Munroe turned in another steady performance.

Reid and Hegerty were the biggest threats for the Vics on the night's play, leading their linemates on many dangerous sorties. Whyte and Montgomery also played well, the latter being a hardrock on the defensive wall.

Pat Gilmour, Mason and Wilson topped the scorers with a goal and an assist each; Therrien and DeGray garnering a goal while Carey and Doran picked up assists. Vallier notched the only Vic score assisted by Reid and Montgomery.

The teams:

Kingston Vics: Goal, R. Senior; defence, Montgomery, Reynolds; centre, Chevrefils; wings, Reid, Vallier. Alternates, Redmond, Hegarty, Whyte, Senior, Tozer, Gerow, Mulholland, Roy.

Belleville Hawks: Goal, Barclay; defence, Wilson, Green; Centre, Lalande; wings, Jacklin, Strahan. Alternates, DeGray, Doran, Gilmour, Mason, Carey, Therrien, Houle, Munroe.

Referees — Louis Lecompte, Trenton; Bert Nigh, Peterborough.

Summary

1st period

1 Hawks, Gilmour 4.40
2 Hawks, Mason (Wilson, Carey) 5.14
3 Hawks, Wilson 5.45
4 Vics, Vallier (Reid, Montgomery) 18.26

Saddler Fined $500 But Gets No Suspension

(By The Canadian Press)

The Montreal Athletic Commission yesterday followed up the disqualification of Sandy Saddler with a $500 fine and released the world featherweight champion's purse.

The amount the New York Negro got out of his suddenly-halted bout Monday night with Armand Savoie of Montreal was not announced.

The gate, with paid attendance of 8,334, was announced as $25,374.

There was no suspension of Saddler. After a special meeting of the commission, chairman Emile Gauthier said Saddler's forthcoming induction into the United States Army was taken into consideration but "if it was an ordinary time we would suspend him."

The end of the non-title bout between Saddler and Savoie, Canadian lightweight champion, came just before the fourth round started after Saddler had been warned repeatedly by referee Tommy Sullivan for holding, hitting on the breaks, heeling and other illegal tactics.

Clancy's Hornets Almost Assured Of Pennant

(By The Associated Press)

The Pittsburgh Hornets, gunning for their first American Hockey League pennant, were virtually assured of reaching their goal today.

Coach King Clancy's Hornets took a big step in the right direction last night by edging out the red-hot Cleveland Barons 3-2.

The victory boosted the Hornets eight points ahead of the Barons who had piled up an 18 game unbeaten streak. The Hornets have seven games left to play and the Barons eight. The two rivals clash again tonight in Cleveland.

Johnny McLellan scored five seconds after the halfway mark of the third period to break a 2-2 tie and win the game for the Hornets. The victory was Pittsburgh's 17th straight on home ice.

The Barons jumped off to a 2-1 lead in the first period on goals by Steve Wochy and Vic Lynn. Bob Hassard tallied for Pittsburgh. Rudy Migay tied it up early in the second period to set the stage for McLellan's payoff counter.

Leftwinger Bob Sollinger of the Hornets was carried from the ice in the first period when he suffered a recurrence of a back injury.

Browns Shortstop Signs With Leafs

Toronto, March 5 (CP) —Toronto Maple Leafs of the International Baseball League yesterday announced the acquisition of shortstop Bill Jennings from St. Louis Browns of the American League.

Jennings, veteran of the New York Giants organization and last year the regular shortstop for the Browns, joins Bill Demars and Bud Thomas at the position.

Owner Jack Cooke, who made the announcement, also said Leafs received the signed contracts from outfielder Bob Balcena and pitcher Leon Foulk. It brought to 25 the number already signed.

Cooke, just back from Leafs' Fort Lauderdale training camp, said Wilmer Fields, Negro star with Brantford of the Intercounty League, will report to business manager Mike Murphy March 19.

Fields' status with the Leafs was undetermined. He agreed to sign to play professional two months ago. A few weeks later he appeared to change his mind and asked Brantford if he could return there.

Two Years Ago Brilliant Prospect Jack Banta Now on Way to Minors

Vero Beach, Fla., March 5—(AP)—Two seasons ago Jack Banta was hailed as one of the brightest pitching prospects in the Brooklyn Dodger organization.

Today, Banta, like the unfortunate Rex Barney is trodding that long, long trail—the road back to the minors.

Banta's career apparently is over, ended because of a sore arm.

The 26-year-old righthander from Hutchinson, Kas., will remain here Friday when the main Dodger squad shifts to Miami for the exhibition whirl .

Future Dark

Banta's future is dark, indeed. The Dodgers may send him to the minors in a bid to transform him into a first baseman. Jack is a fair hitter but even if he makes a successful conversion the best he can hope for is a job in triple A. Gil Hodges looms as the regular Brooklyn first baseman for a good many years.

Banta graduated to the Dodgers in 1947 after fanning 199 batters in as many innings while winning 15 and losing five games at Montreal.

The lean youngster came into his own in 1949 after another banner season at Montreal. He won 10 games for Brooklyn including the pennant clincher and great things were expected of him in 1950.

But 1950 was Banta's last in the major leagues. During the training grind he had trouble with his jaw, teeth and finally with his arm. He won only four games and lost four and spent most of the season at Montreal.

Banta spent 1951 with Fort Worth of the Texas League. It was hoped that the Texas sun would bake the soreness out of his arm but it failed. And he appeared in only 14 innings.

Sid Abel Becomes U.S.A. Citizen

Detroit, March 5 (AP)—A United States citizen will break into the All-Canadian lineup of the Detroit Red Wings National Hockey League team today.

But he will be no new recruit

The team's veteran captain Sidney Gerald Abel, will appear in federal court to receive his final papers and be sworn in as a United States citizen.

Manager Jack Adams will be on hand as a character witness for the Wings' star centre.

Bruins Score Convincing 4-1 Win Over New York Rangers To Create Fourth-Place Tie

(By The Canadian Press)

Boston Bruins fought their way back into the National Hockey League Stanley Cup race last night when they scored a convincing 4-1 victory over New York Rangers to pull into a fourth-place tie with the Blueshirt squad.

The victory — Bruins' first against New York since Dec. 5—deadlocked the teams with 53 points each, 13 behind the third-place Toronto Maple Leafs. Rangers have 20 wins while the Beantowners have copped 19 games, both in 61 outings.

Milt Schmidt, Ed Sandford, Woody Dumart and Dunc Fisher scored for the winners while Hy Buller drove in the Rangers' lone marker. Schmidt's goal was the 198th of his N. H. L. career while Dumart's was his 201st.

The game was a cleanly-played affair, seen by 5,697 Boston fans. Only seven penalties were handed out by referee Red Storey, four to the Bruins and three to the Blueshirts.

Habs in Toronto Tonight

Only one game is scheduled in N. H. L. play tonight, the runner-up Montreal Canadiens moving into Toronto for a clash with the third-place Maple Leafs who trail them by four points. The clash could go a long way toward settling the six-team circuit's third place and the fate of meeting Detroit Red Wings in the Stanley Cup semi-finals.

Montreal manager Dick Irvin said last night he did not know whether rookie star Dickie Moore would be available for tonight's game. He twisted his knee against Rangers last Saturday and did not accompany the Habs on their Chicago jaunt Sunday.

There is still plenty of speculation in Toronto as to just whom Leaf general manager Conn Smythe will drop tonight if the chooses to dress Eric Nesterenko and Earl Balfour, high-scoring forwards with the Ontario Hockey Association junior A Toronto Marlboros.

Yesterday, Nesterenko was right-winging for Ted Kennedy and Sid Smith while Balfour was working the portside berth on Max Bentley's line in the Toronto club's daily workout at Maple Leafs Gardens. The displaced wingers—Tod Sloan and Jim Morrison—practised on a line with Ray Timgren.

Out Detroit way, Tommy Ivan is singing his coaching blues from a hospital bed.

Down with a severe cold, Ivan will be replaced for tomorrow Boston Bruins by Jimmy Skinner, a Red Wing scout and former coach of the O. H. A. junior A Windsor Spitfires. Skinner will have his hands full with a rather wobbly defence corps.

Benny Woit and Leo Reise are out of the lineup while Red Kelly is still having trouble with a sprained ankle. Marcel Pronovost is about the only Detroit blue-line basher without a limp.

Reise has torn muscles in his right hip while Woit has a badly-wrenched knee. Both were injured in Monday night's clash with Chicago Black Hawk, won 2-2 by the Wings.

Larry Zeidel is being brought up by the Wings from Indianapolis Capitals of the American Hockey League to bolster the Detroit defence corps.

Sacos, Champs Win in Major B

Two seven-point games featured the regular session of the Major "B" Bowling League at the Recreation Alleys last night.

Sacos took the measure of the Comebacks while the Champs downed Reid's Dairy in the whitewash games.

In the other tilt the Inkspots went down to a 5-2 defeat before the Opticals.

The veteran Joe Legault took the honors rolling a triple of 883 and two singles of 341 and 311. J. Yerex had a 727 with a single of 326. D. Batchelor rolled a 697 with C. Martin getting a 662 and A. Browning a 686.

The scores: Sacos (7) 3547; Comebacks (0) 2549; Champs (7) 2897; Reid's Dairy (0) 2543; Opticals (5) 3003; Inkspots (2) 2968.

Trudeaus Win Owl Semi-Final

Paced by Milligan who scored six goals, the Trudeau's entry in the Owl League swamped Bonn's Garage under a 14-2 score last night to take the semi-finals goals-to-count series by a 19-8 count. Bonn's won the first tilt 6-5.

The winners meet the victors of the Weston's-Boyce's Garage semi-finals for the league title.

Milligan's team mates Duesbury and Cameron, each scored a brace of markers to account for 10 of the teams goals. Metavier got three and Woods poked in another.

Allan of Bonn's scored his teams two goals.

Trudeau's racked up a seven-one score in the first period and went on to duplicate the feat in the final stanza. Ken Cannon, Bonn goalie kicked out twice as many pucks as went past him.

Masters Top Chess Tourney

Havana, Cuba, March 5—(AP) — Argentina's chess masters, Miguel Najdorf and Eric Eliskases, and French champion Nicolas Rossolimo topped the standings today as the International Chess Tournament drew near the half-way mark.

Najdorf, unbeaten in nine full rounds, leads with 7½ points, Eliskases and Rossolimo both have seven.

A point behind the leader in third place are Yugoslavia's Svetozer Glagoric, and two former United States titlists, Samuel Reshevsky and Israel A. Horowitz.

"Duel in the Pool" describes the wild life resources of Hastings and Lennox and Addington Counties. The scene shows Ralph Seaman, left, United States Secretary of The Carling Conservation Club and Major P. J. (Ketch) Ketcheson, roving secretary of the club, preparing to set out on a fishing expedition in one of the Belleville area fishing spots.

Lopez Admits Tribe Will Win Flag And Here Are Several Reasons Why

By GAYLE TALBOT

Tucson, Ariz., March 5 (AP) — Manager Al Lopez of Cleveland Indians adjusted his sitting stance slightly on a bench in the Tribe clubhouse and got down to telling why his athletes are going to win the coming American League race —maybe going away.

"I can't think of a reason in the world why we shouldn't win it, and I know plenty of reason why we should," said the smiling senor.

"We've got the pitching—maybe even better than last year—we've got the fielding and I feel certain in my own mind we're going to get a lot of hitting we didn't get last year from Luke Easter, Larry Doby and Al Rosen.

"Our hitters didn't get the runs they should have for our pitchers last year, that's true, but what many probably don't realize is that it was our fielding in the first half of the season that kept us from piling up a lead that would have clinched the pennant.

"At the halfway point we were seventh in fielding. We made 73 errors in our first 71 games. But at the end of the season we were tied with the Athletics for first place in fielding. The big improvement was mainly at shortstop and second base.

"Sweet Pair"

"Ray Boone at short and Bobby Avila at second started the race a little unsure of themselves. Boone would make two or three errors in a game, and he didn't have a veteran beside him who could tell him to forget them. But about the middle of the race he and Bobby began to click, and they made a sweet pair from there on.

"I would say they're the biggest reason I feel so confident . . . "Easter had his knee operated on during the winter and it appears to be in perfect shape . . . Doby's legs are in better condition too. . .

"The biggest improvement of all is Rosen. He looks like he did two years ago when he hit those 37 home runs and led the league . . .

"Al decided for himself that he had taken golf too seriously after the '50 season and that it might have affected his swing. He asked Sammy Snead if he thought that might have happened, and Sammy said to him 'well, you don't ever see me swinging a baseball bat, do you?' That was good enough for Al. He cut out the golf.

"There's two reasons why I think out pitching might be even stronger. Lou Brissie wasn't in very good shape when he came to us from the Athletics last year. But once he got in condition he was terrific. For one stretch of 31 innings he allowed only one run. He's ready to go from the start this time.

"The other reason is this Sam Jones from San Diego. He's been pitching all winter and I'm letting him take it easy for the time being, but it looks like I'm going to have to find a place for him as a starter. . .

"Hank Greenberg keeps telling me Jones is the best pitcher on the club. All I've got to say is, that's a lot of pitcher."

Greenshirts Trim Galt Black Hawks To Create Tie

(By The Canadian Press)

Kitchener Greenshirts closed out their Ontario Hockey Association Junior A schedule last night in a game that may cause confusion at league headquarters. By defeating third-place Galt Black Hawks 8-5, Greenshirts moved into a fifth-place deadlock with St. Catharines Teepees.

Ontario Hockey Association regulations state that goal averages, figured out to three decimal points, decide the foremost team in case of a tie. Unofficial figures indicate both clubs' records work out to a .520 average. The next move is up to the O.H.A.

The other junior A tussle originally scheduled last night, between Toronto Marlboros and Toronto St. Michael's, was cancelled Sunday because it could have no effect on the final standings.

Marlies are firmly settled in first place. St. Mike's hold down fourth.

At the Lakehead, Fort William Hurricanes moved into a one-game lead in the best-of-seven Thunder Bay Junior A finals last night when they edged the defending-champion Port Arthur Bruins 4-3 in Port Arthur.

The second game is scheduled in Fort William Thursday.

Semi-final play in the O.H.A. Senior A loop continues tonight with Brantford Redmen visiting Stratford Indians and Owen Sound Mercurys moving against Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen in the third game of their best-of-seven series. Brantford and Owen Sound both lead their opposition 2-0 in games played to date.

Frick Denies Police System In Baseball

Tampa, Fla., March 5 (AP)—Baseball Commissioner Ford Frick said today that baseball will continue to exercise constant vigilance to prevent gamblers from approaching players but he denied that a new "police" system has been instituted.

The statement followed a story from Los Angeles quoting Bill Summers, American League umpire, as telling St. Louis Browns that such a system, designed to keep players from the fans before games to safeguard the athletes from gamblers, will be in effect this year.

"There really is nothing new about it," Frick said. "I have talked to American League President Will Harridge and National League President Warren Giles concerning precautionary measures, and I asked them to caution the players about talking to strangers, but that is all."

Manitoba Wins Fourth Straight In Title Curling

By AL VICKERY
(Candian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, March 5 (CP) —Billy Walsh's Manitoba rink yesterday scored its fourth straight victory in the Canadian curling championship to become one of two rinks unbeaten at the end of fourth-round play.

Nova Scotia, the other unbeaten rink, stretched its record to three wins by drubbing Saskatchewan 15-6. Walsh's 9-7 win over Dr. J. R. Clark of Peterborough was the first loss for the Ontario rink.

Alberta swept into a tie with Ontario for third place by defeating Northern Ontario 11-6. Both rinks have two wins and a loss.

Quebec trounced the winless Newfoundland rink 9-4 and British Columbia defeated Prince Edward Island 17-10.

Curlers took time out last night to attend their annual banquet. The fifth draw starts at 3 p.m. (4 p.m. EST) today after the Dominion Curling Association holds its annual meeting.

The 2,000 fans who took in the fourth round matches were treated to a good mixture of curling, including spectacular shots high scoring and costly misses.

HOCKEY'S BIG SEVEN

(By The Canadian Press)

Don Raleigh, New York's only contender among the seven top point - getters in the National Hockey League, was the only one of the big seven to score a point as Boston trounced the Rangers 4-1 Tuesday night.

Raleigh chalked up an assist and now has 16 goals and 36 assists for 52 points. His one-point gain didn't move him out of 4th spot, but put him within two points of third-place Ted Lindsay of Detroit.

League - leader in total points and goals is still Gordie Howe of Detroit with a 39-32—71 record. He is followed by Elmer Lach of Montreal with 13 goals and a pace-setting 46 assists for 59 points.

The leaders:	G	A	Pts

Argos 'Alumnus' 'Visits' With Yank Grid Stars

San Francisco, March 5—(CP) —Albert Epstein, who calls himself an "alumnus" of Toronto Argonauts, said today he is interested in all-American Ollie Matson, Les Richter and other bay-area football stars.

Epstein refused to say whether he made offers to Matson and Richter.

"Just say I had an enjoyable visit with them." The two along with Burl Toler were high up on the draft choices of national professional football league teams.

"As long as a man has not signed a contract we in Canada feel he is free game," Epstein said. He added that Canadian fans demand U. S. imports. He said Matson, high-scoring fullback who led San Francisco to an undefeated 1951 season, is "just as big a name in Toronto as he is in San Francisco."

Richter is a University of California two-time, all-American linebacker and Toler starred in the linebacker role with Matson's team.

Epstein predicted Canadian and N. F. L. league will be operating in unison within five years with a world championship at the end of the season.

"Our game is becoming more and more Americanized all the time and it wouldn't take long to convert entirely," he said.

He said there is no reason for the leagues to fight over players, adding:

"We fight only because Bert Bell (N. F. L. commissioner) won't co-operate."

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

To win an expert duplicate tournament, your luck must hold out in the tight places. You never get a chance to forget you are in a race. Your feet must be dragging, or anything else.

A deal you may run into is one like this:

NORTH
♠A 8 6 5
♥J 4 3
♦9 8 5
♣A 7 2

WEST
♠K
♥K Q 10 9
8 6 2
None
10 9 8 5

EAST
♠Q J 9 7
4 3 2
♥7
♦J 7 3 2
♣4

SOUTH
♠10
♥A 5
♦A K Q 10 6 4
♣K Q 6 3

Against ordinary opponents you would not have a bad time with the south and north cards. Patience or drastic action on the part of your pair will land you in six diamonds.

But when the opposition is in the master class an easy path to final contract is seldom lined with encouraging cheers. They throw all kinds of blocks in your way.

In this case, opponents would keep ducking in and out of your way with hearts and clubs and spades in their bidding. And when you reached six diamonds they would run against you with six hearts.

It actually happened that way when this deal came up. South had quite a problem when opponents tried to sacrifice with a bid of six hearts. Should he double or what?

His choice is tough. A top may help win the match; a bottom almost kicks the title overboard. Should he double for penalty points? Or should he bid six no-trump?

Both sides were vulnerable at the time. A set of six tricks doubled would down the east-west pair 1700 points. This is more than the number of points to be gained by making a small slam.

If east-west go down only five tricks doubled, a bid of six no-trump that is made would pay more. On the other hand there is no advance guarantee that six no-trump will be made.

This business of sacrificing is an art that master players throw their heart into. Let me tell you what happened at one table. Meantime, could you make six no-trump against a heart lead from east?

Sport in Brief

(By The Canadian Press)

Switzerland's National Hockey team defeated Canada, the Olympic champion, 5-4 last night in Zurich.

The Swiss took a 2-0 lead in the first period. The Canadians came back with a pair in the middle period to tie the score but the Swiss outscored the Canadians 3-2 in the finale to take the decision.

Sully Sullivan scored twice for the Canadians and Bob Watt and Englebert Miller once each.

The University of Montreal Carabins, who clinched the Senior Intercollegiate Hockey Union championship last weekend, closed out their 1951-52 schedule last night by hammering the last-place McGill Redmen 7-3 in Montreal.

Dick Savitt, United States indoor champion, edged Budge Patty 9-7, 8-6 yesterday to win the Kingston International tennis tournament in Kingston, Jamaica. Mrs. Betty Rosenquest Pratt of Kingston, defeated Althea Gibson of New York, 6-2, 6-4 to win the women's title.

Rocky Marciano, one of the leading contenders for Jersey Joe Walcott's world heavyweight crown, said yesterday in an interview in Montreal that he would like to get a title shot right away, although there aren't any bouts lined up for him at the moment. Asked if he would like to fight Clarence Henry who is being bracketed as a possible future champion, Marciano replied: "I'll fight him or anybody else."

After 33 years of consecutive operation, Toronto's only senior A softball league, the Beaches Major Fastball League has suspended operations for one year. Only one team was officially entered for 1952.

SEIZE 6,000,000 BOOKS

Bonn, March 5 — (AP) — East Germany's communist rulers have seized an estimated 6,000,000 books in a sweeping purge to root out western literature, West German officials said today. They have replaced the banned volumes on the shelves of schools, libraries and book stores chiefly with communist political literature — Stalin, Lenin, Marx, Engels and some international leftists.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, March 5 (AP) — Here's one leading man who admits that bobbysoxers aren't his main following. What's more, he's glad of it.

The actor is Robert Ryan, Chicago-born former boxer and marine.

He is good looking in a rugged sort of way but he readily confesses that the teen-age fans don't blow their tops over him.

"One reason is that I have never played the kind of role that would make the kids mad for me," he said. "The sole exception was the picture in which I got my first big break — 'Tender Comrade', opposite Ginger Rogers. That was during the war.

Saved by Marines

"I probably would have got typed in that category, because the studio had four or five scripts lined up for me and they tended in that direction. But luckily I was saved by going into the marines.

"It was actually a good break for my career.

"The kids drop their idols when someone new comes along — an actor who bases his career on them alone finds himself in trouble when they lose interest in him."

Ryan's theory seems to have been borne out in recent Hollywood history. Frank Sinatra evoked the most hysterical response from the bobbysockers, and his later career has failed to maintain the momentum of the war years. Van Johnson was dropped like a hot spud when the youngsters were disenchanted with his marriage. His studio had to cast him in dramatic roles instead of relying on his romantic appeal.

Ryan said that the bulk of his fan mail comes from adults. "Most of the letters are from intelligent people," he said. "That's the kind of a response that makes the actor think he's doing a good job."

The city appeared to be returning to normal.

Noboru Saito, national rural police chief, told parliament that casualties from the quake and tidal wave were small considering the quake was one of the most severe in the world in the 20th century. He credited Japan's tidal-wave alert system with holding down casualties. Within 15 minutes of the quake all coastal villages were warned of the impending tidal waves.

The quake, officially named "earthquake off Tokachi" was centred 43 miles off Hokkaido and some 60 miles below the ocean's surface.

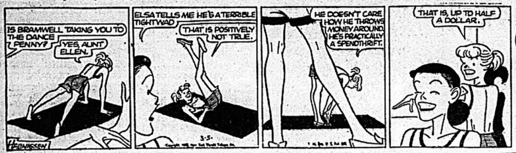
PENNY — By Harry Haenigsen



IS BRAMWELL TAKING YOU TO THE DANCE PENNY?
YES AUNT ELLEN.
ELSA TELLS ME HE'S A TERRIBLE TIGHTWAD
THAT IS POSITIVELY NOT TRUE.
HE DOESN'T CARE HOW HE THROWS MONEY AROUND. HE'S PRACTICALLY A SPENDTHRIFT.
THAT IS, UP TO HALF A DOLLAR.
HAENIGSEN

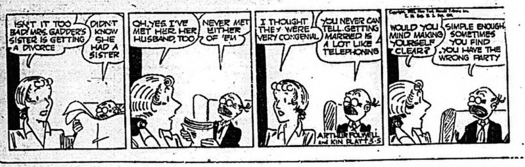
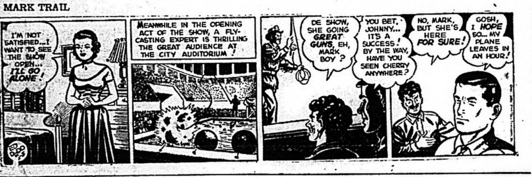
MR. AND MRS. — By Arthur Folwell and Ellison Hoover



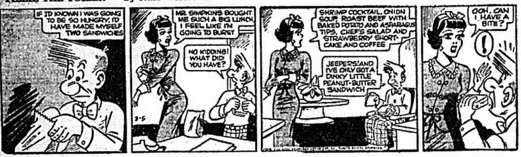
ISN'T IT TOO BAD! MRS. GADDER'S SISTER IS GETTING A DIVORCE
DIDN'T KNOW SHE HAD A SISTER
OH, YES I'VE MET HER. HER HUSBAND, TOO
NEVER MET EITHER OF 'EM
I THOUGHT THEY WERE VERY CONGENIAL
YOU NEVER CAN TELL. GETTING MARRIED IS A LOT LIKE TELEPHONING
WOULD YOU MIND MAKING YOURSELF CLEAR?
SIMPLE ENOUGH. SOMETIMES YOU FIND YOU HAVE THE WRONG PARTY
ARTHUR FOLWELL and KIN PLATT 3-5

MARK TRAIL



I'M NOT SATISFIED... I WANT TO SEE THE SHOW OPEN... I'LL GO ALONE!
MEANWHILE IN THE OPENING ACT OF THE SHOW, A FLY-CASTING EXPERT IS THRILLING THE GREAT AUDIENCE AT THE CITY AUDITORIUM!
DE SHOW, SHE GOING GREAT GUNS, EH, MARK BOY?
YOU BET, JOHNNY... IT'S A SUCCESS! BY THE WAY, HAVE YOU SEEN CHERRY ANYWHERE?
NO, MARK, BUT SHE'S HERE FOR SURE!
GOSH, I HOPE SO... MY PLANE LEAVES IN AN HOUR!
ED DODD 3-5

TILLIE THE TOILER — By Russ Westover



IF I'D KNOWN I WAS GOING TO BE SO HUNGRY, I'D HAVE MADE MYSELF TWO SANDWICHES
MR. SIMPKINS BOUGHT ME SUCH A BIG LUNCH I FEEL LIKE I'M GOING TO BURST
NO KIDDING! WHAT DID YOU HAVE?
SHRIMP COCKTAIL, ONION SOUP, ROAST BEEF WITH BAKED POTATO AND ASPARAGUS TIPS, CHEF'S SALAD AND STRAWBERRY SHORT-CAKE AND COFFEE
JEEPERS! AND I'VE ONLY GOT A DINKY LITTLE PEANUT-BUTTER SANDWICH
OOH, CAN I HAVE A BITE?

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is according to the stars.

For Thursday, March 6

March 21 to April 20—(Aries)—Use that fine energy, manifest the highest desires to get at the root of your affairs and — you will achieve much. General business, travel professional undertakings favored.

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus)—Your stars' aspects govern the unusual today. It will really be your will and smart attitude that will pay most. Little you clever folks cannot do, i. e., when you set your mind to it. Let's go!

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—Be slow-to-be-sure in important and personal matters. You chafe at being in restricted position, but can overcome this if you strike out sanely with your natural gifts, well formed ideas.

June 22 to July 23—(Cancer)—Strong planetary configurations to further best efforts. Selling, scientific endeavors, engineering, contracting, and some personal activities have right of way. Control emotions.

July 24 to August 22—(Leo)—Take care not to hurry or do a careless job. Concentrate on essentials. What you learn from experience will click best.

August 23 to September 23—(Virgo)—Encouraging rays most of day. Plan each move with care; be alert to new ideas, opportunities. Think systematically before you start. Heart interests favored only in their turn.

September 24 to October 23—(Libra)—Build for tomorrow as well as asking your gains today. Help the other fellow in his problems, we some day need his or her help. To live and let live is a wonderful accomplishment.

October 24 to November 22—(Scorpio) — Encouraging aspects abound. On the beam! Ready to take advantage of this fine period. Aim for the best in business, personal affairs. Appreciate your good fortune.

November 23 to December 22—(Sagittarius)—Another fine day, much like Scorpio's. Take up the important issues first; be keen as to how far you can go and stop at right time. Don't over-reach!

December 23 to January 21—(Capricorn)—Move along at even pace, take careful look at how your neighbor is doing. Strive to be well informed. Day does favor worthy endeavors; and romance, family affairs.

January 22 to February 20—(Aquarius) — Pull in reins a bit. Don't act hastily or you may have to retract, regret. Concentrate on urgent routine, household duties, religious matters. Things gradually clear for better action.

February 21 to March 20—(Pisces)—Hop on the band wagon of whatever honorable opportunity presents itself. May not be wholly auspicious period but there are many small advantages to be built up. Better half a loaf!

YOU BORN TODAY: Like things of beauty, nature and lifes' great but simple things. Honest in intent, and seldom expect to find dishonest persons. When you do, you are truly disappointed. Are generous, give of your assets freely, often to extreme. At times may be misunderstood. But we all are! Free yourself from any attitude that bespeaks discouragement. Have fresh confidence daily; do things more and more on your own, thus train yourself for the bigger things your talents deserve. Stay alert, you are likely to be absent-minded, inattentive Birthdate of: Michelangelo, Florentine artist; Gen. Philip Sheridan, famous cavalry leader, Civil War.

THE CORPORATION OF THE CITY OF BELLEVILLE

By-law Number 6324

A BY-LAW TO REGULATE THE CLOSING OF BARBERS' SHOPS IN THE CORPORATION OF THE CITY OF BELLEVILLE.

WHEREAS it is deemed expedient by the Council of The Corporation of the City of Belleville, pursuant to the powers vested in it by Section 83 (3) of The Factory, Shop and Office Building Act, R.S.O. 1950, Chapter 126 to regulate the hours of closing of barbers' shops within The Corporation of the City of Belleville.

THEREFORE, BE IT ENACTED BY THE MUNICIPAL COUNCIL OF THE CORPORATION OF THE CITY OF BELLEVILLE AS FOLLOWS:

1. All barbers' shops within the Municipal Corporation of the City of Belleville in accordance with the Factory, Shop and Office Building Act as herein recited, shall be closed and remain closed during the hours between seven of the clock in the afternoon of Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays and five of the clock in the forenoon of the next following day throughout the year; and between twelve o'clock noon on Wednesdays, and five of the clock in the forenoon of the next following day throughout the year, and between seven of the clock in the afternoon of Saturdays and five of the clock in the forenoon of the next following day throughout the year.

2. Any occupier of a barber shop within the City of Belleville refusing to close and keep closed the barber shop which he occupies and in which such business is carried on at and after the hours named for the closing thereof on each day on which the same is hereby required to be closed according to the true intent and meaning of the said Act and of this by-law shall, on conviction thereof, be liable to the penalties provided for in the Municipal Act of 1950, R.S.O. Chapter 243, Section 492 (1) that is to say shall be liable to a penalty of not more than $50.00 exclusive of costs for each conviction under the by-law and every such penalty shall be recoverable under The Summary's Conviction Act.

3. This by-law shall come into force and take effect on and after the 12th of March, 1952.

Read a first time this 3rd day of March, 1952.

Read a second time this 3rd day of March, 1952.

Read a third time and finally passed this 3rd day of March, 1952.

A. McLEAN HAIG,
Mayor.

J. WILFRED HOLMES,
Clerk.

I HEREBY CERTIFY the above a true copy of By-law regulating the hours of closing of Barber Shops passed by the Municipal Council of the City of Belleville in compliance with a petition presented by the required number of operators of Shops as provided by Provincial Statutes.

New Wonder Drug Deemed Big Anti-Tuberculosis Weapon By Many Medical Authorities

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE

New York (AP) — How good is the new "wonder drug" for tuberculosis?

Some doctor call it "the best thing yet" against T.B. Others say "at least as good as streptomycin." Another, "this is no magic bullet."

They can't say more because this pill is too new.

From these doctors, here are the facts and the unknowns:

Facts Cited.

Fact 1: You can't get the drug yet. The United States food and drug administration must first approve it for general use, on safety and effect. That may come by May or June. Till then, only a few doctors can get it for watchful tests on humans.

Fact 2: When and if approved, it will be cheap and abundant. The drug, isonicotinic acid, is being made by two drug houses, which found it separately. They gave it different names, rimifon and nydrazid.

Fact 3: It kills TB germs in test-tubes and animals; it hits just TB germs.

Fact 4: More than 200 sick persons have had it so far. Many quickly felt better. High fevers vanished, they gained 10 to 30 pounds, coughs decreased or even disappeared, vitality returned.

In some, no TB germs could be found recently in their sputum, by looking with a microscope. X-rays indicated that lung holes or cavities got smaller in a few patients.

All were advanced cases. Now, patients with milder cases are getting the drug, and it may do them even more good.

Fact 5: No matter how good it is, it won't wipe out TB overnight, won't abolish the need for TB hospitals, or the need for finding thousands of people who don't know they have TB. Bed rest, especially away from home to prevent spreading this infection, will still be important, as will good diet, other drugs, and surgery. It takes time to heal and repair lungs ravaged by the TB bug.

Fact 6: A warning, from Dr. J. Maxwell Chamberlain of Bellevue Hospital. Don't, he advised, postpone any scheduled operation for TB in hopes the new drug will make it unnecessary.

Many Unknowns

There's not yet the kind of proof of cure that the doctors want. This leads to the unknowns:

Unknown 1: Did the drug kill off most, or even all ,the germs in the patients who show the best signs of it?

Unknown 2: What will happen when people stop taking the drug daily? Will the disease flare up again?

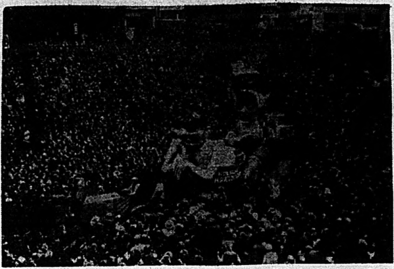
Unknown 3: Will TB bugs become resistant to the new drug, as they do with streptomycin?

Unknown 4: Will there be any bad effects? No serious ones have shown yet.

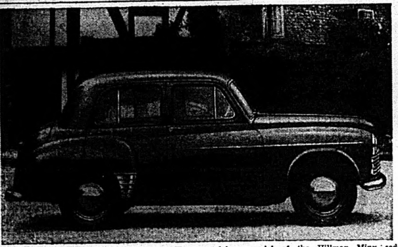
Unknown 5: What did the drug really do in human bodies?

To sum up: Here's something that looks hopeful. Time and study hold the keys to how good.

Germany Forgets Its Troubles in Carnival Time



West Germany celebrated carnival time with gaiety seldom equalled even in pre-war Germany. Stores closed, children were released from school and cities and towns staged plays and parades. This is Cologne at the height of the carnival with some of the 150 huge floats that took part in the parade proceeding at snails pace through the crowded streets. — Central Press Canadian.



HILLMAN MINX DELUXE SEDAN. — The new deluxe model of the Hillman Minx sedan combines many improvements including chrome strips and steel stone guards on rear fenders which give the car a sleeker and more streamlined appearance, together with engine modifications designed to increase both performance and safety. The unitary construction of the Hillman Minx is designed to provide maximum strength and safety with minimum weight. The body and the chassis are welded into one integral structure, free from distortion. The popular convertible is also available in the new deluxe version.

French Having Hard Time In Indo-China

Hanoi, Indo-China, March 5—(AP)—It is beginning to look hopeless for French forces in Indo-China trying to stem the tide of communism in Southeast Asia.

After six years of war against Ho Chi Minh's Vietminh, the French have failed to force a battle of decision—and instead of winning territory they are gradually losing more.

Despite United States military aid valued at $500,000,000 since July, 1950, the French say they need more help to push the war against the guerrillas to a conclusion.

Jean Letourneau, French Minister for the three associated states of Indo-China—Viet Nam, Laos and Cambodia — declared that it is impossible to destroy the Vietminh in battle because no front exists and "you need a front."

Quantities of war supplies are pouring in for the Vietminh forces from communist China.

The French admit they couldn't hold a combined Vietminh-Red Chinese assault for long. Even if red Chinese intervention brought swift retaliatory action by the United Nations, the help would probably come too late to save the Red River Delta, which appears to be the key to all Indo-China, and possibly the rest of Southeast Asia.

SHORTAGE INCREASES

Toronto, March 5 (CP)—Education Minister Dunlop said last night that the shortage of teachers and classrooms is increasing at a rate of 1,000 a year. He told a board of trade dinner meeting that the shortage was the principal problem confronting education in Ontario. He urged parents, church officials and businessmen to take an interest in education.

Chairman in No Hurry to Have Committee Act

Washington, March 5 (AP) — Chairman Tom Connally (Dem. Tex.) of the United States senate foreign relations committee said today he is "in no hurry" to have the committee act on legislation to authorize the St. Lawrence seaway.

The committee last Friday completed a week-long hearing on the proposal to join with Canada in building the seaway and power project. The seaway would open the Great Lakes to ocean shipping.

Committee members backing the proposal say they will force a committee vote if Connally fails to call it up for action.

Connally, who opposes the seaway, told a reporter "I am in no hurry" to get a committee decision, and added:

"But I will not obstruct it. The hearings will have to be printed first. After that, if they want the committee to act they can do it. Personally, I am against it."

Committee aides said printing of the hearing record would require up to two weeks.

Senator Charles Tobey, (Rep. N. H.), a committee member backing the project, told a reporter "I hope to get committee action within two weeks.

Senator Alexander Wiley (Rep. Wis.) said, "I think we will get it approved, but it will be very close."

Wiley said an attempt will be made to modify an amendment which would create a corporation to raise money for the seaway through sale of bonds. In this way, the U. S. government would not have to put up the funds.

The amendment, by Senator George Aiken (Rep. Vt.), would provide that the government guarantee payment of interest on the bonds. Wiley said it may be modified in committee to provide that interest payments be guaranteed only while the seaway is being constructed.

HIT HER OWN DOGS

Sudbury, March 5 (CP)—Mrs. Napoleon Thibeault, 59, of Alban, 35 miles southeast of here, tried to shoot a cat and hit her own "dogs." She was carrying the cat in one hand and a .22-calibre rifle in the other when the gun discharged and a slug went through her foot. Mrs. Thibeault is in hospital and the cat is still alive.

Tankers Collide

Norfolk, Va., March 5 (AP)—Two tankers, the Gulfglow and the Imperial Toronto, collided in Chesapeake Bay in dense fog shortly before noon today.

The Coast Guard reported no one was hurt and the tankers "made fast to each other" after the collision and were proceeding under their own power.

The Gulfglow lost both her anchors in the crash.

The collision occurred seven miles northeast of Smith Point, which is near the mouth of the Potomac River and some 50 miles north of Norfolk.

Nobody Loves Forever

By Margaretta Brucker

There is no spot in Akron where you can get a better picture of the population than at the municipal airport on Sunday afternoon. Cars of every conceivable make jam the parking places. Buses unload men with the grime of the factory still on their haggard faces. There are women carrying fretful babies and dragging by the hand, small, shabbily dressed children. There are girls. Girls in smart suits, girls in cheap sweaters, and shapeless slacks, girls with long manes of hair touching their shoulders.

There are others. Men in uniform, and men with discharge buttons in the lapels of ill-fitting ready made suits.

There are small boys wriggling in and out of the crowd, squealing with excitement and boasting of their knowledge as they identify every make of plane which wheels aloft.

Everyone is interested, excited, standing with upturned faces and eyes squinting against the blinding glare of the June sun.

Jessica Blake wedged tightly in the crowd which pressed close against the stout iron fence surrounding the airport. She, too, thrilled at the scene before her and caught the infection of excitement as she stood with her dark hair blowing about her thin cheeks and her black eyes aglow with interest.

Flying was wonderful, she thought as she stood shielding her eyes from the glare of the sun and watching a great twin-motor plane zoom in. Imagine being able to take off and in a few minutes be up there leaving this crowded rubber town behind you!

Soberly she reminded herself: But you can't escape, so why not enjoy this short reprieve from the drab everyday existence you must lead until Tom comes home?

She moved closer, taking advantage of a break in the crowd, and saw a station wagon wheel down the field and stop beside a plane warming up to take off. Army officers and other important looking personages approached the plane.

"Bound for Washington," exclaimed a man just behind Jessica.

"Mexican officials," said another voice. "They've been here on a tour of inspection."

"Akron can give them ideas," boasted the first. The other man laughed and the two went on to talk about the rubber centre and its important position in the postwar world.

Jessica listened idly, thinking how little she really knew or cared about this town where she lived. But I won't live here always, she told herself and suddenly remembered that in her absorption in the scene before her, she had completely lost track of the time. Lucy would be angry and justly so.

As she started to work her way back through the crowd, a huge man in a dirty sweat shirt gave her a violent shove which made her lose her balance. Another man tried to push him back and in another minute a general scuffle threatened. Then someone caught her arm in a firm hard grasp and helped her keep her balance.

A man whose voice she recognized as one of the two who had been talking about rubber said, "are you all right?"

He had swung her around and toward the fence and they stood close together and alone while the crowd still milled about behind them.

"Yes," she said breathlessly and oddly stirred by the admiring expression in the man's bright blue eyes as he continued to hold her arm. "Thanks, I was about to leave."

"Don't go yet. Look—" He indicated the speed with which the plane with its freight of important passengers shot down the runway. He explained just who the passengers were and although she knew that she should leave, Jessica lingered for a few minutes longer. For he had been kind, without his support she might have been thrown down and injured. While she listened she made excuses to herself for remaining, watching, laughing, exclaiming.

His eyes met hers from time to time and although he talked of commonplace things like planes and factories and rubber output, there was a spark of admiration in his glance which was disquietening. Admiration for her wind - blown dark hair and the softly curving lines of her slender figure under the suit which was three years old but had been a good suit and still bore the marks of a fine designer. The sun touched her cheeks and gave them color.

The admiration warmed her heart and restored a pride sadly shattered. Until this moment she had lost interest in her looks. Now what she read in a strange man's eyes restored her pride and she found herself eagerly receptive to his deep voice and his infectious smile.

He wasn't much taller than she. He had good shoulders. Tay Haydn's type, she decided. Sophisticated. He wore clothes well, good clothes; the tie knotted expertly under his hard brown chin never came from a department store counter. His smooth brown hair was ruffled by the strong west wind which swept across the airport.

She said "this is almost as exciting as the Derby," and realized that just for an instant she had been that carefree Jessica Gordon who had stood in a box at the Derby thrilled by a horse-race.

"Kentucky, aren't you?" he said "I thought I was right about the accent."

Just then there was a disturbance in the crowd behind them and a voice cried "Jessica, where are you?"

She turned and saw Lucy making her way toward them, Lucy angry and breathless and dragging Betsy by the hand. Betsy sobbing and digging her fists into her eyes, her cheeks a violent pink and her bonnet hanging by one string.

They stood together in a little huddle, Lucy and Jessica and the man, whose face was puzzled for a minute before he squatted down and held out his arms to Betsy. "Want to see?" he asked.

Betsy after one glance, dimpled and ran straight to him. He lifted her high onto his shoulder.

Lucy said "who—?"

"Just a man who was explaining the planes to me," Jessica said hurriedly.

"Well!" Lucy's voice spoke volumes. She tapped the ground impatiently with a small brown shoe. "What are you going to do now?" she demanded.

"Go home, of course," Jessica answered quietly.

The man turned and came toward them and set Betsy down. He said to Lucy "you have a charming little girl."

Lucy brushed a speck from her immaculate blue suit coat. There was a hint of malice in her tone. "But she isn't my little girl," she explained. "She's my brother's little girl. He's overseas and Betsy and her mother live with us."

She never looked once at Jessica and Jessica felt the color rise in her cheeks. She said hurriedly, "come, Betsy," and seized the child's hand and started to walk away without a backward glance.

She should have known he would not be easily discouraged. He followed her, with Lucy hastening ahead and Betsy dragging back until the three of them, the man and Jessica and Betsy, walked together toward the parking space.

He said "sorry you must rush off. I don't suppose—" His glance was uncertain.

"No." Jessica smiled but shook her head.

The man said hopefully "maybe some other time?"

She said "I'm sorry," and her glance told him that she was sorry, desperately sorry to seem abrupt and ungrateful for his kindness. He had given her the happiest few minutes she had had for over two years.

"Well, that's that." His eyes met hers and he asked bluntly "why not?"

Which was impudent, of course and yet . . .

Jessica looked up and saw Lucy coming toward them. Lucy was furious. She tried to seize Betsy's hand. The child shrieked and hid her face in Jessica's skirts and cried "Mummy! Mummy! Don't let Aunt Lucy take me."

The man's expression changed. "I didn't know—"

"Betsy is my little girl," said Jessica flatly.

There. He knew. She was a married woman with a two-year-old daughter, and not a gay young thing to be picked up for a mild flirtation. She said "goodbye," and he bowed politely and walked away and left her. There was a note of finality about the whole affair which there shouldn't have been if Lucy had not behaved so abominably. An awkward ending to a casual meeting which had given her release from the monotony of the life she led with Lucy and her mother.

They climbed into the car and a few minutes later were whirling down the highway toward town. Although she said nothing, Jessica raged inwardly at Lucy's set expression of disapproval.

And then as quickly as her anger rose, it cooled and she remembered how kind and generous Lucy had been during those hard two years just gone. The girl should not be blamed for having narrow views which were only a reflection of those held by her mother. Lucy could be so darned attractive if she chose, thought Jessica impatiently. And she herself had been to blame for wandering off this afternoon and leaving Lucy to take care of Betsy.

Betsy interrupted her thought. "Where's mans?" she demanded.

"Gone."

"All gone?"

Jessica smiled. Lucy's expression was so frankly one of utter disgust. She said coaxingly "why not say what you think, Lu?"

Lucy stiffened. "How can you be so silly?"

The remark set off a spark of anger. "How can you be such a stiff-necked old maid, Lucy? Even Betsy who is only a baby, accepted the situation at its real value. The man prevented a big brute from knocking me down and I saw no reason to snub him for his help."

"He was definitely interested in you," said Lucy primly.

"Why not? At least he understands now that I'm a married woman with a child and will have no desire to continue the acquaintance. After all, Lu," said Jessica trying to introduce a light note into a conversation which might lead to another difference, "marriage doesn't close all the gates and bar all the doors."

"It should." Lucy manoeuvred the car swiftly and capably through a knot of traffic. They turned a corner and sped down a quiet street lined with old houses. "You were the luckiest girl in the whole world to marry Tom," she concluded "and I cannot understand—"

"Why Tom married me?"

"I didn't say that."

"But you and your mother puzzle over it every day of the year" said Jessica hotly. "I don't understand why he married me either, to be frank about it, I don't understand why I married him." Then, in response to Lucy's horrified glance "why not be honest since we're on the subject? We were rash and impulsive and rushed into marriage with no idea of the consequences— like Betsy." She smiled and affectionately smoothed the baby's blond curls spread out on her knees. "When Tom comes home we shall have to work out something for our future, otherwise—"

"Tom's the best man in the world."

"That doesn't necessarily mean that he's an understanding husband."

She regretted the remark a minute later. It was useless to argue with Lucy or her mother about Tom's merits. They both worshipped him blindly.

Packing Industry Faced With Layoffs Due to Embargoes

Bill to Loosen Federal Purse Passed Quickly

Ottawa, March 6 (CP) —The Commons today got down to other business but foot-and-mouth disease among Saskatchewan livestock and the government's plans to help farmers injured by it still were the centre of attention.

The Commons yesterday gave third reading and sent to the Senate the government's bill to loosen the federal purse strings for those whose herds must be destroyed to check foot-and-mouth disease.

The bill went through the Commons in a fast three days. But in that time the results of the outbreak of the disease began to appear among interests other than the farmers who will receive federal aid.

The packing industry was faced with layoffs if the movement of livestock remained in a state of near-paralysis as a result of interprovincial and international embargoes.

The interprovincial bans by British Columbia, Manitoba, Quebec and Nova Scotia on livestock and meats will be one of the main topics discussed at a forthcoming Dominion-Provincial conference.

During debate on the government's measures for aid to the farmers, Agriculture Minister Gardiner announced that such a conference will be held at the earliest possible moment. He indicated he felt the provincial bans were unconstitutional.

Factor in Layoffs

The United States embargo on livestock, hay and straw remained in force. That was a factor in the threatened layoffs in the packing industry.

Union officials in Calgary estimated that by the middle of next week 1,500 meat packing employees will be out of work out of the 7,000 in Western Canada.

The forecast layoffs of 750 in Winnipeg, 400 in Edmonton, 255 in southern Saskatchewan and 150 in Calgary. Already 100 were out of work in Toronto.

These sections of the industry would not come under the government's expanded aid to the industry. The legislation provides for "fair and reasonable" compensation to farmers whose livestock, buildings and crops are destroyed in stamping out the easily-spread disease.

The compensation will apply only to farmers within the 50-square-mile quarantined-area around Regina.

Markets Unsettled

If the various embargoes result in surplus of meat in Canada, Agriculture Minister Gardiner promised that every effort will be made to sell either in the United Kingdom or elsewhere.

Livestock markets continued unsettled. Quebec's controls on livestock import caused the Montreal livestock to come to a virtual standstill. At Toronto, prices were down from $50 to $125 dollars a head.

Sudbury Priest Three Years Under House Arrest

Hong Kong, March 6. (Reuters) —Rev. Arthur Berube of Sudbury, Ont., was deported from China yesterday after three years under house arrest by the communist government, a Roman Catholic spokesman said today.

Father Berube did not face public trial but was deported by police order, the spokesman said.

He reported that local communist authorities lived with Berube in his house at Suchow, Kiangsu province, barring him from any contact with the outside world. The priest lived in one room and was prevented from holding services or seeing any of his parishioners.

He had not suffered except from nervous tension, the spokesman said.

Two Belgian priests, deported after being held in jail, arrived here with the Canadian. They were Revs. Jules Vangeluwe of Ypres, West Flanders, and Paul Lannio of Boom, Antwerp. Vangeluwe was imprisoned for 4 1-2 months and Lannio for five months at Kalgan, Manchuria.

Both were arrested at Wiwantze, Mongolio, on charges of being connected with the Roman Catholic Legion of Mary, outlawed by the communists as a "reactionary" organization. They also were deported by police order.

Woman Lawyer Uses her Wits To Capture Man

Port Washington, N. Y., March 6—(AP)—A woman lawyer — plucky, shrewd and a good screamer—defied a knife-toting robber last night and had him arrested

With a 10-inch blade pressed against her back, Mrs. Carolyn B. Dissosway was forced to drive the robber toward New York City in her car after he had robbed her of $57 in her home.

But they didn't have to go far.

Mrs. Dissosway remembered seeing a policeman on the street on her way home. She followed a route that took her past the same spot. When she saw the policeman still there, she pulled to the curb and screamed.

The policeman seized the man, booked as Jodie Brown, 24.

600 Blankets And Rations Dropped by Planes

Tokyo, March 6 (AP) —United States Air Force planes today dropped blankets and food to shivering victims of Tuesday's earthquake and tidal wave. Repair crews began work on shattered rail and communications lines.

Extreme cold and driving snowstorms followed the quake.

An air force field unit called for air drop of 600 blankets and army field rations for 1,871 homeless in the village of Kiritappu, some 25 miles south of the Russian-held Kuriles. The field unit said 309 homes were destroyed and three persons killed in the tiny village.

Kiritappu, on the east coast, and the inland village of Urahoro, apparently were the hardest hit on Japan's northern Hokkaido Island.

Government officials on Hokkaido said 21 persons were killed. U.S. army authorities estimated 31 died.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Mar. 6—(CP)—Synopsis: The predominant feature on today's weather map is an extensive area of high pressure over northwestern Ontario. This is expected to remain nearly stationary today and Friday and keep sunny skies and cold weather over all forecast regions.

BEVAN FOLLOWERS DEFY ATTLEE IN HOUSE VOTES

Action May Split Party Wide Open

London, March 6 — (AP) — Worried Socialist leaders tried to decide at an emergency meeting today how to curb rambunctious Aneurin Bevan and keep him from splitting the Labor party wide open.

Bevan, 54-year-old left-winger who wants to be prime minister if Britain has another Socialist government, led 56 other Labor members in defiance of party leader Clement Attlee's voting instructions in the House of Commons last night.

Their defection let Winston Churchill's Conservative government beat down a Labor "no confidence" motion by a startling 95-vote majority instead of the 30 or so votes usual on such ballots.

Most members of parliament agreed that even though Attlee still controls three-fourths of his party's members in the House of Commons, he must do something quickly or his authority as party leader is gone. They thought, though, any disciplinary action would stop short of expulsion of Bevan and his 56 followers from the party.

Attlee backed by more than 200 other Labor members of the House, ordered all Socialist members to vote for the Labor amendment expressing lack of confidence in the ability of the Churchill government to carry out the arms program. He told them to abstain from voting on a government motion approving its handling of the plan.

Reverse Instructions

Bevan and his followers, who think the arms program is too big, and some Socialist members who oppose rearmament on pacifist grounds, did just the reverse.

The Socialist amendment was rejected 219-341, with the Bevan group abstaining. As Attlee and his followers abstained, the Bevanites voted against the government motion, which carried 313-155.

The Conservative Daily Mail compared it to "the night in 1940 when Neville Chamberlain was forced out of the leadership of the Conservative party and the premiership because of the large abstentions of his normal supporters."

The pro-Labor Daily Herald expressed its alarm at the party situation in an unusual front-page editorial.

"We must tell Bevan and his supporters they have set out on a course which will harm the country and imperil the future of the Labor movement," the paper said.

In the debate preceding the vote, Churchill admitted that the defence program, which the Labor government originated a year ago, is running a year behind schedule. He blamed this in part on a lag in United States aid, but said he pinned his hopes for peace in the meanwhile on a "rapidly growing" U. S. stockpile of atom bombs.

RESUME RELATIONS

Karachi, March 6 — (AP)— A reliable source said yesterday the Pakistan government has decided to resume diplomatic relations on the ambassadorial level with Afghanistan. Pakistan recalled her ambassador in Kabul three years ago over a border dispute which has never been settled.

Supra-National Authority Needed to Protect Mankind Against A-Bomb Says Einstein

Ottawa, March 6. (CP)—Albert Einstein has renewed a plea for a supra-national authority, equipped with strong executive power, to protect mankind against the atom bomb.

The world-famous mathematician, author of the involved theory of relativity which contributed towards development of the bomb, says the danger that threatens mankind is that no one appears prepared to act to organize the international authority.

Each waits "idly" for someone else to make the move. If the goal is not reached in time, the fault will lie with "each one of us", he said.

The 72-year-old scientist touched briefly on the atomic future in a 300-word message to Canadians on Canadian Education Week. The message was sent from his home at Princeton, N.J., at the request of 12 organizations sponsoring the week.

Living in retirement, the professor emeritus at the Princeton School for advanced studies said:

"The discovery of nuclear chain reactions need not bring about the destruction of mankind, any more than did the discovery of matches. We only must do everything in our power to safeguard against its abuse.

"In the present stage of technical development, only a supra-national organization, equipped with a sufficiently strong executive power, can protect us.

Shall Find Strength

"Once we have understood that, we shall find the strength for the sacrifices necessary to ensure the future of mankind. Each one of us would be at fault if the goal were not reached in time. There is the danger that everyone waits idly for others to act in his stead."

A staunch believer in world government, Einstein suggested that the traditions and institutions which the peoples of the world should adopt should be the ones that make them happy. It didn't matter where they originated.

"In my opinion," he said, "it is not reasonable to even talk of 'our way of life' or that of the Russians.

"In both cases we are dealing with a collection of traditions and customs which do not form an organic whole.

"It certainly makes more sense to ask what institutions and traditions are harmful, and which are useful to human beings: which make life happier, or more painful.

"We then must endeavor to adopt what ever appears best—irrespective of whether, at present, we find it realized at home or somewhere else."

Prime Minister, L. B. Pearson Nominated for Peace Prize

Oslo, March 6—(CP)—Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent and L. B. Pearson, Canada's External Affairs Minister, are among 27 individuals nominated for the 1952 Nobel peace prize, the Nobel committee announced today.

Winner of the prize last year was Leon Johhaux, the anti-communist French labor leader.

The list of nominees included five Americans. They are:

Frank Buchman, noted for his work with the Oxford Group and Moral Rearmament; Ewing Cockrell, Warrensburg, Mo., jurist; Raphael Lemkin, Yale University, an authority on international law and the man who coined the word genocide for race murder; James Shotwell, historian and former president of the Carnegie endowment for international peace, and Clarence Streit, advocate of United States union with Britain.

Sir Benegal N. Rau, the Indian diplomat, and President Miguel Aleman Valdes of Mexico were among the others who will be considered for the award, usually made in the fall.

Still others whose names were sent to the special committee of the Norwegian parliament for consideration are Carlos P. Romulo, now the Philippine ambassador to the United States, and Prof. Albert Schweitzer, the German medical philosopher for his missionary work in Africa.

Will Provide For Money

The award, worth 171,134 Swedish kroner ($33,000), will be presented in Oslo, Dec. 10, birthday of Dr. Alfred Nobel, Swedish inventor of dynamite, whose will provided the money for the award.

Under the terms of the Nobel will, candidates for the award may be nominated by any one of the following.

Governments of countries; members of the Norwegian Nobel committee; professors of universities in philosophy, economy or current history; institutions or individuals previously awarded the prize; and several international organizations. There normally is no announcement of just which of these nominated the individual candidates until after the award is made.

The awards are made to those judged to have served humanity best during the last year in medicine, chemistry, physics, literature and the effort for peace.

Swedish institutions make all the awards except that for peace, which is made by a committee of five persons elected by the Norwegian parliament.

No Canadian Has Won

No Canadian has won the peace prize, but other Nobel awards have been made to Canadians.

Sir Frederick Banting and Dr. J. J. R. MacLeod shared the Nobel prize for medicine in 1923 for their discovery of the insulin treatment for diabetes. Banting, later knighted for his work, was killed in a Newfoundland plane crash in 1941.

First Sealing Ships Sail for Ice Fields to Gather Season's Catch

St. John's, Nfld., March 6 (CP) —Ships' whistles echoing from the hills around the snug harbor of St. John's today will herald the sailing of the first sealing ships to the ice fields in Gulf of St. Lawrence and the northeast coast of Newfoundland and Labrador.

Twenty-seven ships from Newfoundland, Norway and the French Island of St. Pierre, slightly larger than last year's fleet, will prowl the Arctic ice floes.

The season opened Tuesday in the gulf and opens March 10 along the north shores of Newfoundland and Labrador.

Top prizes of hardy sealers who usually club their prey to death, are the newborn whitecoats whose pelts bring $10 a hundredweight for young hoods and $9 for young harps. Lower rates, the same as last year, are paid for older pelts.

The higher-priced hood has a mottled gray and black pelt with a hood-like growth on the neck that puffs up in the adult male when he becomes angry. The harp is named from a distinctive marking on its gray fur which assumes the shape of a harp when the pelt is split and spread.

Sealing crews began signing articles yesterday. Their wage for voyages lasting from six to eight weeks depends on whether their ship gets a good catch. Crews get as high as $300 each, or as little as $70.

Sealing today is a far cry from the days when chunky brigs and barquentines sailed from St. John's through channels cut by hand in the thick harbor ice. Now, in milder winters, the sealers are seldom trapped in their home ports by ice before the season begins.

Ice is the main danger of the hunt, claiming a ship nearly every year.

In the old days the hunt depended on a skipper's skill—or luck. Today, ships are equipped with wireless or radio telephone. A spotting plane, chartered jointly by the owners of the ships probes ice-fields and reports to the owners. Reports from planes are relayed to ships.

$250,000 Fire Loss at Barrie, Flour Mill Burns

Barrie, Ont., March 6. (CP)—The Barrie flour mill was destroyed in an early-morning fire today. Damage was estimated at $250,000.

The mill's complete stock of wheat and flour, together with all company records, were burned. The Barrie volunteer fire department prevented the blaze from spreading to neighboring buildings although six families were evacuated from a nearby apartment block as a precautionary measure.

Canadian National Railways employees moved several box cars away from the mill to safety.

The building is owned by M. F. Beach and Sons.

Another Red MIG Is Destroyed In Air Battle

Seoul, Korea, March 6 (AP) — United States Sabre jets destroyed a communist MIG and damaged another today in a 10-minute battle. The dogfight ranged as far south as the North Korean capital, Pyongyang, just 70 miles north of parallel 38.

Capt. Henry Frazier was credited with shooting down the red jet in a fight between six Sabres and 22 MIGs. Col. Harrison Thyng, commander of the fourth wing, reported one MIG damaged.

Allied fighter-bombers cut communist rail lines in 92 places and destroyed or damaged 50 boxcars, the fifth air force said. Marine Corsair pilots reported destroying two communist tanks in attacks northeast of Pyongyang, apex city of the old communist Iron Triangle.

On the ground, hit-and-run Allied raiders killed 40 communists and wounded 30 west of the Mundung Valley in eastern Korea.

U.N. artillery and infantry pinched off a Chinese communist attack near the old Iron Triangle on the central front Thursday morning.

About 160 reds opened fire on an advanced U.N. position near the Kumhwa-Kumsong road about midnight. The reds were hurled back after a 75-minute fight.

The reds are showing increased interest in the road to Kumsong, battered former communist supply hub.

AIDES IN SERVICE

Oswego, N. Y., March 6 (AP)—Navigational aides on Lake Ontario went into service at this port last night, the earliest date in history. The Coast Guard said that ice conditions normally do not permit them to open the port until early April.

SUPPORT GIVEN BY ALL PARTIES TO POWER PLAN

Challies Says Ontario Can Save Money

Toronto, March 6 (CP) —Ontario Legislature yesterday started debate on two measures—supported by all parties—which will pave the way for Ontario to develop 2,200,000 horsepower of electricity from the St. Lawrence River in partnership with the federal government.

The debate moved into this session's first night sitting gave many members a chance to point out the effects the St. Lawrence seaway-power project will have on their ridings.

Hon. George H. Challies, vice-chairman of the Ontario Hydro Commission, said the power project to be shared with New York State, will save Ontario $30,000,000 a year over the cost of steam-generated power that will be needed after 1956.

He moved second reading of the two measures—one to ratify the Federal-Ontario partnership agreement made last December and the other to appoint the HEPC the province's agent to carry out the power project.

Mr. Challies said the cost of the plan would be $200,000,000 for power but it would be "a self-liquidating investment."

Premier Frost said that the "historic measures" before the House would prove that Canada can build the seaway-power project alone. All Canada asked of the United States was "not to stand in our way."

William Houck (L-Niagara Falls) said that "extremely powerful lobbies" in the United States are blocking the program but Canada "can move more rapidly in many ways than the United States."

New Debate On Margarine Looms in Senate

Ottawa, March 6. (CP)—A new debate on margarine is looming in the Senate.

Senator W. D. Euler (L—Ontario) yesterday moved in the Upper Chamber a bill to amend the Canada Dairy Products Act to allow the free movement of margarine in or out of any province. The measure was given first reading.

Interprovincial movement of margarine now is banned under the act, though its manufacture and sale is legal in all provinces except Quebec and Prince Edward Island.

Teen-Age Ring Broken

Detroit, March 6 — (CP) — Teen-age ring responsible for the theft of automobiles in Detroit, Ohio and Indiana has been broken up, police said today.

They said they arrested five youths when a 14-year-old girl told of participating with them in the theft of three cars.

They believed the youths responsible for a wave of thefts during the last two months. Dozens of automobiles were driven for a few hours and then abandoned.

Airman Says German War Criminal, Begging for Mercy Tried to Kill Him

Toronto, March 6. (CP)—A Canadian airman says a German war criminal now begging for mercy deliberately tried to kill him.

The Telegram, in a copyright story, today quotes Rudolph Anthony Roman, of Sudbury, Ont., wartime flying officer in the R.C.A.F., as saying Hans Neitz shot him while he held his hands in the air as a sign of surrender.

"I don't want to see him (Neitz) get away with this," Roman said. "He tried deliberately to murder me. He left me for dead.

"I made no attempt to escape. I was standing with my hands in the air seven or eight feet away from him when he deliberately shot to kill me."

Neitz, former German army cook, claims he had "no bad intentions" when he fired two shots into a Canadian airman he took prisoner in 1944.

Justice Minister Garson announced Feb. 25 that he is taking up with military authorities the Neitz appeal for parole. A group of German newspaper men discussed the case with Mr. Garson in Hannover recently.

The paper quotes Roman as saying it matters little to him whether Neitz is paroled.

However, he says he takes issue with the story told to win clemency for Neitz: that Neitz shot the Canadian when the latter tried to escape. The German newspaper men also said Neitz "rescued" two other Canadian airmen only the night before he shot Roman.

Roman denies he was attempting to escape.

"As for the story that Neitz rescued two Canadian airmen from drowning, that's a lot of nonsense. They were both members of my crew and one of them told me afterwards that his backside ached for weeks after Neitz had kicked him all the way from the place where he picked him up to the guardhouse where they confined him."

Two Toronto Police Officers Shot, Wounded

Checking Recent Robbery, Believed One Will Die

Toronto, March 6 — (CP) —Two police officers were shot and wounded today when they stopped a car believed involved in the $24,000 holdup Tuesday of a branch of the Bank of Montreal. The driver of the car shot them and then drove off.

The two are Detective-Sergeant Roy Perry and Detective-Sergeant Ed Tong. Tong is not expected to live.

The shooting occurred at the corner of Lansdowne Avenue and College Street in West Toronto.

The detectives in a cruiser chased a late model car and forced it to the curb.

As the officers walked toward the halted car, a shot was fired and both detectives were hit.

Police said later the car was stolen half an hour before the shooting. The licence number was broadcast and the detectives, when they stopped it, thought they were chasing only car thieves.

One suspect was described as 35 years old, five feet 10 inches tall, of slim build and wearing a grey fedora. He had a black moustache and horn-rimmed glasses.

The second man was 35 to 38 years of age, of heavy build, and had a full face. He wore a dark beige overcoat and a dark fedora.

Police said both men carried automatics.

Sgt. Tong's condition was reported as "very critical." The ambulance that took him to hospital had to leave another run just as a patient was being loaded into it.

Lord Tweedsmuir Mentioned As Next Appointee

London, March 6 (CP) — The Evening News says today Lord Tweedsmuir is being mentioned as likely to become the next Governor-General of New Zealand.

The News says the 41-year-old Conservative peer, son of a former governor-general of Canada, would be the "ideal man" to succeed Lord Freyberg, who retires in June.

"Despite the example set by the other Dominions in choosing local men to represent the Crown," the News says, "New Zealanders still prefer men from the old country."

Two Parties Decide to Vote Against Pinay

Paris, March 6. (CP)—French Socialists and Gaullists today decided to vote against right-wing Antoine Pinay as new "save-the-franc" premier, making his defeat in the Assembly tonight virtually certain.

In addition to his following from the middle-of-the-road parties, Pinay must have at least 30 votes from either Socialists or Gaullists before he can be invested as premier.

Earlier today he told the Assembly he would not increase taxes until effects of proposed control measures could be assessed.

The 1952 budget bill is 400,000,000,000 francs ($1,143,000,000) in deficit. Pinay said he would try to balance it by attacking tax evasion and cutting administration costs before asking higher taxes.

The Assembly was due to vote later today on his bid to be premier. If he is approved, then he must try to form a cabinet.

Premier Edgar Faure was tumbled out of office last Friday because the Assembly refused his demand for 15-per-cent higher taxes to pay for expanded rearmament.

Pinay told the Assembly he also would introduce a bill restricting the right to strike. Many parliamentary observers said the statement greatly weakened his chances of being approved as premier because it would probably cost him many leftist votes.

Pinay, 60, an Independent Conservative who was Transport Minister in Faure's cabinet, called for "a political truce" to permit solution of the country's grave financial crisis.

He said French financial obligations to foreign countries will be respected.

DARTS IN FRONT OF PASSING TRUCK, LEG IS BROKEN

Darting out in front of a delivery truck, six-year-old Isobel Mountaney, daughter of Mrs. I. Mountaney, 86 Station Street, suffered a broken leg Wednesday evening and was taken by ambulance to Belleville General Hospital. The leg was broken above the knee.

John Green, driver of Little's Hardware truck which struck the little girl, said the child had darted out from the north curb and due to the icy condition of the street he was unable to stop the car in time.

The girl was attended at the hospital by Dr. R. T. Potter.

H.W. Wakefield, Administrator Of Hospital, Dies

Harold W. Wakefield, administrator of the Belleville General Hospital, died suddenly at that institution of coronary thrombosis early this Thursday morning. He was found dead, slumped in his chair in his office, shortly after seven o'clock and was last seen about the hospital about three o'clock this morning.

Mr. Wakefield came to the hospital as Administrator three-and-one-half years ago from the staff of Toronto General Hospital. He had been on that staff for nearly 20 years and came from England to join the Banting Institute in research work. Since coming to the city, Mr. Wakefield has raised the hospital to a high point of efficiency and was well liked by patients, doctors and personnel of the institution.

He was born in England, 44 years ago, being the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Wakefield. Since coming to Belleville he has taken an active interest in all community work and a wide circle of friends will sincerely regret his death.

He was a member of Christ Church and fraternally was identified with Ionic Masonic Lodge in Toronto. He was a member of the Officers' Club in Toronto. Surviving are his wife, the former Alma Ransom, three daughters, Misses Margaret, Mary and Vicki at home, also three sisters and three brothers in England.

Resting at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, the funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this edition.

Search Rubble for More Montreal Fire Victims

Two women died and 300 persons were driven into the street in this theatre-apartment fire in Montreal. Shortly after the fire broke out a violent explosion almost ripped the roof off the theatre and the whole structure collapsed. Firemen reported several persons were seen shortly before on the roof and searched the ruins for bodies, expecting the death-toll may prove higher. — Central Press Canadian.

Trenton, Frankford, Batawa, Organized for Red Cross Drive

All around the "Red Cross" circuit of this district the wheels of organization are moving.

In Prince Edward where three efficient organizations are functioning under the honorary chairmanship of Mayor Harvey McFarland of Picton and in Hastings where seven campaign sub-centres are now in organization action, all pointing to the big day March 11th when the "blitz" drive for funds will take place.

Working quietly but efficiently are the three centres to the west of the district, Trenton, Frankford and Batawa.

All Working

In Trenton Police Chief Jack Taylor, a fellow with a heart as big as a house when it comes to matters of community betterment and welfare of his fellow "fellows", and Mr. Gordon Davis have surrounded themselves with a strong directorate and are pushing organization matters at a high speed.

In Batawa, the well-known Arthur Duncan, public relations official of the Batawa Shoe Company will see to it that nothing is left undone to canvass the "shoe village."

In Frankford Mr. Arnold Stickle is head of the village campaign committee and he like his colleagues is working tirelessly with his committee to help put the big night over.

Co-operation is By-word

General Chairman Alan Sprague said today that he is well satisfied with the way in which organization machinery is functioning. His sub-chairmen throughout the district are co-operating one hundred per cent with the parent body and all that remains is the co-operation of the general public on Mar. 11th to make the 1952 campaign of the Red Cross one of the most successful in history.

As has been mentioned before the district quota is $21,000. Of this amount the city of Belleville has been asked to contribute $13,000.

For general information, business sections in all centres will be canvassed on the morning of Tuesday, March 11th.

The residential "blitz" will take place during the evening the exact time of which will be announced later. In all centres police and fire departments are co-operating to the fullest extent with campaign committees to make "Blitz Day" an over-the-quota success.

Remember, your porchlight on Tuesday, March 11th will be the light of welcome to the Red Cross canvasser.

Drivers Awarded Various Prizes For Safe Driving

The employees and management of the Belleville branch of Direct-Winters Transport met on Tuesday evening for their annual safety meeting and the distribution of awards for safe driving during 1951.

The meeting was held in the Town Room of Lattimer's Drug Store and refreshments were served before the presentations were made.

As chairman of the meeting, R. H. Godden, the local manager, introduced James T. Keyes, Director of Safety for the Company, and his assistant, James Condari.

Mr. Keyes addressed the men and complimented them on their efforts toward safety during the past year.

Those receiving awards were: R. Belshaw, for 6 years without an accident, an automatic pop-up toaster; J. R. Downey, for 4 years, an electric shaver; N. C. Dafoe, for 3 years, a mantel radio; W. Denyes, E. Fitzgibbon, F. Heffernan and F. Elliott for 2 years each, received an electric kettle; V. Craig for 1 year, received a safe driver button.

The management of the company takes great pleasure in being able to make these awards for safe driving of their trucks by the employees, and to show their appreciation of the contribution these men have made toward safety on our highways and in our city.

Obituary

DR. JOHN GEORGE BURROWS

Ill for the past year, Dr. John George Burrows, died at his home, 179 William Street late Wednesday evening. He was born in Bath, 85 years ago, being the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Burrows and has resided in Belleville for the past four years following his retirement from practice.

Dr. Burrows graduated from Queen's University in 1891 and practised in Marlbank until 1934 when he moved to Tweed and was in that village for 14 years. He was a kindly man and made many friends in the county, who will sincerely regret his death.

He was a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church and fraternally was identified with Tamworth Masonic Lodge.

Surviving are his wife, the former Pearl Frizzell and two sons, Andrew and John of this city.

Resting at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, the funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this edition.

LATE DR. CLAIRE J. COUNTRYMAN

The funeral of Dr. Claire J. Countryman was held from his mother's residence, 217 John Street to Bridge Street United Church on Wednesday afternoon. Rev. Duncan McTavish conducted the service and spoke of the great ability of the deceased and expressed sympathy that one so young in years, capable of unusual ability and able to render valuable service to humanity should be taken. He stated that Dr. Countryman was needed in his home to guide and direct three small children but that death came to those young in years as well as the middle-aged and the aged and it was necessary to rely on the love of God for He doeth all things. We must carry on with the memory of one loved by all. A wealth of floral tributes testified to the esteem of the deceased.

Mr. McTavish conducted the committal in Belleville cemetery.

The bearers were W. Lips, N. E. Goodwin, D. Webber of Toronto, N. H. Watson, Ottawa, Dr. G. C. Caughey, Picton and Dr. J. H. Bateman, G. B. Hyde and Alan Sprague of this city.

MRS. MARY ELIZABETH DUPUIS
(Millbridge)

After a short illness, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Dupuis, Millbridge, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Tuesday evening. She was born in Pembroke 71 years ago, being the daughter of the late James and Mary McCreary. She has resided in Millbridge for the past two years but the greater part of her life in Kingston.

She was a member of the Sacred Heart of Mary Church in Madoc and surviving are her husband, Henry N. Dupuis. Her first husband Joseph Palmer, died in 1934, four daughters, Mrs. Charles (Stella) Henderson and Mrs. Fred (Pearl) Henderson of Millbridge, Mrs. M. (Evelyn) Fobert of Kingston, Mrs. Ferman (Margaret) Boulerue of Cobourg and one son, Stanley Palmer of Kingston.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this edition.

Action of Sidney, Frankford Will be Determining Factor On Building of New School

Whether or not the township of Sidney and the village of Frankford come into the Bay of Quinte High School Area will be a determining factor in both the construction and size of any new high school to be built in Belleville or immediate district.

This was made plain at a special meeting of high school board members with officials and interested ratepayers of the above two municipalities held in the collegiate library Wednesday evening, to discuss their possible entry into the area.

Chairman of the board, Harold Seldon, pointed out that the limit of accommodation at the local collegiate had been reached and if students from Sidney and Frankford were, to continue to attend additional accommodation was imperative.

"Already", he said, "we are considering establishment of three classes in the collegiate auditorium and we would even consider renting space outside the collegiate."

Will Not Sanction Grants

He pointed out, however, that the Department of Education would not sanction grants for any new high school to be attended by students, whose parents were not members of the area, or with whom a long term agreement had been reached by the board.

District high school inspector George Gray said a long term agreement with municipalities outside the area was not feasible as the agreement was not binding.

Presently included in the high school area is the city of Belleville and the townships of Thurlow, Tyendinaga and Ameliasburg.

Not Holding Club

Chairman Seldon made it plain the board was not holding a club over the heads of people in Sidney township in trying to force them to join the high school area. Neither did the board like the idea of possibly having to exclude township students from the collegiate.

Frankford village is ready to enter the School area but due to the fact the village boundaries do not touch the area this was impossible. In the words of Frankford village reeve George Spencer, his village was "isolated".

There was considerable discussion at the meeting regarding the cost factor of Sidney and Frankford belonging to the area as compared to the present procedure of these two municipalities purchasing their education at Belleville and in addition paying their own transportation costs.

Rates Charged

It was pointed out that the cost of education within the area, including the cost of transporting students from Ameliasburgh, Thurlow and Tyendinaga, was worked out on a per pupil basis and this was the ratio charged Sidney and Frankford.

The net result was that Sidney and Frankford are assisting to pay transportation costs for students within the area and are paying their own transportation costs as well.

Board member Arnold Campbell estimated that high school education costs for Sidney, Frankford and Batawa now are at least $5,000 more than if these municipalities belonged to the high school area.

At the present there are 152 students from these municipalities attending Belleville collegiate, Principal G. E. Currie stated.

Would Have Voice

In addition to securing cheaper education, membership in the area would give these municipalities representation and a voice in the operation of the school, it was pointed out.

Mr. Seldon said there seemed to be two courses open for Sidney. One was to join the area, and the other to enter some kind of a long-term agreement to purchase education from the area. Only in this way could a new school to accommodate all students be planned.

Here, however, Inspector Gray said he doubted if a long term agreement would be satisfactory.

There was considerable discussion regarding the possibility of dividing Sidney to allow the south half of the township to belong to the Belleville area board. If this were possible the northern half could join the Central High School area and continue to send students to Stirling. It would also allow Frankford to join the area.

Only Solution

Deputy Reeve Harry Morrow said such a division appeared to be the only possible solution. At the same time he wondered why educational costs at Stirling were greater than at Belleville.

This was explained by the fact that the Belleville collegiate is operating at over-capacity and thus the per-pupil rate was reduced.

Col. Roscoe Vanderwater, speaking as a private citizen, said he would not like to see Sidney split into three districts. He said he would like to see the entire township enter the Belleville area and then the board purchase education from Stirling and Trenton for students attending at these centres.

City Bearing 71 P.C.

Alderman Chas. Hyde as chairman of finance for city council, said he could not understand why Sidney hesitated in joining the area when 71 percent of the cost of operating the collegiate was borne by the city.

Mr. Seldon said the trend of board thinking was away from construction of an addition to the present collegiate as had formerly been considered. The thought was now to construct a second school unit, preferably outside the city. "Only by choosing a site outside the city could ample campus accommodation be acquired," he said.

He pointed out that grants for the proposed new school would be the same regardless of where it was built.

A chart of expected high school attendance prepared by Principal G. E. Currie showed that in 10 years time there would be close to 2,000 students attending at Belleville. This had caused the consideration of a second school unit rather than an addition to the present school which undoubtedly would soon be overcrowded.

Foolish to Build Addition

Mr. Currie noted that in view of the expected school attendance it would be foolish to consider an addition to the present school.

There was no definite outcome of the meeting although after consulting among themselves Sidney township councillors said they would call meetings of their school trustees and try to secure the opinion of their ratepayers regarding joining the high school area. Public meetings will be planned at which the problem will be explained. In this way Reeve Lee Grills said they could possibly come to some conclusion.

"I appreciate that this is nothing definite, but it is the best we can do tonight," he said.

Chairman Seldon, however, in adjourning the meeting felt that progress had been made and said the board was encouraged by the attitude of the meeting.

IN MEMORIAM

CONLIN. — In loving memory of our dear father, John Conlin, who passed away March 6th, 1951.

Oft and oft our thoughts do wander,
To the grave so far away,
Where we laid our dear father
Just one year ago today.

—Sadly missed by his daughters Ruby, Audrey, Dorothy, Muriel. M6

STEPHENS. — In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Ennie Stephens, who passed away March 6th, 1951.

What would we give her hand to clasp,
Her patient face to see;
To hear her voice, to see her smile,
As in the days that used to be.
But some sweet day we'll meet again,
Beyond the toil and strife,
And clasp each other's hand once more,
In heaven, that happy life.

—Ever remembered by daughters, Beatrice, Ada, Jeanette, Ruth and sons-in-law. M6

FOX. — In loving memory of Charles L. Fox, who passed away March 6, 1948.

Your memory is my keepsake,
From that I will never part,
God has you in His keeping,
I have you in my heart.

—Lovingly remembered by wife and family. M6

MUNRO. — In loving memory of our dear friend, Elizabeth Anne Munro, Crofton, who passed away March 6, 1951.

I was not there to see you die,
To lift your head and say goodbye.
I'll always remember my whole life through,
Those last words with you.
You were dearer to me than gold,
No one can ever replace you,
Your memory will never grow old.

—Sadly missed by Alfred and Julia and Beverley Eley. M6

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, March 6 — (CP) — Strong gold support today in early afternoon stock market dealings pushed most producing issues sharply higher. Other sections made little headway.

Dome, Kerr Addison, Lake Shore, Malartic, McIntyre and Wright-Hargreaves led senior golds upward with gains ranging to about 50 cents. A few junior producers — Cariboo, Elder and Preston — showed strong gains but most issues climbed moderately. Prospects were also strong.

Utilities, steels, constructions and miscellaneous issues showed a majority of advances in industrials but papers, liquors, manufacturing companies and agricultures dipped.

Base metals showed little trend as Anacon Lead, Consolidated Smelters, Estella, International Nickel, Mindamar and Steep Rock strengthened while Cobalt Lode, East Rim, Pend Oreille and United Asbestos weakened.

Western oils posted a slim majority of gains. Anglo-Canadian, Calgary and Edmonton, Calvan Consolidated, Pacific Petroleum, Sapphire and Western Leaseholds were among issues higher.

PRODUCE MARKET

Toronto, March 6 — (CP) — Churning cream and butter print prices were unchanged here today.

Graded eggs, cases free, delivered Toronto: Grade A large 37½-38; A medium 36-36½; A small 37; Grade B 34; Grade C 32.

Wholesale to retail: Grade A large 40-42; A medium 39-40; A small 37-38; Grade B 38; Grade C 36.

C.N.R. Announces New Pension Plan For Employees

Montreal, March 6 — (CP) — Donald Gordon, president and chairman of Canadian National Railways, today announced a new two-part pension plan for employees, one liberalizing the existing plan, the other for employees agreeing to compulsory contributions in return for higher pensions.

The plan became effective Jan. 1.

The first part provides a basic or service plan at the expense of the company and a supplemental pension based on joint contributions. The employee contributes from one to 10 per cent of his wages and after 10 years' service the company matches his contributions up to five per cent. Amount of the supplemental pension is that which the joint contributions with compound interest will buy.

B.C. Legislature Approves In Principle Bill to Allow Coloring of Margarine

(By The Canadian Press)

The British Columbia legislature last night approved in principle a bill which will allow coloring of margarine by the manufacturer.

The vote on second reading of the bill—approval in principle—was 34 to 6.

If the bill is passed, British Columbia will be the first province in Canada to permit coloring of margarine with the exception of Newfoundland, which has never passed restrictive legislation.

Alberta will approve the export of gas but only after it is assured the people's "rights" are protected, Mines Minister N. E. Tanner told the legislature yesterday.

The Mines minister spoke just before the government defeated by a vote of 48 to 4 a Liberal motion that the Social Credit government has "erred in adopting a policy favoring export of natural gas."

Premeir Douglas Campbell told the Manitoba legislature that plans are under way to have the federal and Manitoba governments contribute jointly towards "fundamental" research in agricultural. The provincial government would provide funds for construction of an addition to the University of Manitoba to be used as research headquarters.

In the Saskatchewan legislature Liberal member Lorne Blanchard said the C.C.F. government had a policy of "senseless compulsion" in the province's far north.

Call High-handed

He said fishermen, trappers and lumbermen resented the C.C.F. and its "high-handed" actions, and termed the vote taken in an area on the question of marketing through the government fish-marketing service a "farce". Anyone willing to vote for the service was offered every inducement and assistance to get to a polling place and once a majority had been obtained all the fishermen in the region are compelled to sell through the service, Mr. Blanchard said.

The Progressive Conservative opposition leader in the Nova Scotia Legislature, R. L. Stanfield, told the House today some liquor commission employees and civil servants campaigned for the Liberal government in the last election. Premier Macdonald said that if such employees took part in the campaign they did so in defiance of a government directive.

In the New Brunswick legislature C. I. L. Leger (Lib.-Moncton City) was directed by Speaker H. O. Downey to withdraw a remark during the Throne Speech debate which characterized the small Progressive opposition as "a quintet of men in their dotage".

Former Opposition leader Hugh Mackay in objecting to Mr. Leger's remarks said "It would be equally courteous of me to turn around and refer to that silly little ass in the back row."

Plow Making Steady Progress Toward Village

North Rustico, P.E.I., March 6—(CP) — Clear weather enabled a plow to make steady progress today toward this snowbound village, haunted during raging storms by sickness and dwindling fuel and food supplies.

The snowplow, which left Charlottetown, 23 miles away, Tuesday, was expected to arrive today after bucking drifts 18 feet high in places.

A bush pilot made a tricky landing on harbor ice yesterday to evacuate four hospital cases. Horses struggled through drifts to replenish food supplies.

Rev. Eric Robin, parish priest here, said sleighs brought ample food and there is no danger of malnutrition.

Edward Gallant, general store proprietor, reported yesterday he was breaking open his last case of canned milk.

The main problem was fuel. None is available locally and the last coal in the village — the four tons in the school — was distributed Tuesday, 200 pounds to each household.

Eldon Woodside flew his small plane to the village yesterday and removed to hospital a newly-born infant, two confinement cases and another girl suffering an undefined illness.

PACKING

During its three readings in the Commons, the government's emergency bill survived several opposition attempts to change it.

An amendment moved by John Diefenbaker (PC—Lake Centre) was ruled out of order. It would have made compensation to farmers payable on the basis of "economic value" of cattle destroyed. The government's bill provides for "fair and reasonable" compensation.

On third reading, Mr. Diefenbaker tried to have the bill sent back for reconsideration of his amendment but was defeated 130 to 50.

He was supported by the Progressive Conservatives, C.C.F. and Social Credit members, and opposed by the Liberals.

Percy Wright (CCF—Melfort) tried twice to extend the compensation to anyone in the quarantine area who suffers loss as a result of the outbreak but he was ruled out of order.

George Cherry Retires After 42 Years Service

An evening of entertainment was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Cherry, 61 Emily Street, on Wednesday evening, it being the occasion of a celebration on the retirement of Mr. Cherry from the Canadian National Railways after 42 years service.

Mr. Cherry entered the service of the old Grand Trunk Railway in 1910 as a fireman, classified as an engineer in 1913, and has been on the right side of the cab almost continuously since that time, pulling the throttle on fast freight, passenger and yard service, from which he retired on Wednesday at 4.00 p.m.

Many telegrams of congratulation were received from children and grandchildren. Bernice Cherry, a daughter from St. Catharines, sent two dozen lovely roses. Another daughter, Mrs. Steve Stevens and her husband motored from St. Catharines for the occasion.

Many friends of George and Mrs. Cherry invaded a home of friendliness to extend well wishes to both of them. Speakers of the evening were fellow railroaders including Harvey Leeman for the engineers, George Lanthangue for the conductors, and other toasts offered by Ed. Corneal, Harry Duvay, Ray Hicks and William Nichols, all engineers.

Toasts for the ladies were offered by Mrs. Ed. Corneal, Mrs. Harvey Leeman and Mrs. E. Baldrie.

Following a dainty luncheon, one and all gave voice to "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" as another railroader and his wife begin a well-earned life of leisure.

Child Killed Running Across Road to School

In full sight of her mother, who had driven her to school, six-year-old Shirley Margaret Aylseworth of Crookston, was instantly killed this morning, when she was struck by a car as she ran across the road to school. The accident occurred four miles south of Madoc.

The mother had driven the little girl to school along with several other children and had stopped near the school to let them out. The children started across the road and all but Shirley darted back when they saw the car coming.

Driver of the car which struck the little girl, Roy Stevenson, of Eldorado, had no chance to stop.

Coroner Dr. S. R. Beatty of Madoc, went to the scene. The accident was investigated by Cpl. Jack Hatch of the O.P.P., at Madoc.

There will be no inquest.

'Go to Church' Drive Sponsored By Kiwanis Club

"Get Up and Go To Church" and "Every Life Needs an Altar" are the slogans of a campaign sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Belleville to encourage people to go to church.

During the month of March the Support of Churches Committee of the Kiwanis Club, under the chairmanship of George Hosang, are promoting many activities to remind the citizens of the city of their obligation to their churches.

Included in these activities is an active advertising campaign through the newspaper and over the radio station using the aforementioned slogans. The radio broadcast is preceded by a carrilon of the chimes of Bridge St. United Church made especially for this purpose.

Fifty hotel cards, listing all of the Belleville churches with their respective addresses, are being displayed in neatly framed forms in all of the hotels, factories and railway stations of the city.

Mr. Hosang also stated that the committee is supplying speakers for social functions, banquets and meetings.

WILL CONTESTED

New Brunswick, N. J., March 6 — (AP) — The will of the late Russell S. Scott — setting up a $5,0000 trust fund for the life-time care of a dog — is being contested by a man who claims to be sole heir to the estate. In his will, Scott left $5,000 for the "welfare and benefit" of "Teddie," a terrier now being cared for at the New Brunswick animal shelter. Harold F. Scott, a first cousin, is contesting the will.

"GOVERNMENT BY TECHNICIAN"

What she termed "government by technician" was sharply criticized by Mayor Charlotte Whitton of Ottawa at the annual meeting of the Ontario Municipal Electric Association in Toronto on Thursday. Miss Whitton explained "government by technician" as meaning government by appointed individuals, as distinguished from government by those who are elected for the purpose of governing.

Miss Whitton was speaking against a resolution which would have enabled public utilities commissions to make their own appointments when vacancies arose. It was defeated.

Said Miss Whitton: "One of the things that is happening in Canada, from the House of Commons down to municipal governments, is the confusion of technical administrative services with policy-making bodies of elected representatives. The elected representatives of the people are becoming less and less effective in the evolution of policy because more and more authority is going over to the technicians. The municipal council represents the people and it should carry on government. The more people who are involved in making decisions, the less chance there is of wrong opinion prevailing."

The chief danger in permitting local commissions to fill their own vacancies, Miss Whitton added, was that the vacancies might have resulted from resignations arising from policy disputes. The worst thing that could happen to any public utilities body would be for it to become self-perpetuating — especially in cities where its members were not elected.

The resolution argued that members of the commissions were better equipped to consider the qualities and aptitudes of those required to fill a vacancy than was the local council, especially because many utilities had problems unique to themselves. It was urged, therefore that the provincial government pass enabling legislation so that powers of appointment would pass from councils to the hands of commissions themselves. It was turned down by a substantial majority, despite the pleas of a number of spokesmen.

While the delegates attending the meeting of the Ontario Municipal Electric Association were concerned chiefly with the relationship between municipal councils and hydro-electric commissions, Mayor Whitton's remarks made plain that she was more concerned about the broader problem of preventing the authority of the municipal councils from being whittled away and being gradually transferred to appointed boards and commissions.

A perfect example of what Miss Whitton had in mind is provided by the system through which the police forces of Ontario cities and such separated towns as Trenton are controlled. The police commission of a city or separated town consists of a board of three — the mayor, the police magistrate and the county judge.

While a mayor is responsible to the voters, judges and magistrates are appointed for life, and cannot be easily displaced, unless it can be proven that they have been guilty of serious misconduct. When differences of opinion arise among police commissioners, as they occasionally must, the mayor usually takes a stand that he thinks will be acceptable to a majority of the people whom he represents and upon whom he must depend for re-election. But the judge and the magistrate, in such cases, feeling themselves above and beyond the wishes of the voters and taxpayers, have two votes to the mayor's one. Usually, the mayor is voted down and his wishes disregarded.

In other words, the police force of an Ontario city is not under the control of the elected representatives of the people who pay the wages of the police force. Members of police forces, from the head man down, invariably defend this system, for obvious reasons. This kind of situation, we have always felt, should be corrected, rather than extended, and Ottawa's outstanding woman mayor apparently feels the same way.

NEW CHAMPION HEAVYWEIGHT

The News of the World, an English newspaper noted for its huge circulation and its enterprising ways, has been spending a good deal of time and probably not a little money recently in trying to locate the largest cat in Great Britain.

The latest and largest of these monster mousers to have his picture and biography published is Khita, five years old. Khita lives at Southsea, Hants, England. He weighs 35 pounds. Khita is said to have three brothers all weighing more than 20 pounds.

Khita is likely to receive some sort of award for being the heavyweight champion cat of Great Britain — or should we say the champion heavyweight cat?

THE BUSY MAN

I cite the busy man, for he Seems willing busier to be.
For what he thinks he ought to do
He'll find that extra hour or two;
Rise earlier, or later stay,
Instead of calling it a day.

The busy man will not reply:
"I'm sorry but no time have I."
As if that old excuse were new,
But if the task he ought to do,
Although he is a busy man,
He'll say: "I'll do the best I can."

The part time man will often shun
The extra work that should be done.
He'll never have an hour to spare
For service that he ought to share.
That's why, for every worth-while plan,
They always choose a busy man.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

CONCERNING THE SWEETS OF LIFE

A little boy complained to me recently that two things try his soul about the candy situation. The first is that there are so many different kinds of candies for sale when a fellow has only a penny to spend, and the second is that when you buy a penny square of chocolate that looks very large with the paper around it, it generally turns out that the piece of chocolate is all puffed up on top and hollow underneath.

As I listened to his complaint I could not help but feel that the longer he lives the more will he find that that is the nature of most of life's sweets. There are many varieties to be bought, we have very little to buy them with, and when at last we get them we find there is not much to them after all.

And to make such an observation on life is not an attempt to be cynical. It is an attempt rather to be realistic. Sweets have their place in life as they have in the diet list, but their limited nature as food, both for soul and body, should be recognized. Some people have the singular notion that life should be all sweet and no bitter and that for it to be otherwise constitutes a dire injustice.

We will enjoy all the sweets of life better if we recognize their limited utility and know that they are best enjoyed when they top off a meal of more substantial food.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The notion seems to be pretty general that the more people there are in the world, the less we will all have to work.

It is, of course, the other way round. In a small community, it is easy to see who is lazy, who is a shirker, who is a parasite. It is not easy to be a bum in a village. Public scorn keeps the number of them to a minimum. But there are usually three or four of them, even in a quite small hamlet.

In larger communities, the critical force of public opinion does not work so well. The larger the community, the greater the number of the lazy, the shirkers, the parasites and those who continue to get by without performing a fair share of the world's daily work. A benign anonymity pervades a big city. You never know what your neighbors two doors away do for a living. The proportion of non-productive adults in cities who have to be carried as free passengers along with children and the aged and infirm must be very large. And the more people there are, the larger the proportion is likely to grow.

For everything in life during the past few years has stressed every aspect of life except work. Leisure has become a major concern of us all. Ease, comfort and security are now recognized as fundamental human rights. Our elementary educational system is designed to prepare children, from infancy, to get "the most" out of life. And at the universities, you can get a degree by studying music appreciation, interior decorating and similar aethetic fields of human endeavor. It can hardly be denied that the number of free passengers in our society is being powerfully encouraged to increase.

And, despite a thousand marvels in the way of labor saving devices, those who do the world's work are working more frantically today than they were only a few years back. Naturally. Because each of them has several more free passengers to carry through life.

CLASS OF '02

The inevitability of growing old rarely troubles me. Even the recent opinion of Miss Sylvana Pampanini that men of 50 are too old to make love doesn't bother me too much—at any rate not while Charlie Chaplin and Leopold Stokowski are still so obviously busy.

I fully intend in my relentless search after the lowest common denominator of work and leisure to be the kind of old man who lies in a deep hammock, hands folded across a rampant paunch, listening to the rustle of old leaves and older memories.

The "Doc," about whom I used to write, was my model of how to be happy though ancient. He was a man who had put aside the restlessness and urgency that seems to drive so many tired old men ahead, old men stomping angrily to the grave.

The "Doc" simply accepted the mildly irritating burden of years, smiled his whimsical smile, picked up his rod and went up the river with some new flies in his hat and a small basket containing a generous supply of gin. It wasn't always easy to do, of course. Indeed it seems to me that in the case of the too-poor or the too-rich it is an exceedingly difficult thing to do.

Thinking about it now (for at least two minutes) I don't recall ever hearing a man who had devoted his life successfully to making money who found much happiness when he retired and hung up his coupon-clippers.

The machine gets too tightly wound. A good hammock can be bought for $8.98. Nothing that costs $8.98 can ever be the key to relaxation for a man who, as someone has put it, knows the price of everything and the value of nothing.

The too-poor have an equal problem. A man who walks through life arm-in-arm with poverty loses the hope of happiness. Like the rich man, he thinks it takes money.

This is all very long winded and wandering and I will get to the point. The point is that it's fatal to go back, fatal to try to recapture something that has long since fled.

I am thinking in particular of a newspaper picture on my desk at the moment. It shows 18 businessmen, most of them nudging 65 or, more accurately, being nudged by 65. They are sitting at a small varnished desks of a typical classroom, looking out sombrely at the camera, and mighty pathetic they look, too.

This, the caption says, is a reunion of a public school class of 1902 gathered together with their teacher, a Miss Perkins, who is slightly out of focus in the picture, but even at 85 there's that bun-in-the-back, eyes-over-the-rim-of-spectacles look that's cast from the classic mold.

There's a curious sameness about these men in their dark business suits, squeezed ludicrously into the small, neatly-rowed desks (remember the slant-top desks with the constantly-leaking inkwell in the right hand corner, the groove for the pencils and the shelf beneath for books and the apple?).

The sameness these men share is that they all seem incredibly wistful.

The caption says that Miss Perkins had a difficult time keeping her class of "unruly schoolboys" in order, but that is just some leaden whimsy by a caption writer. No spitballs, I'll warrant, were exchanged in this gathering.

I can't believe that any of these men would recapture any of the wonderful things that the old classroom once held. Indeed, for many of them it must have been a sobering experience.

That stout, bald man in the centre row, there. Is his serious distant gaze coming from the stabbing memory of sliding in behind that desk 50 years ago? Is he wondering bleakly whatever happened to the kid in the knickers and the scuffed boots and with the doughbabes in his pocket?

Is he wondering, "What am I doing here with all these old crocks posing fora picture that will only make me look like a fool?" Is he shocked to see how decayed his old pals have become?

I wonder about this because not so long ago I was at a sort of "old boys' reunion" and it was shocking.

When the old, old friend phoned and proposed the meeting of that early vintage group, the idea delighted me. I sat and thought nostalgically of my old pals and of the excitement we shared. There was Phil and the hitch-hiking tours we'd made into the valley; Lewis and the band he organized, in which I faked on banjo; Windy and the boat we built and sailed; Lorne and Jake and Harry and the memories of a mountain cabin.

So we all gathered, all reaching unconsciously into the past to run our fingers through the silk threads of memory.

It was terrible. There was torment on every side. Each man's memory, we found, was his own and distorted wildly over the years. We had each gone our separate ways and changed so that none of the boyhood traits were recognizable.

More than this, each man, I believe, was dismayed to see how the others had aged. We laughed at each others' paunches and grey hair and girth, but we were laughing with tears in our eyes.

I decided then that, like the "Doc," I would never worry about holding on grimly to anything in the past, but simply go up the river with a rod and a picnic lunch.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

SIMPLE PLEASURES

It is an inspiring thing to note the simple pleasures of the poor. The crudest home-made doll of the poor child is as precious to it as the expensive one that the rich child handles, and too often breaks and neglects.

Our resorts, steamships, airplanes, and automobiles carry multitudes of those who have lost their sense of simple pleasures, thinking that expensive travels to new scenes will restore to them what they failed to appreciate at home. How many return disillusioned!

Said Thoreau: "Only that travelling is good which reveals to me to enjoy it better. That ables me to enjoy it better. That man is the richest whose pleasures are the cheapest!" What a heaven is the small boy's baseball sand lot!

There is no hobby so wholesome and instructive to the young as stamp collecting. It is highly educational and full of simple pleasure. World heroes, birds, animals, products, historic events, flowers, engines, bridges, rivers, islands and scores of other items of interest are displayed, often as works of art. And the hobby is inexpensive. Often the child learns more from his stamp collecting than from his school books! There is always the thrill of discovery.

The simple pleasure of our childhood remain longest in our memory. To live longer, and happier, we should scatter these simple pleasures among our more strenuous activities, and learn their mental and spiritual value to us. During the most disturbing and fear-filled days of wars and public duties, Winston Churchill took his easel and paints that he might relax and enjoy simple pleasure of painting. And how many another has taken a cue from him!

It is heartening to see a crowded play yard, with children in ecstatic joy, the lover of flowers bending over his garden, multitudes of human beings upon the sea shore, the picnic by the roadside, or groups of visitors being guided about Radio City, in New York City, or riding atop a Fifth Avenue bus for the first time! Simple pleasures thrill most.

Personal Health Talks

WATCH OUT FOR TRICKS OF THE TRADE, FOLKS

Iatrogenic heart disease is what ails a good many patients who come under the observation of a heart specialist. Don't let the strange word throw you—it means doctor-produced. The heart specialist says that in most instances the trouble began years ago when some bumbling doctor heard a murmur and dismissed the patient with the advice to take things easy and avoid unnecessary activity—but failed to say what, if anything, was wrong with the heart.

There is a widespread popular notion that physical activity, exercise, work, play, recreation is harmful to any one with heart disease of any kind. Unfortunately some half—some physicians share this belief or, if they know better, they haven't the know-how to prescribe the kind and degree of physical activity that will be most beneficial to the individual patient.

In every case of valvular disease, leakage, incompetency, insufficiency gradually increasing physical activity is as important as rest or medicine for successful treatment.

Persons who have coronary thrombosis unquestionably keep in better condition and are less likely to have another "attack" if they lead a reasonably active life instead of trying to avoid physical activity.

If you are handicapped that way it would do your heart good to talk with some of the coronarians on our bowling green.

My advice to any reader who has an unexplained murmur is consult a physician for an opinion as to its significance. If the physician is honest he or she will give an opinion or tell you frankly that he doesn't know whether it means anything or not.

At any rate this is a fact which no physician will deny: A doctor who says a patient has a murmur but fails to give an opinion as to the significance of the murmur or at least acknowledge he doesn't know what it means takes advantage of the patient's ignorance and credulity.

Don't let it happen to you, stupid.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

What is This Bowling Green Stuff?

Congratulations on your article concerning the family that had to eat black bread. Please explain what is this bowling green you mention from time to time? (J. R.)

Answer—The ancient game of lawn bowls, bowling is on the green, described in Vol. 3 of the Britannica. Visit the bowling green in Vancouver, Victoria, Portland, Seattle, St. Paul, Toronto, Buffalo, Boston, Springfield (Mass.), Brooklyn, Chicago, in the summer time and watch the characters playing.

Fresh Out of Cures

Do you have a cure for arthritis? If so, you may send me your literature... (J. W.)

Answer—Reminds me of the neighborhood druggist who thrived at my expense when I was trying to get a meagre living for my family. At a parent-teacher meeting, surrounded by women seeking medical advice, he recoiled slightly at a query about the value of hot toddy or some such remedy for whatever befell. "Alcohol," he said, "is the one thing I never prescribe." Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for pamphlet Calcium and Rheumatiz. If you would like the booklet, The Ills Called Rheumatism inclose 25c for it. Calling ache, pain or lameness of joints "arthritis" is like calling a spade a spatula. Sounds impressive to a wiseacre or a df.

WEDDINGS

NEWMAN—HOUSTON

Tall standards of double white stocks, white snapdragons and white tulips formed the background in St. Thomas' Anglican Church, Belleville, on Saturday, February 23, at high noon, for a lovely double-ring wedding ceremony, when Barbara Joan Houston, daughter of Mrs. J. R. Houston, of Belleville, became the bride of Frederick William Newman, of Belleville, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Newman, also of Belleville. The rector, Archdeacon Arthur Smith, officiated.

The wedding music was provided by Professor Wheatley, church organist, with the church choir, assisting in the hymns and Psalm.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. John R. Houston, of Belleville, was charming in her floor-length bridal gown of white nylon tulle featuring a strapless bodice with jacket of French rosepoint Chantilly lace, Queen Anne collar and sheath-like sleeves ending in lilypoints over the wrists. The bouffant skirt was fashioned with a two-tiered tulle overskirt and underskirt of taffeta with lace applique. Her three-quarter length veil of lace-appliqued nylon tulle, was held in place by a matching shirred headdress, and she carried a semi-cascade bouquet of white hyacinth bells, yellow roses and angel feathers.

Mrs. Joan Graham, of Trenton, was matron of honor attired in wine taffeta with matching lace jacket and headdress: the bridesmaids, Miss Joan Walker, and Miss Patricia Gibbon, both of Belleville, and Miss Gwen Shore, of Toronto, were gowned alike in green taffeta with matching lace jackets and headdresses, and bouffant skirts. All carried semi-cascade bouquets of white tulips, pussy willows and green leaves.

Mr. George Scott, of Belleville, was groomsman; Mr. Claude Graham, Jr., of Trenton; Mr. Bob Way, of Peterborough, and Mr. Bert Newman, of Belleville, were ushers.

The reception, which was held in St. Thomas' Parish House, where the bride's mother, wearing a street-length navy gown with navy and white accessories, and corsage of red Gainette roses, white carnations and white ribbon, received the many guests. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother, who was gowned in a street-length cinnamon dress, with beige and dark brown accessories, and corsage of yellow roses and cocoa brown ribbon.

Later, the young couple left for a wedding trip to Toronto, and New York, by plane, the bride wearing a grey ensemble with navy and white accessories, and corsage of pale pink carnations; blue forget-me-nots, white stocks with navy bow. Mr. and Mrs. Newman will reside in Belleville.

Teaching Staff Arranges Meeting To Usher in Education Week

Education Week was ushered in at the Collegiate on Monday evening with a Home and School meeting in which teachers, parents, students and an inspector from the Department of Education took part. The program was arranged by the teaching staff and was convened by Mr. J. A. Snetsinger. The school band was there with Mr. W. P. Youdale wielding the baton; the girls' athletic department was represented by a team doing tumbling exercises directed by Miss Martinson; Cara Butler, a student, contributed two piano selections; and a male quartet composed of Messrs. L. Reid, M. Hancock, J. Snetsinger and Gough were heard in two vocal numbers.

Guests of the meeting were the members of the Bay of Quinte District High School Board who were introduced by Mr. H. Seldon. Mr. Seldon explained that many problems were facing the Board including space for extra classes. He expressed the hope that Sidney township would come into the area as it would mean the exclusion of all students from there if they did not.

The Commercial Department put on a display of their work with the stage set with business equipment. The class demonstrated the use of a stencil cutter, typewriters and dictaphones, and passed copies of their work to the audience.

Spoke on Language

Miss N. Merry spoke on the decline and fall of the English language. In the course of her remarks she stated that it was a shock to find that English taught in the schools was so ineffectual. In the University of Toronto 64% of the students were taking remedial English. A great many students do not have the minimum requirements. Changing times have brought changing standards, but she believed that every country got exactly the kind of education it deserved and demanded. The educational system in this country was remarkably fine except as it dealt with the gifted child.

Mr. L. Reid spoke on the need of a comprehensive study in the schools of social studies. The world population was increasing at the rate of 75 thousand a day, and was necessary to know how to co-operate with each other. There was too great a gap between the material sciences and the natural sciences. There was need of much more study of the humanities. An enlightened citizenry was needed and a group of people with a positive program who would be a steadying influence in these troubled times. Social studies was designed to teach people to be thinking citizens.

Inspector Heard

Inspector Gray summarized the program of the Department of Education in regard to Social Science, which was a course with a pronounced degree of continuity to help students to be better able to live in the modern world. The course draws together history, geography, sociology and other bodies of information to make the subject purposeful. A laboratory approach has been worked out which is meeting with success in Belleville.

A display of art and handicrafts arranged by Miss Dwyer, Mr. Kew and Mr. Tindale was on view in the corridor.

Mrs. H. R. Varcoe presided at the meeting and the financial statement was read by Mrs. N. F. Tonkin.

Refreshments were served in the cafeteria by the fathers of the association.

Club Activities

BRIDGE STREET Y.P.U.

A lively sing-song opened the meeting of Bridge Street Y.P.U. on Monday evening.

The short worship service and the program were in charge of Miss Barbara Sager and Miss Lenore West. The theme was "Bird Missionaries", under the department of Missions and World Outreach.

The group heard an interesting story of the Jack Miner Bird Sanctuary, and learned how the birds were all banded, with a Scripture text attached. In this way, they carried the good news of the Gospel to the Indians and Eskimos in northern Canada. These people would then contact the missionaries nearest their district.

A short business period was conducted by president, Jim Bailey.

The evening closed with games led by Miss Loretta McDougall, and the friendship circle and "Taps".

LAND MEASURE

"Furlong" is believed to be a corruption of "furrow-long" used in former years to denote the length of a square 10-acre field.

Successful Euchre Held in I.O.O.F. Hall

On Tuesday evening, despite inclement weather conditions, a most successful euchre party was held in the I.O.O.F. Hall, Front Street, under the sponsorship of Mrs. George Connors.

Those winning prizes included: ladies' Mrs. Lena MacMillan; Mrs. Rhea Mitchell; Mrs. Verna Summers. Men: Mrs. Etta West; Mr. Charles MacDonald and Mrs. June Carruthers.

Bountiful refreshments were served by the committee in charge which brought to a close a most delightful evening.

Miss Skinner Well Received In Premiere

New York, March 5 (CP)—Cornelia Otis Skinner demonstrated to her premiere Broadway audience at the Booth Theatre last night that she is truly a one-woman theatre.

In her single-handed performance of "Paris '90" she revealed illimitable facets of comedy; tragedy; burlesque, naughtiness and genius as she enacted stories imagined from the paintings of the noted French artist, Henri Toulouse-Lautrec.

Miss Skinner has done something like this type of one-woman show in previous seasons, as in "The Wives of Henry VIII," "The Loves of Charles II" and 'The Empress Eugenie."

In "Paris '90" Miss Skinner is the only one on stage during the entire performance but by her magic she never permits the invisible figure of Henri Toulouse-Lautrec to get off the stage and away from the characters she is portraying.

For example, Toulouse-Lautrec's "A Lion-Tamer of the Medrano Circus" shows a woman lion-tamer sitting formally in a sort of Cossack uniform holding a curled whip over her knee.

When the curtain goes up, Miss Skinner's post is an exact replica of the picture. Then she begins her monologue, telling how she has been double-crossed by her lover, who fears lions, and how the lover shoots her favorite young lion when he thinks she may be attacked.

Then, in ungrateful fury, the lion tamer bursts from the cage and beats her lover with the same whip she has been using to tame her lions.

Four Pupils Successful In Music Examination

The following pupils of Bessie Handley, A.T.C.M., were successful in the February examinations of the Royal Conservatory of Music, of Toronto:

Piano — Grade V — Carolyn Franklin and Sylvia Fitzsimmons.

Grade I—Gail Tremaine, first class honors.

Theory — Grade II — Johnny Biggs, first class honors.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Let the past "rest in peace"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl of 17, and I like a boy of 18 I went with when I was 15. I only went with him about two or three weeks, and then I quit him because of his jealousy and conceit.

When we were going steady, he told me he had loved me since we were in grammar school, which is true. He kept asking me to go with him, and at first I told myself that I was too young, and then when I turned 15, I said yes.

Now that we aren't going together any more, I know I love him, and I know he still loves me, but he is very conceited and good-looking, and he speaks to me only when he is not with another girl. He doesn't know I like him again, and I am afraid to tell him. He is very jealous because boys seem to like me, even if it is only my sister's boy friend who happens to talk to me.—J.M.

Dear J.M.:

If you are 17 now and haven't "gone steady" with this boy since you were 15, and then only for two or three weeks, doesn't it seem rather foolish for you to be trying to stir up something that seems to have died a natural death? Why not let it rest in peace? It rarely works out very satisfactorily to try to go back to anything that has once been left behind. Much better to go on to something new when one experience seems to be definitely over.

It doesn't sound to me at all as though this boy were very interested in you, or as jealous as you think he is. Anyhow, if he is ever going to be interested in you again, it will be when he sees you having good times with lots of friends, and being natural and jolly with them all. That is the kind of girl who attracts boys.

A handicap has left her friendless and embittered

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a woman who was born with a face disfigured by lumps and wrinkles. My parents have always seemed to hate me for it, and bacause of this, I have had a loveless home-life. I am so ugly that I can't find any friends or any happiness. I always try to keep myself clean, neat and nicely dressed, but I dont' have money to have an operation on my face and I am so alone and heart-broken, I have often thought of taking my life, but I know it is wrong, and besides, I haven't the courage.

Why am I begrudged happiness or peace?—E. G.

Dear E.G.:

It is pretty hard for me to advise you without any way of knowing just how badly you are disfigured. Have you ever gone to a good doctor who makes a specialty of skin troubles? You live near the biggest city in the country where there are several big medical centres. If you have never thought of doing so, then I suggest that you write to one of them, and ask about a clinic for skin disorders. You could then see a specialist free or at little expense, who would help you all he could.

Outside of this, and while I know it will sound foolish to you, anyone with any sort of disfigurement or deformity must bend every effort to develop an interesting, likeable personality. Some of the most successful people who have ever lived had conspicuous handicaps, and by having the willpower to make other things the centre of their lives, instead of allowing their afflictions to absorb all their attention, they achieved great things and won respect from everyone. It really does happen that if a person can make himself a delightful companion, warm-hearted and friendly toward others, people forget about how they look, and only think of what they are.

So the first thing for you to do is to find out just what can be done to improve your looks by seeking help at a clinic, and then stop dwelling on your troubles and put your mind on developing yourself as a person. I know that this is something which is "easier said than done", but if others have been successful at it, you can at least try, can't you?

Food for Thought

By Mary Moore

Sea Food-Penny Plain And Three Dollars Fancy

Over the weekend we visited a city of one hundred thousand population in the States and I was impressed with the number of family people who were eating in restaurants.

We were being entertained by a glamorous New York business girl so had our choice of the town and went to a very swish sea food restaurant and ate Florida pompano.

On the previous day we had taken a rather dim view of the attitude of two American gentlemen to all of the ceremony observed over our beloved King George's death both in England and Canada.

But nothing we do can equal the ceremony which went with the service of that Florida pompano. A young lady had taken our orders, and all went quietly while our jumbo shrimp cocktails were served, eaten and cleared. Then through the doors swung three male waiters each bearing a large tray with one pompano for each of us on his. The table next to us being unoccupied was cleared for their next action. With the skill acquired from long practice those boys slit open, boned the broiled pompano, folded back the top fillets and placed them before us in one minute flat. The fish were broiling hot and super delicious with Tartare Sauce.

We were hugely amused with their concentration on this tricky task. When our plates were in place we grinned our appreciation, and only then did they permit themselves to smile too.

In different ways, for instance over broiled lobster for a family of four, all of the diners were given this courteous and skilful attention. The atmosphere was charged with service-plus. (I use the word "charge" advisedly.)

But we are home again now and I think had nearly as much fun at our own table, with Pete for a waiter, over a casserole of smoked whitefish that my sister Doris dreamed up. I raved over it so much that she said "I wondered if it would make the grade." (meaning reach this column).

SMOKED HADDOCK CASSEROLE

Buy a piece from the centre portion of a smoked haddock—the kind with skin and bone still present—it should weigh 1 1-4 lbs. to yield the 1 lb. flesh you need for this. Peel off skin, pull flesh from bones with strong fork and place fish in buttered casserole. Cover with 2 sliced hard cooked eggs and pour over 1 1-2 cups medium white sauce (3 tablespoons each butter and flour and 1 1-4 cups milk). Sprinkle this with 1 cup grated old cheese. Bake about 20 minutes at 375 deg. Fahr. or until heated through and bubbling and golden. With this we had fluffy boiled rice and sliced new beets and the finest shreddest new cabbage salad our sharpest knife could produce. I highly recommend this dish.

Dear Miss Moore: Recently my husband was dining at the —— —— hotel and ordered Country Style Scrambled eggs. They were delicious and creamy looking. I don't think they were cooked in a skillet. . . .would you kindly give me the recipe for fluffy scrambled eggs?— Edna K.

ANSWER—You are right. They are cooked in a double boiler.

CREAMY EGGS

Three eggs, 1 tablespoon butter, 3-4 teaspoon salt, shake of pepper, 2-3 cup whole milk. Beat eggs slightly, add soft butter and seasonings and milk. Cook over hot water and, as the mixture begins to thicken around the sides and bottom draw it away with spoon. Continue until all of the mixture is cooked, but do not stir continuously. Serve as soon as it is "set" on toast garnished with parsley. A good variation is to add a little grated cheese or chopped bacon.

Fashion Flashes

ONE OF THE DELIGHTS of the recent showings was the variety of double-duty clothes in all brackets. One such design is a lovely coat of black silk taffeta, lavish of skirt, with draped diagonal bodice held with one big button just above the self belted waist. It is as perfect as a late afternoon dress as it is as a coat over a slim frock.

A STAR ROLE is the happy assignment of the cardigan—plain or embroidered—in resort and spring fashions of the casual or country type. Beige linen is used for a pretty dress, its curved neckline marked by white braid and cording embroidery, studded with rhinestones. With it a cashmere cardigan dyed to match, with embroidery theme matching that of the dress.

Hosts of the new home generally give the housewarming

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Here is a question that my friends and I cannot get settled. A young couple we know are buying a new house, and will be moving into it soon. Is it their proper place to have a housewarming, or should a close friend give one for them?—C. V.

Customarily it is the hosts of the new home who give the housewarming. In my judgment, this is best taste and makes best sense. For it is their home they are opening to their relatives and friends, to welcome them cordially "over the threshold", to show them happily this home they have so proudly planned. This friendly welcoming all seems properly the social responsibility and privilege of the hosts themselves. . . don't you agree? They too can best decide when the showing-of-the-house will be most convenient for them . . what is the best time day and hour, for the housewarming-party. They too can choose the kind of invitations they wish, the kind of menu. However, although there is certainly no "should" about a friend's giving the housewarming, occasionally a close friend or group of friends do plan and give the housewarming, which, in this circumstance, is generally a surprise party.

Bride's grandmother should co-operate with dress-plans, if possible

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My oldest granddaughter is to be married in May, in church, in the evening. I have been asked to wear a floor-length gown that will harmonize with the lace gowns that the mothers are going to wear: of two lovely soft colors they described to me. Since my health is very uncertain and since I live several hundred miles from where the wedding is to take place, my plans for attending the wedding might have to be changed at the very last minute. Therefore I am wondering if I would be committing a social error to wear a street-length gown with a becoming hat and gloves, like the other guests will probably wear. Of course I want to be dressed properly, but because of the special circumstances I hesitate to invest in the floor-length gown.—M. P.

If it is a question of your not being able to afford the type of dress you have been asked to wear at the wedding, then you should straightforwardly explain this as well as recall to the bride and her mother the circumstances that quite possibly might make it impossible for you to come to the wedding. Since they are the ones who specifically asked you to wear the floor-length dress to harmonize with the dresses and colors they described so carefully to you, they are the ones with whom you should consult (by mail or telephone, if not personally) and whom you should tell about a possible change of dress-plans.

May it be that they are planning to ask you to stand with "the mothers" in the receiving-line. . . and so should be dressed similarly and harmoniously with them? Anyway, apparently they are particularly desirous to have you, so closely and importantly related to the bride, dressed with proper formality for the formal evening wedding and reception they are planning. So I most seriously suggest that you co-operate with their suggestion, if you possibly can, even if this takes "a deal of planning" and some sacrifices. The wedding of your oldest granddaughter is a mighty important event and should be lived up to in proper style. If you have provided the proper dress for yourself, you may make an extra effort to go to the wedding. But if on The Day you just can't make it, you will be comforted by the fact that you made every possible effort to co-operate.

BEAUTY

HELEN JAMIESON

Calisthenics can be fun

Just where do you stand on the subject of exercise, my friend? If you are like many women, the mere mention of exercise gives you definite pain. You are rushing through life, one way or another, and you have no time, and you don't believe it is necessary anyway. And so what? That settles it. When, some years hence, you find youthful lines departing waist and hip measurements expanding, a little shelf of fat south of the waistline, you will be filled with remorse and regret. Why didn't you do something.

In the summer season, you may be lured to the golf links. Maybe you take a fling at tennis. Or you swim when the weather is hot. But what about autumn, winter and early spring, before the lilacs bloom? Are you willing then to let yourself go to seed? No sense in it.

Giving your musculature a ten-minute workout every morning will help you to start the day right. It will make the routine of work lighter because it will stimulate your blood streams and have an exhilarating effect upon your mind. You must have the right mental attitude. Don't regard it as a chore. Think of it as a play period.

A good time for exercise is just before the bath. Stand tall, send your hands out on a line with your shoulders, palms downward. Lift your hands slowly while you come up on your toes, stretching your body to the limit. As you rise, as your hands are lifted, take a deep breath. Exhale as you come down on your heels and bring your hands back to first position. This is one way to air-condition your lungs. It will also tend to tighten up the muscles of the mid-section. They are the ones that need toning.

The torso-twist will help keep the mid-section in form. Fold your fingers in the palms of your hands. Stand tall. Swing your hands far to the right, then far to the left and back again, pivoting at the waistline. It is the waistline that you must keep slender. If you add inches there, the middle-aged figure will take the place of the youthful one.

Stretching exercises, done after you get in bed at night, will help. Even the laziest exercise-haters won't mind doing them. Lie on your back, completely relaxed down to your toes and your fingertips. Lift your chin and stretch your neck. Turn your head from side to side. Send your toes down as far as you can, pulling hard on the leg muscles. Lift your arms and stretch them.

Relax and take deep breaths, counting ten. Then more stretching. This is an excellent preparation for restful sleep.

Municipal Vote Soon to Show Trend in Britain

London (AP) — The first representative test of public opinion since the Conservatives ousted Labor in the general election last October will be held throughout England and Wales early in April.

It will extend over a period of a week beginning April 3, when voters go to the polls in triennial elections to determine the make-up of new county councils. They will be followed a month later by the annual elections of borough, urban and rural councils.

Of the 62 county councils in England and Wales, 42 at present are controlled by forces that prefer to be labelled as "Independents." Conservatives have a majority on 12 councils and Labor eight.

In London, party machines are being geared for what is expected to be a fiery campaign. Candidates, particularly the Socialists, have indicated that the battle this time will be fought mainly on national, rather than local and regional issues.

Socialists have been in control of London's county council since 1934, but in reecnt years only by the slimmest majority. Three years ago the result ended in a 64-64 deadlock, between Labor and Conservatives. Labor subsequently gained the upper hand by winning aldermanic control of county hall. The 21 aldermen are elected by the councillors, for a six-year term. Ten retire every election year.

Labor is expected to contest every seat in the forthcoming London test, with a Conservative candidate in all but one. The exception is Bethnal Green, which by tradition for many years has been conceded to the Liberal nominee.

WHITE'S DISTRICT

White's District — Mr. and Mrs. Will Jones, of Trenton, were Thursday visitors of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Brown.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Ritz, Kathryn, Carolyn and Arnold, of Thurlow, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Jeffery.

Miss Mabel Brown was a Saturday dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Young.

Miss Sharon Jeffery was a week end visitor of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Jeffery.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Rush spent a few days last week with the former's sister, Miss Louise Rush, of Toronto, who was celebrating a birthday on February 29th. They also visited their daughter and his husband, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Hannon.

Several ladies met at the home of Mrs. W. A. Jeffery on Monday evening to clean the church silver, while the men attended a business meeting at the Bayside parsonage.

Little Stephen Jones, who has been ill, is much better again.

The sympathy of the community is extended to Mr. Roy Bryant in the loss of his brother, Fred, who passed away suddenly on Monday at the Trenton Memorial Hospital. The funeral service, conducted by the Rev. A. C. McCallum of Wesley church, on Wednesday at the Weaver Funeral Home, Trenton, was well attended by many friends from the surrounding district. Interment was at White's Cemetery.

The Sunday school service at White's Church was held on Sunday morning with the junior choir singing "Jesus Bids Us Shine," accompanied by Mrs. Donald Bowers.

DEATH TOLL IS 119

Rio de Janerio, March 6 — (Reuters)—The death toll in yesterday's rail disaster here—the worst in Brazil's history—was set today at 119, with nearly 300 persons injured, many seriously.

An all-meatl electric train, so crowded passengers were hanging out of the doors, sideswiped a derailed section of another train on a bridge near the Rio suburb of Anchietta.

The electric train, taking workers into the city, crashed as it crossed a bridge over the Pavuna River.

Miss Miriam Martin Gives Address At World Day of Prayer

Bancroft — Women from all the churches met in the Gospel Hall Friday afternoon to observe the World Day of Prayer. A prepared order of service was followed with Mrs. H. Mitchell in charge.

Intercession was led by Mrs. John Wiggins, when section prayers were offered by members of all the congregations represented. Mrs. R. Blatherwick, assisted by Mrs. S. Walker, led the dedication period. The offering was taken by Mrs. C. Marston and Mrs. R. Wiggins.

The address was given by Miss Miriam Martin, of Toronto, who chose her text from John 3: "Except a man be born of water and the spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God." Using parables to illustrate her point, Miss Martin stated first that man must believe in God before he has the right to address Him as his heavenly Father, and that there are many joys and privileges enjoyed by those who belong to the family of God.

Miss Vivian Walker was soloist with Mrs. Max Reynolds presiding at the piano. The benediction was pronounced by Mrs. Mitchell.

Will Deduct Pay

Sudbury, March 6 — (CP) — City council members Tuesday decided to deduct $5 from their pay for every council meeting missed. They turned down a suggested $5 deduction for missing committee and Board of Control meetings.

The nine-man council also will apply to the Ontario Municipal Board to have their pay increased from $500 per year to $750. The pay for controllers has been set at $1,500 as provided in the Municipal Act.

Early Dip

Recently an employee of the Therrion Construction Company, which is engaged in building of the Trans-Canada Highway near Actinolite, opened the swimming season when he took a dip in the water at the mill dam. None of the spectators, who watched him paddling about, had any thought of duplicating the feat.

The pre-Lenten dance recently sponsored by the Kinsmen's Club in St. Carthagh's Hall, was well attended. An unrehearsed floor show, with C. E. Way as master of ceremonies, was supplied. Harold Knapp's Modernaires supplied the music. Refreshments were available at the snack bar.

Mr. Fred J. Hawes, director of Apprenticeship of the Ontario Department of Labor, was the guest speaker at the regular dinner meeting of the Tweed Chamber of Commerce held at the Tweedsmuir Hotel recently. During his address he stated that boys should be encouraged to become skilled craftsmen.

A large number from Tweed attended the opening of the Tamworth community rink last Friday.

Dominion Stores Limited, at their branch here, have added to the appearance of the store in recent innovations. A new self-serve meat case; a new large cake rack has been installed; more floor space is the result with greater accommodation for shoppers. The store presents an attractive appearance.

Driving a jeep back of the high school on an unbroken road, Don and Lawrence Cassidy struck a hard snow drift. Lawrence was tossed against the windshield, causing scalp lacerations and concussion. Twenty stitches were required to close the wounds. Dr. Dales rendered medical attention in his office. The accident occurred on Wednesday, February 27th.

Consultant Says Hair Coloring Another Cosmetic

Toronto, March 6 (CP) — To Theda Brake, a cosmetic color consultant, "hair coloring is just another cosmetic."

The days when a woman would lose her reputation if she dyed her hair are gone, says Miss Brake, who came to Toronto for the hair-dressers' conference. "With hair properly colored and styled, we can take 10 years off the age of any woman."

Television is responsible for the present popularity of red hair—which by the way is no longer dyed, it is "color tinted." "Blondes don't photograph well and brunettes need highlights in their hair. But redheads were born for TV contracts. So red it is "television red."

Women who have a hairdresser tint their hair should have a retouch job every six weeks. For the home hair stylist, color shampooing is the simplest way to put on a new top hue.

Spring is the time for new hair hues, Miss Brake said. "Women get discontented through the winter. Spring calls for color. So out they go to dye their hair."

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was eating her grapefruit diet this morning, saying to pop, Oh dear, with all I have to do today, I'll have to find time to dust the living room this morning.

But you dusted it yesterday, pop said. If I hadn't run for my life you'd have dusted me too, he said, and ma said, I know, that's the trajedy of it. I'm expecting some ladies for bridge this afternoon, and Mrs. Ludgammon is one of them.

Is she allergic to dust? pop said, and ma said, On the contrary, she just loves it and dotes on it. There are some women who can practically see around corners, if there's a speck of dust to be peered and pryed at, and Mrs. Ludgammon is one of them. Women like that are nature's werst bizybodies, and Mrs. Ludgammon takes the blue ribbon for ferst prize. If you asked her to describe a certain room she's tell you there was dust here and dust there and dust in sutch and sutch a corner, and 9 times out of ten she wouldn't even wait to be asked. And the ironical irony of it is still to come. I was in her house just once, and what do you think I saw? ma said.

Sureely not dust? pop said, and ma said, My dear, I could have written my name on the piano top.

G, ma, why didn't you? I said, and ma said, I almost wish I had. And to cap the climax with the crowning touch, there was even dust under the rug. I happened to tern up the corner of it while I was alone in the room, and I saw it with my own eyes. I dont blame you for laffing, William, she said.

I guess I know the funny part of a story when I hear it, pop said.

And he was still laffing when he folded up his paper and left for his office.

MAKE NO EXCEPTION

Fort Erie, Ont., March 6 (CP) — Town council Tuesday night decided to make no exception to the rule that firecrackers may be discharged only with the written permission of the police chief.

The question was brought up when a fireworks company wrote suggesting the by-law be amended. Fire department officials opposed any amendment.

Crippled Boy Is Special Guest Of Sports Dinner

Toronto, March 6. (CP)—Freddie Atkinson, a 12-year-old crippled boy from Woodstock, Ont., will be the envy of sports-minded boys across Canada March 13.

As the 1952 "Timmy", symbol of Canada's crippled children, he will rub shoulders with 21 of the continent's greatest athletes at the first annual sports celebrity dinner of the Ontario Sports Writers and Sportscasters Association.

The association today announced a sellout of the 417 tickets available for the $25-a-plate dinner which marks the opening of the National Easter Seals campaign for crippled children. All dinner proceeds, more than $8,000 will go to the Ontario Society for Crippled Children.

Will Broadcast

Timmy, a cripple from birth, will join with the sports stars in a one-hour broadcast of the dinner program over 13 CBC and private radio stations.

Born with a condition known as spinal bifida, Timmy didn't learn to walk until he was seven. He wears metal braces, gets about with the aid of crutches and can take some steps without them. He goes to school, is an apt student, plays shinny on the street with neighborhood youngsters, goes to the show on Saturdays, builds model boats in a basement workshop with his father and some day hopes to study medicine.

The dinner menu includes venison and beaver meat contributed by the Ontario Lands Department. A group of business men have underwritten the out-of-pocket cost of the meal ($6 a person) so all proceeds may go to crippled children. The association said it is not paying any expenses of celebrities who are coming at their own expense or under sponsorship.

Province Had Warmest February In Many Years

Toronto, March 6 (CP)—Ontario went through its warmest February in years, the public weather office at nearby Malton announced Wednesday.

The province's average temperature was 36 degrees above normal in all regions.

For February, Toronto had an average temperature of 28 degrees. The warmest day was Feb. 1 when the mercury rose to 44. Feb. 14 was Toronto's coldest day of the month, when temperatures dropped to two degrees above zero.

The forecaster said that on a few days during the month Kapuskasing, in northern Ontario, recorded temperatures of 33 degrees below zero, yet that area's mean temperature was 7 degrees above normal. North Bay reported temperatures of 20 degrees below zero but the average was four degrees above normal.

The forecaster said most Ontario points reported averages above normal for the month, despite some "very cold days."

3RD HILLIER

Misses Florence and Irene Collier spent the weekend with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Collier.

Mrs. Charles Benway and Doreen called on Mrs. Charles Goodmurphy on Friday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Weir, also Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Thompson report a good time from Florida.

INTERIM PACT REACHED

Ottawa, March 6 — (CP) Fisheries Minister Mayhew said Tuesday an interim agreement has been reached with Norway on the opening of the 1952 sealing season.

The season opened Wednesday in the Gulf of St. Lawrence and will open March 10 along the north shore of Newfoundland and Labrador.

Replying to W. J. Browne (PC-St. John's West), Mr. Mayhew said his department hopes to have discussions later with Norway and other interested countries on controversial matters pertaining to the sealing industry.

Special Car Ferry Designed To Cope With High Tides Encountered in Bay of Fundy

Saint John, N.B. (CP) — A special car ferry has been designed to cope with 30-foot tides in the Bay of Fundy and avoid the expense of building high wharves. The new vessel, a unique development in ferry service history, will have its own built-in ramps and land on beaches.

The idea for the novel craft came after the New Brunswick government commissioned a father-and-son firm of Vancouver naval architects to survey the province's ferryboat system. The firm's younger member, Robert Allan, Jr., conducted the survey.

When the plans are completed, the vessel will probably be built in New Brunswick or Nova Scotia. In addition to the British Columbia designing, the wood for the hull is expected to be Douglas fir from the west coast.

The ferry, to be used on a 3-mile route between the mainland village of L'Etete, Charlotte County, and Deer Island, will replace a scow towed by a power boat. The scow accommodates only four cars. In the busy summer season reservations days, and even weeks, ahead have been necessary.

To Carry 14 Cars

Plans for the new ferry call for a craft 92 feet long and capable of carrying 14 automobiles with their passengers. Two diesel engines, with a pair of propellers at each end, will push the vessel along at a 10-knot clip—fast enough to buck Fundy's strong tides.

Avoiding expensive wharf construction or landing stages in a high-tide area by using beaches as terminals brought up the problem of propeller placement and ramp design. This has been solved by the Vancouver architects. The ferry will simply land on the beach at each end of its route and the special ramp will be lowered, enabling cars to be driven off and loaded.

Mr. Allan says the beaches involved are "made to order" for the job. They are covered with the right kind of gravel, have the proper grade, and because of the tidal currents are kept free of marine growth.

Cost of the ferry is estimated at $125,000.

If the experiment proves successful, it may be extended to other routes in the province's ferryboat system where similar conditions exist.

DESERONTO

St. Mark's Anglican Church Observes World Day of Prayer

Deseronto — The annual interdenominational Woman's Day of Prayer was held in St. Mark's Anglican Church, Deseronto, on Friday afternoon with a splendid attendance of women representing the churches of the town and district. The theme this year was "Christ Our Hope," taken from 1st. Timothy.

Mrs. Newton Thomas, president of St. Mark's Woman's Auxiliary, presided and was assisted by Mrs. F. H. Townsend, president of the United Church W.M.S., and Mrs. James Whitton, vice-president of the Presbyterian W.M.S.

Prayers of intercession were given by Mrs. William Cochrane and Mrs. R. McKee of the United Church; Mrs. F. E. Field for St. Mark's Church; Mrs. Leslie Pritchard for Christ's Church, and Mrs. C. F. Dimmell for the Church of the Redeemer.

Address Given

A brief address on the work around the world which our gifts help to make possible, was ably given by Mrs. F. H. Townsend. A solo, "Let Not Your Heart Be Troubled", was sung by Mrs. B. Herrington, accompanied at the organ by Mrs. A. S. Walker.

An offering, which goes to purchase Christian literature to be sent to all parts of the world was taken up by Mrs. H. Provins, of St. Jude's Church, Kingsford, and Mrs. Ernest Robinson of St. Mark's Church, and the dedicatory prayer read by Mrs. N. Thomas.

Women from 104 countries united in services of praise and prayer. The World Day of Prayer next year will be observed in the Presbyterian Church.

Rising Costs Factor in Big Sask. Water, Power Scheme

By GEORGE KITCHEN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, March 6 (CP)—A Royal Commission probing the economic feasibility of the proposed south Saskatchewan River irrigation and power project still is deep in its studies, with little indication that an early start can be made on the $125,000,000 scheme.

The commission plans to hold public hearings in the west this summer and informed sources say it won't be able to make its report before August at the earliest.

Thus, there appears to be little likelihood that parliament will be able to take any steps toward a start on the project in the current session. If there is a fall session, the report should be available then.

Government officials say the estimates to be placed before parliament this spring contain no appropriations for work on the scheme, though the government could decide to make some provision in supplementary estimates to be tabled later.

The project calls for the throwing up of a huge earthen dam— the biggest in the world—across the South Saskatchewan River below Saskatoon to create a 135-mile artificial lake, thus providing water for irrigation and production of power.

Cost of the undertaking has been placed at $103,000,000 with the federal government spending $68,000,000 and Saskatchewan $35,000,000, but officials now say those figures based on estimates made in 1947, have been out-dated by rising costs.

They suggest that $125,000,000—and probably even more—would represent a more realistic cost figure, with the federal government probably paying $85,000,000.

Engineers have determined that the project is feasible from an engineering standpoint, but the Royal Commission is trying to determine whether the economic benefits to Saskatchewan and the country as a whole would warrant heavy expenditures.

Plan Summer Hearings

The commission, established last year and headed by Dr. T. H. Hogg of Toronto, former chairman of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission will hear representations from the three prairie governments and other interested groups during public sessions this summer.

The objective is to provide stabilization for agriculture in central Saskatchewan, where prolonged droughts have created serious economic problems for more than 50,000 farmers. The population already is declining.

Other benefits would be flood control, power production, better urban water supplies, recreation and employment.

The dam, 210 feet high and 1 1-2 miles long, would be erected across the South Saskatchewan River about halfway between the towns of Elbow and Outlook. It would take 35,000,000 cubic yards of earth and gravel to complete it.

The water collected in the 135-mile long reservoir would be used primarily to irrigate approximately 600,000 acres of land in what is one of the worst dust-bowl areas of Saskatchewan, Canada's biggest wheat-producing province.

The area covers more than 300 miles and contains more than 50,000 farms.

Officials said the irrigation would at least double the productivity of the land, increase farm revenue, more than double the number of farms in the region and bring about an increase in both rural and urban population.

Power Potential

Power installations at the dam would be capable of producing 435,000,000 kilowatt hours of electrical energy each year, which is 1 1-2 times the present total power consumption in Saskatchewan.

As irrigation developed and more water was needed for that purpose, the quantity available for power production would decline until it reached 395,000,000 kilowatt hours a year.

The power output, it is expected, would facilitate the province's industrial development.

The dam would provide a means of regulating the flow of the river in flood periods while the diversion of water would provide an assured supply for Moose Jaw, Regina and other urban centres.

At the same time, the dam would raise the waters of the Qu'Appelle and Assiniboine Rivers in Manitoba and maintain the water levels of Long Lake and seven other lakes along the Qu'Appelle Valley. This would safeguard these areas as summer resorts.

Engineers estimate it would take 10 years to complete the dam, the cost of which would be borne by the federal government, then it would take another 25 to 30 years before the irrigational phases of the project would be in full operation. That province would take care of the costs of the irrigation works.

Construction of the over-all project would provide jobs for hundreds of workers for 25 years or more.

FAMOUS TREATY

The Treaty of Paris, by which French Canada was ceded to Britain, was signed in 1763.

Still Trying

Other French political figures having refused to attempt to form a government, Antoine Pinay, almost an unknown in French politics, is trying to reconcile differences within the French Assembly so that a majority of votes will support any government he might form. If he does not succeed, the party of Gen. Charles de Gaulle may take over, causing a revision of French NATO policy. — Central Press Canadian.

Public School H-S. Association Discusses Health Nurse Plans

Bancroft—A Founder's Day program, convened by Mrs. A. Gaebel, assisted by Mrs. A. W. Smith and Mrs. L. Freiburger, provided the theme for the February meeting of Bancroft Public School Home and School Association, held in the kindergarten room on Thursday.

After a brief address by Mrs. Gaebel the ceremonial candles, commemorating the aims and ideals of the association, were lit by Judy Gaebel, Miss Marjorie Morrison, Mrs. Elvin Bruce and Mrs. J. N. Brown. The dedication was completed with the singing of "My Task" by Mrs. E. Schram.

Tribute Paid for Work Done

Mrs. J. W. C. Hutton, treasurer of the local association, spoke briefly on the history of the local body, since formation Feb. 1948. On behalf of the members she paid tribute to the leadership to the leadership given by the four presidents—Mrs. W. R. Robinson, Mrs. C. Wright, Mrs. L. Moyd and Mrs. J. N. Brown. Among the projects completed by the association, she mentioned the hobby shows, Hallowe'en parties, providing a partime nurse and obtaining co-operation of the municipal council in removing the snow from the north sidewalk of Flint Street.

A letter from Alexander W. Smith, Inspector of Public Schools for North Hastings, giving skeleton details of a plan for a public health nurse, was read by the president, Mrs. J. N. Brown. In quoting a plan used in section of the provisional county of Haliburton, the communication from Mr. Smith stated that if a public health nurse were to be hired for the schools of North Hastings the probable cost would be $5,000. This sum included $2,500 for the nurse's salary and $2,500 for her expenses, with 33 1-3 percent of this paid by the provincial government and the remaindar by local taxation.

Must Pass Motions

To bring into operation a service of this type, Mr. Smith's letter stated that it would be necessary for the individual school boards to pass motions requesting the township and village councils to take the necessary action to form an inspectoral health unit.

The president, Mrs. J. N. Brown, stated that the matter would be discussed in detail at a future meeting at which Inspector Smith would be present.

During a brief discussion on the subject of the school nurse and health question, it was decided to have the secretary contact Mrs. Jas. Pitts and Mrs. R. Dafoe, president and secretary of Madoc Public School Home and School Association, to ascertain the views of their association on this subject.

Acting upon a recommendation from the executive it was decided that the annual hobby show would be held in June, instead of April, and that it would be a combined outdoor and indoor event.

The meeting closed with a social hour. Refreshments were served by the social committee, Mrs. G. Thomson, Mrs. E. Mather and Mrs. E. Maxwell.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was thinking to herself with a sad expression, saying to pop, My, William, it's strange how memories of music come back to you stronger than ever other kind. My my, sutch a lot of melody in sutch a little space, she said.

I had no idea I was putting on sutch a good show in the shower this morning, pop said, and ma said, I was thinking of dear little Peedro. It was remarkable how a tiny canary could fill the whole house with song. Sometimes I almost think I can still hear his cheery morning voice. Even on dull cloudy days Peedro's voice was just as cheerful. He litterly seemed to take the place of the sun, she said.

Yes, and even on brite days when there was plenty of sun, Peedro would get ahead of it, pop said. Sometimes he'd start as early as 5 in the morning. What ambition, he said, and ma said, Sometimes I used to imagine that Peedro was a skylark in some previous incarnation, and that he dimly remembered the bersts of melody that he used to pore dowr on the woods and fields.

I always rather thought that he had been a rooster on a farm in another incarnation, or maybe a locomotive whissle on a milk train, pop said. The only thing I can compare him to for sustained power was Benny with the whooping cawff when he was a baby. I've always regretted that we didn't have Peedro at the same time. That would of been a duet to remember, he said, and ma said, Now really, William, I meen really, I'm going to get another canary one of these days, I dont care what you say.

Why, what did I say? pop said.

The result being ma didn't even anser him.

MARSH HILL

Twenty-One Women Meet for World Day of Prayer

Marsh Hill — The World Day of Prayer was held at the home of Mrs. David Hollinger on Friday last, with 21 ladies from Marsh Hill and Holloway present.

Mrs. Berson Mitts played quiet music and then Mrs. Bartindale gave the call to worship. The theme, "Christ Our Hope", was carried out with five ladies being leaders: "Adoration," Mrs. Emburg Hough; "Penitence," Mrs. Don Rose; "Assurance," Mrs. Berson Mitts; "Intercession," Mrs. Bartindale"; "Dedication," Mrs. Ben Bleecker.

Intercessions

During the intercession period, prayers were offered by Mrs. Roth, Mrs. Allyn Finkle, Mrs. Walter Lindenfield, Mrs. Fred Campbell, and Mrs. Bert Searles.

An address, "Talents and Responsibility," was given by Mrs. Frank Finkle, who said: "God, by giving man distinctive gifts takes him into partnership with Him and man is responsible to God for these gifts.

"We are to use our gifts or talents in His work and if we do not we are shirking our responsibilities and making it harder for others, as we each have a work to do. Are we using our talents? How often God waits in vain for a song or a prayer, or some small token of love which is not given because it can not be done in a large way."

Mrs. Leslie Finkle favored with a solo, "In Jesus".

The offering was received and dedicated by Mrs. Bartindale.

After the benediction the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Allyn Finkle, Mrs. Charlie Ross and Miss Whan served refreshments.

WILL DISINFECT SHIPS

Manila, March 6—(AP) — The Philippines government announced today that all ships arriving from Korea, China or Hong Kong will be disinfected as a precaution against bubonic plague.

The order was inspired by communist broadcasts that bubonic plague is sweeping North Korea. The reds charge the United Nations command started it with germ warfare. The allies say the charge is preposterous.

DID NOT RELEASE PUPILS

Peterborough, March 6—(CP) — Absent - minded professors are not confined to colleges. A few members of the W.I. met at the home of Mrs. Everett Phillips and were busy piecing a quilt.

Mr. and Mrs. Carlton and family are moving in their new home where Mr. Carlton is cheese-maker in the factory.

Measles and mumps are the present epidemics, as a large number of children are out of school and a few grown ups are confined to their homes with measles.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harris called on Mr. John Hogg in Trenton, recently. Mr. Hogg is improving slowly after his fall and will be celebrating his 92nd birthday, March 8th. His many friends and neighbors will be extending congratulations and wishing he will be spared to see many more.

March certainly came in like a lamb with the sun shining brightly and spring house-cleaning is again heard by the ladies while the men are busy hauling their wood.

Mrs. Charles Fair is confined to her bed with a severe attack of the measles. All hope she will soon be around.

FRANKFORD

Frankford—The play "Simple Simon Simple," presented in the Rose-Lowery Hall, Wednesday night was well attended, and those attending report an excellent performance.

Many Frankford citizens will be sorry to learn of the death of Rev. Charles Lohnes in Cadillac, Mich., on Monday February, 25. Mr. Lohnes was a retired minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church and was well known by many of the older residents of Frankford, having grown up and attended school in this district.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Allen of Oshawa visited friends in the village this week.

Miss Lillian Casement of Peterborough district, visited her father, Mr. Lew Casement, one day this week.

The Frankford Boy Scouts held their weekly meeting in the Community Hall Friday evening: It was hobby night for the Scouts, with many working on model aircraft and wood working projects, others on drawing, wood burning and various hobbies. Individual instruction was given and several of the scouts passed tests. Earl Rose earned his artist's badge.

The boys are hoping that it will be possible in the near future to have Captain Ed Loucks back for another talk on mapping. Captain Loucks last week gave the boys an interesting and practical lecture on topographical map reading and use.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lohnes, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Smith and Vernon, Mrs. Buck were Friday evening guests of Mr. Carl Lohnes.

Mr. Carl Lohnes attended a surprise birthday party for Mrs. Cecil Tripp of Frankford held at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Fred Payne in Batawa Friday night.

Several boys have asked to join the 1st Frankford Scout Troop, but it has been necessary to refuse them because of lack of help in leadership. As yet, the sponsoring group has been unsuccessful in obtaining any assistant for the scoutmaster.

The boys of Marilyn Wannamaker's Sunday School class of the United Church, enjoyed a party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Canning Friday evening. For the first hour, the boys enjoyed television. Then, games and recreation were organized, following which refreshments were served.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Bamber and family of Hamilton visited friends in the district on Saturday.

Mr. Arnold Westlake of Deseronto visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Westlake over the weekend.

STIRLING

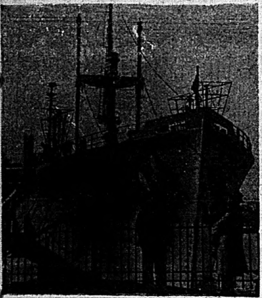
Democracy's Voice Ready for Duty



The new floating radio station the U.S. cutter Courier went into operation in Washington with President Truman broadcasting an appeal for peace to the people of communist-dominated countries. Deadlocked Truce Talks Bog Down By New Demands

Munsan, Korea, March 6. (AP)—The deadlocked Korean truce talks bogged down even further today as communist negotiators insisted that neutral teams including Russians be permitted to inspect secret equipment during an armistice.

Staff officers working on truce supervision wrangled fruitlessly for more than an hour but the prisoner exchange sub-committee called it a day after only 12 minutes.

The deadlock has become so serious observers here said they believe only action at the top level can end the stalemate.

There was no hint that a shift in the Allied position was in the offing.

Col. Don O. Darrow told newspaper men the communist demand for inspection of secret equipment might be "just another needling device". But he added:

"If they could get Russian teams down to look at our equipment, that would be highly desirable from their point of view."

The Allied proposal provides that neutral teams should make inspections to "properly insure" that neither side is introducing new equipment during a truce. However, the proposal specifies that the teams would not be allowed to check "secret designs or characteristics of any combat aircraft, armored vehicles, weapons or ammunition."

The reds said the U.N. was merely trying to block a thorough inspection.

See By-Elections In Federal Seats Before June Ends

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL

Ottawa, March 6 (CP)—A miniature general election may be held in late spring or early summer. Five of the 262 House of Commons seats now are vacant, and a sixth is a possibility. The government may decide to fill all the vacancies at the same time, through by-elections in late May or mid-June.

Present vacancies are in the federal constituencies of Victoria-Carleton, N.B.; Outremont-St. Jean Que.; Brome - Missisquoi, Que.; Waterloo North, Ont., and the constituency of Ontario, around Oshawa, Ont.

Another possible vacancy is the constituency of Gloucester, N.B. Clovis T. Richard, Liberal member for the riding, is being mentioned for a post on the New Brunswick bench.

Present standing in the Commons; Lib. 183; P.C. 45; CCF 13; Social Credit 10; Ind. 4; Ind.-L. 2; vacant 5. Total 262.

The government has until April 10 to fix a date for a by-election in Ontario constituency, vacant by resignation last October of Walter Thomson, who left the Federal House to lead the Liberal party in the Ontario provincial election. There is a statutory requirement that a by-election date must be decided within six months after a seat becomes vacant.

The government however could announce in April that the Ontario riding by-election would be held in May or June, along with others needed to fill vacancies.

Old Liberal Seat

The Liberals have held Ontario constituency almost continuously since it was established in 1924. Liberal members were returned from 1926 until 1948 when Arthur Williams, CCF candidate, won the seat by a by-election. Mr. Thomson regained the seat for the Liberals in the 1949 general election.

In that election, Mr. Thomson polled 13,412 votes compared with 9,803 for F. N. McCallum of the Progressive Conservatives and 9,344 for Mr. Williams.

Waterloo North became vacant in January when the Liberal member for the riding—. O. Breithaupt —was appointed Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario.

In the 1949 election, Mr. Breithaupt had 11,601 votes; H. J. Graber Progressive Conservative, 10,105; and G. Milling CCF, 625.

In general elections and by-elections since confederation, Waterloo North has returned a Liberal 18 times and a Conservative six times.

Quebec Vacancies

In Quebec, Outrement-St. Jean vacancy was caused by the recent appointment of Hon. Edouard Rinfret to the Quebec Court of Queen's Bench.

The seat, established in the redistribution of 1947, gave Mr. Rinfret 16,215 votes in the last general election. His sole opponent, A. Belanger of the Progressive Conservatives, obtained 5,030.

Brome-Missisquoi, another consistently Liberal seat, was made vacant through the death of Henri Gosselin, who carried the seat for the Liberals in the last election with 8,831 votes. V. Leonard, Progressive Conservative, obtained 6,266; G. A. Chevalier of L'Union des Electeurs, 396, and G. M. St. Amour, CCF, 279.

In New Brunswick, the Victoria-Carleton vacancy resulted from the January death of H. H. Hatfield, Progressive Conservative. The seat established in 1914, has been held mostly by Conservatives. Mr. Hatfield held it successively from 1940.

In the last election, Mr. Hatfield polled 10,429 votes against 8,539 for D. R. Bishop, his Liberal opponent.

HAWKS - PETES

Tomorrow night the senior Hawks take off on what should be a thrilling semi-finals group of battles with the league - leading Peterborough Petes. The crews engage in a best-of-seven series, with the Petes back here Monday evening for the second scuffle.

The Hawks are reported to be in good shape after a restful layoff with the exception of Maureece Lefort who left a trio of his front line molars nestling in the confines of the Clinton Arena. Lefort stopped a Clinton shillalagh with his teeth, forgot to let go and the stick took out or damaged the little French Canadians front-line crunchers. Anyway at the moment he can't whistle nor bite apples and he speaks with a definite lisp. He had dental surgery performed on his mouth the other day but will likely make the trip to Peterborough tomorrow night.

According to statistics the teams each won five and lost five over the scheduled route, but as someone will point out that is water under the bridge. The Hawks who lost nine out of their last ten starts through injury and sickness, have been going through their paces in an effort to regain the form that kept them at the top of the group heap for half of the schedule. If they hit their stride and it may take a game or so, the series with the Petes should produce some furious hockey before the final whistles toot.

FLYERS SQUARE SERIES!

Trenton Flyers zoomed back into the Trent Valley Hockey League southern section finals picture with a vengeance last night squaring the series with the Glen Roys at one each with an 8-4 setback of the city team. Flyers played a fierce-checking game travelling at top speed both ways and showing plenty of scoring punch in front of the nets. Glens plays were not clicking plus the fact they were met by a stubborn Flyer defence and some outstanding work by the Flyer goalie. The game was fast, a bit rugged at times but the refs had the situation in hand all through the tilt. The third game of the best-of-five series takes place at Brighton tomorrow night.

COME, COME MIKE!

The Royal Military College-West Point hockey amenities over, Michael Q. Rodden, sports scrivener east o' here, picks up his javelin, points it west and resumes the needling of everything and anything pertaining to the Belleville Hawks, junior and senior size. Thus far the Rodden barbs have not been directed at the midgets or peewees.

Mr. Rodden has indulged in more adjectives anent the Hawks large and small during the current season that would shame a South Sea Island resort press agent. Our sides have been "amazing", "dejected", "chagrined", "floundering", "deflated", "thundering" according to the output of Don Miguel's typewriter.

Of late he has realized that Kingston has a junior "B" team that has proved itself "some punkins" in the group semi-finals playoffs. Commenting on that, Mr. Rodden opines or infers that a "rumor" to the effect that the Lindsay-Vics series should not have been settled by the point system originated in Belleville.

Mr. Rodden could not have recovered from the effect caused by gay RMC-West Point uniforms and the accompanying color and whatnot or he would not have indulged in such a flight of fancy.

Being an astute observer of hockey, Mr. Rodden should have known that the Hawks preferred meeting the Vics, if not from a playing standpoint then from a transportation angle. It didn't make any difference actually, whom the Hawks met in finals conflict. They ARE curious, however, as to which team they will meet in the first round of the junior "B" playdowns.

JUNIOR BADMINTON TOURNAMENT

Over 100 junior badminton players will congregate here on Saturday as guests of the Garrison Badminton Club at the first junior tournament held in the city. Play will take place at the Bridge Street Armouries.

Garrison Club president Harold Vaughan said today that entries, all under eighteen years of age, are expected from Oshawa, Bowmanville, Port Hope, Peterborough, Trenton and Belleville. Fifteen young players from this city will see action.

Play will start at one p.m. Saturday and the tournament is expected to finish around eight o'clock. Champions will be decided in mens' singles and doubles, ladies' singles and doubles, and mixed doubles.

Following the tournament the visiting teen-agers will be guests of the Garrison Club at a supper to be held in the main lecture room of the armouries.

President Vaughan, Kay Smith, Chris Lockyer, Col. and Mrs. Tatham, Gordy and Mrs. Wellard and others of the Garrison Club will look after the play as well as the well-being of the youthful participants.

Scottish Curlers To Tour Canada

Winnipeg, March 6. (CP)—Seventy-five Scottish curlers — in three 25-man teams from the Royal Caledonian Curling Club—will tour Canada in January, 1953.

Arrangements for the tour were announced today at the annual meeting of the Dominion Curling Association.

A single team toured Canada in 1948-1949. A program committee report said the 1948-1949 team found the trip strenuous and the RCCCC suggested that travel requirements would be eased by sending three teams of 25 curlers.

One team will visit each of the following areas: Maritimes-Quebec, Ontario-Manitoba and Saskatchewan-Alberta-British Columbia.

Strathcona Cup matches will be played in 12 five-game matches. Four 12-end matches will be played in each area.

Maple Leafs Hang 6-2 Defeat On Canadiens to Cut Habs Second-Place Margin to Two

Toronto Maple Leafs hung a 6-2 defeat on Montreal Canadiens and drew two points closer to their second-place rivals with the win at Maple Leaf Gardens last night.

First Period

Morrison started on defence in place of Gus Mortson, out with an injury.

Referee Chadwick bore down hard from the start. In less than seven minutes he penalized five players—two Leafs and three Canadiens. The Leafs crashed in on a two-man advantage while Bouchard and Harvey were off together for a goal with Bentley and Sloan. The goalies performed spectacularly in the early stages.

Toronto went ahead 2-0 on a breakaway play while they were one man short through a penalty to Balfour. Sloan made the play all the way. He got the puck out from his own end and tricked both Johnson and Bouchard before moving in to fire an ankle-high shot past McNeil.

With Bouchard off for tripping, McNeil made a sparkling play on Meeker during a Toronto power-play. He froze the puck while the Toronto winger was right beside him.

Second Period

Morrison, playing brilliantly on defence, broke out on a play which brought three quick shots that McNeil stopped and a fourth that went over his head. Smith shot the Leafs into a 3-0 lead with his second goal of the game. A pass from Thomson sent the swift left winger away and he outdistanced both Johnson and McPherson in his dash down the ice.

The Canadiens bottled up the Leafs for more than a minute during a tripping penalty to Thomson, Harvey and Flaman got into a high-sticking joust along the boards and the Montreal player wound up with a major penalty. His stick caught Flaman in the face and the Toronto defenceman was down, bleeding Flaman was given a minor.

Geoffrion scored while the Canadiens had a one-man edge. He tipped in Meger's shot from the blueline. Bentley got a misconduct for arguing a high-sticking penalty.

It was learned that Flaman suffered a fractured cheekbone in his clash with Harvey. Flaman continued to play after a trip to the hospital room.

Meeker took Gardiner's pass and made it 4-1 while Leafs had a two-man edge. Harvey and St. Laurent were off at the time. The penalties lapped by a minute.

Third Period

Sloan, moving to centre because of Bentley's misconduct penalty, paired with Thomson to give the Leafs a 5-1 lead. The Canadiens managed only two short bursts of power while Meeker sat out a high sticking penalty.

Manitoba Rink Still Unbeaten In Title Curling

By AL VICKERY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, March 6 (CP)—Nova Scotia suffered its first defeat yesterday in the Canadian curling championship, leaving Manitoba the only unbeaten rink.

The 9-8 loss to Reg Stone of Trail, B.C. dropped the maritimers into a three-way tie for second place with Ontario and Alberta. Each has four wins and one loss. British Columbia follows in fifth place with four wins in six starts.

Manitoba, after drawing a bye last night in sixth round play, now sports a 5-0 record and a big chance to wrap up the championship today. The Winnipeg rink meets lowly Prince Edward Island which has lost five of its six games, in the seventh round and takes on winless Newfoundland in the eighth.

The key game of the spile may come in the ninth round tonight when Manitoba and Nova Scotia clash.

In sixth-round play last night, Dr. J. R. Clark of Ontario had to go all out to win 9-6 from the stubborn Newfoundland rink, skipped by Tommy Tomelin of Corner Brook. Alberta defeated Quebec 13-11; Saskatchewan outlasted Northern Ontario 14-10, while New Brunswick trounced P.E.I. 14-8.

The British Columbia-Nova Scotia game drew the most attention with Manitoba's Billy Walsh on the sidelines. It was a see-saw battle all the way, with B.C.'s deadly knockout game on the last end preserving the lead.

Stratford Loses Third Straight; Dutchies Win

Kitchener, March 6 —Kitchener Greenshirts defeated Owen Sound Mercurys 7-6 here last night in their OHA Senior 'A' semi-final. Owen Sound leads the best-of-seven series 2-1.

In Stratford, the Indians lost their third straight playoff game, bowing to the Brantford Redmen by a 5-3 score.

Villemain Favorite

Syracuse, N.Y., March 6. (AP)—Robert Villemain, bouncing French middleweight, and Joey de John, Syracuse slugger, will meet in a 10-round bout tonight, expected to sell out the 9,240 seat Onondaga County war memorial building. Villemain is a 3-1 favorite to whip de John.

Canny Jake La Motta Earns Draw With Hard-Punching Gene Hairston

Detroit, March 6—(AP)—Jake La Motta, the former middleweight champion, won't have to hang up his boxing gloves.

The 30-year-old fighter, showing the strain of 12 years campaigning in the professional ring, gained a 10-round draw with up-and-coming Eugene (Silent) Hairston last night. Some thought the Bronx Bull was pretty lucky at that.

On the eve of the bout, La Motta let it be known he would retire for good if the 23-year-old Hairston beat him decisively.

Now La Motta says he is going to keep on fighting. He wants a shot at Joe Maxim's light heavyweight title.

Lost No Prestige

The hard-punching Hairston lost no prestige in the bout which he hoped would earn him a chance at the middleweight title.

A holler went up from Hairston's corner when the decision was announced. Manager Mike Miele declared La Motta had paced himself, fighting in the last few minutes of each round to impress the judges.

La Motta's tactics paid off. Both judges scored it as even 50 points for each boxer. Referee Morris Sherman gave the verdict to Hairston by a 52-48 margin. Under Michigan rules the majority decision made it a draw.

Hairston, who used to work as an attendant in La Motta's Bronx, N. Y., parking lot, was up against something of a "home-town boy" even if La Motta hails from the Bronx. It was La Motta's 19th bout in a Detroit ring and he has a lot of admirers here. It was in Detroit that La Motta won the middleweight crown from the late Marcel Cerdan of France.

Hairston Hit Harder

The dusky Hairston seemed to land harder and sharper punches than La Motta but failed to achieve his ambition of being the first to knock the Bronx Bull off his feet. There were no knockdowns. Both fighters were warned several times as they tossed low blows.

La Motta weighed 168½, a seven and a half pound advantage over Hairston.

A crowd of 10,039 fans paid a gross gate of $31,457.30—the best for a fight here since the Ezzard Charles-Jersey Joe Walcott heavyweight championship bout in March of 1951.

Jack Sharkey Is Expert Fly-Caster

New York March 6 —(AP) — Shortly the ice will be out of Maine's lakes and streams, and Jack Sharkey will head for Lake Sebago to renew his acquaintance with a lot of fish.

"Anyone who loves the outdoors will never get in trouble," says the big guy who lifted the world heavyweight boxing crown from Germany's Max Schmeling 20 years ago come June 21.

Sharkey, born Joseph Paul Zukauskas in Binghamton, N.Y., is one of the attractions at the annual Sportsmen's Show.

What Does He Do?

"I appear twice a day at the water tank (a big portable affair the size of a swimming pool) and do some fly-casting.

"Then I flick a cigaret out of a guy's mouth 60 feet away."

Sharkey's nearing 50, but still looks as if he could flatten many of the pugilists masquerading as heavyweights these days.

"I've been fishing practically all my life, but didn't start fly casting until 1926," he says.

How long does it take to learn to flick cigarets out of people's mouths?

"Look, pal, I can still take lessons there."

Sharkey spends January, February and March each year on the Sportsmen's Show circuit. The rest of the time it's up in the woods with rod and reel.

"Sebago, Moosehead, then up to Nova Scotia for some trout, and over to New Brunswick for the Salmon. I used to spend a small fortune to do what they pay me to do now.

"And, you don't get punched on the chin in this business," he added.

St. Mikes Majors Defeat Galt By 6-3 Score

Galt, March 6. —Toronto St Michael's Majors moved in front in their O.H.A. Junior A best-of-five B series against Galt Black Hawks last night blasting their way to a 6-3 victory. Galt finished third in the 10-team league, St. Michael's fourth.

Galt took a 1-0 lead in the first period, but the Majors came back with four answered goals in the second period and went ahead 6-1 in the third before the Hawks struck for their final two markers.

Second game of the series will be played in Toronto Friday night.

Galt's general manager, Al Murray, said tonight that the Hawks were playing the series with St. Michael's under protest because the Irish didn't finish their league schedule. He contends that both Toronto teams, St. Mike's and Marlboros, should forfeit their $500 bond to the O.H.A. for not finishing their quota of 54 games.

The Toronto teams were scheduled to meet Tuesday in the finals. However, after consulting the O.H.A., they were allowed to postpone it so that St. Mike's could get on with this playoff set.

Galt, however, was forced to play Tuesday night in Kitchener and then start their playoffs with the Toronto double blues tonight. Although Red Hamill was able to rest six of his regulars and fill in with "B" and juvenile players, Murray contends that this gives St. Mikes an unfair advantage.

Three Years Ago Minor Loop Manager Now Phils First String Receiver

Clearwater, Fla., March 6 (AP)—Three years ago he was a minor league manager, his brief and profitless major league career apparently behind him. Today Delbert Wilber is the first string catcher for the Philadelphia Phillies' knee-deep pitching staff, believed by many to be the best in baseball.

That's the Horatio Alger story of this resolute receiver who refused to heed the advice of the St. Louis Cardinal front office when it told him to forsake the playing end for a career as a pilot. Last year he returned unheralded from the minors and proceeded to win the No. 1 catching job away from Andy Seminick, long a fixture with the Phils.

Five Years in Army

Wilber chose the playing end after he had put in a year managing the Houston team in the Texas League. That was in 1949. Wilber was 30 then and apparently in the twilight of his career, a mediocre one at that. A promising future had all but been expunged by a five-year stay in the army.

Discharged in 1946, he managed to catch on as a bullpen catcher with the Redbirds but he couldn't convince anybody he was a real big leaguer.

Wilber relinquished the Houston reins in 1950 and was optioned to Rochester where he caught nearly every game, batted over .300 and was named to the International League's all-star team. Del was drafted by the Phillies.

"The Phillies drafted me for protective purposes," Wilber related. "I got a chance one day when Andy got beaned. From then on I did most of the catching."

Trenton Flyers Defeat Glen Roy To Even Series

Trenton RCAF Flyers evened their Trent Valley Hockey League southern section finals series with the Belleville Glen Roys here last night defeating the city team 8-4 to square matters at one game each.

The third game of the best-of-five series will be played in Brighton on Friday night.

Flyers playing a hard-checking game went down a goal in the early minutes of 1st period when Hatfied scored for the Glens, but after that were never headed. True some outstanding work on the part of Scott their goalie especially in the third period robbed the Glens of not a few goals but on the whole the air crew earned their victory.

Hard Checking Game

They stopped the Glens' attacks cold at times with both-way checking while they proved very effective around the goal.

They grabbed a two-one lead in the first heat, added two more without a return in the second period and outscored the Glens 4-3 in a rugged third period to grab the honors.

The game was clean albeit the going was rugged at times with referees Don Barrett and Red Carson handing out nine penalties five going to the Flyers.

Beatch, sparsely-thatched Flyer forward stole the Flyer scoring spotlight notching no less than five goals. Dickson, McDonald and O'Meara were credited with the rest albeit two of the Flyers goals were deflected in the net off Glen players.

Hatfield and Loveless stood out for the losers with the former scoring two with an assist and Loveless potting one and being credited with three helpers. Mulvihill got the other.

Parnall, Bruce, Beatch and Scott were the pick of the winners with Hatfield, Loveless, Mulvihill and Cousins going well for the Glens.

The teams

Glen Roy—Goal, Plumley, defence, York, Hurst; centre, Cousins; wings, B. Mulvihill, Williams; subs, Bone, Hatfield, Adams, Loveless, Goyer, Whalen, D. Jones, DeRushie.

RCAF Flyers—Goal, Scott; defence, Bruce, Pumple; centre, Parnall; wings McDonald, O'Meara; subs, Faulkner, Beatch, Bowman, Attrill, Roberge, McLean; Racicot, Dickson, Bridgman.

Referees: "Red" Carson, Don Barrett, Belleville.

CAHA Prexy Recommends Canada Drop Olympic Hockey Competition

Vancouver, March 6. (CP) — Doug Grimston, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said yesterday he will recommend Canada drop out of Olympic hockey competition.

"There is no use carrying on any longer," he said. "European nations in particular, will not agree to uniform rules. As a result every game is confusion of shinny, with a sprinkling of hockey."

Grimston arrived home from the Games today.

"In Europe bodychecking is not permitted. . . .You cannot skate with your opposing check. If you do and if you hit his stick, that's interference. What we call 'shadowing' is bad taste over there."

He said Russia has virtually decided to enter a hockey team in the 1956 Olympics. He found this out at a hockey meeting at the Olympic Games which the Russians asked permission to attend.

He also told of an exchange he had with the Russians.

"They informed the press that we had tied with the United States so that the Americans could finish in second place.

"I told them they were crybabies, and that's quite a feat getting it over to them, as they use an interpreter who only speaks French."

Accused of Taking Souvenir From Yemen

U.S. archeologist Wendell Phillips has been accused of smuggling a statue of the Queen of Sheba out of Yemen and the government has demanded its return, according to a Cairo source. Member of an excavating party, Phillips fled when beset by hostile tribesmen. He complained to Yemen's King Iman Ahmed that $200,000 in equipment was left behind at Mareb, site of Sheba's ancient capital. — Central Press Canadian.

Saved From Suspension By Uncle Sam's Call

Emile Gauthier, chairman of the Montreal Athletic Commission, clamped down a $500 fine on world featherweight champion Sandy Saddler, above, for the roughness which led him to be disqualified after the third round of his fight with Armand Savoie in Montreal. Gauthier, who announced the fine following a meeting with matchmaker Raoul Godbout and referee Tommy Sullivan, added that only impending military service saved the New York fighter from a suspension. It was the second time in recent months that Saddler has been in trouble because of a roughhouse. He was suspended by the New York commission last summer following his victory over Willie Pep in a title go. — Central Press Canadian.

Tennis Club Holds Meeting

A recent meeting of the tennis committee of the Quinte Skating and Tennis Club was held at the clubrooms to prepare plans for the coming year.

An attractive program is being developed for this year to add to the playing enjoyment of all members. It is proposed to hold more tournaments within the club with special attention being given to the junior membership.

Accent is also being placed on social activities using facilities of the clubhouse to the fullest extent with social evenings for both the seniors and the juniors.

It was decided to enter a senior and intermediate club in the Bay of Quinte Tennis League again this year. Bob Lucy and Madge Cowley were named as delegates to the forthcoming annual league meeting on March 13th. Weather permitting, it is hoped that all four courts will be in playing condition by the middle of May.

Les Digby is chairman of this year's committee with Dr. Brearley and Dan Cowley forming the courts committee, Bob Lucy the games committee, Madge Cowley and Alex Cunningham the membership committee, with Mrs. Brearley and Mrs. Wilkes forming the social committee.

Jack Dickens, president of the Quinte Skating and Tennis Club, was present at the meeting.

Area G. Wins Over Water Street

Area G took the second game of their semi-finals series in the Northern Electric Hockey League last night defeating Water Street by a 5-3 score.

The winners piled up a 4-0 lead in the first period but were outscored 2-1 in the second heat. They were held scoreless in the third session with the Streeters racking up a single goal.

Jones was the chief trigger man for the winners scoring a pair and getting an assist. Bone, Thornton and Moore fired the rest.

McCabe had a goal and an assist for the losers with J. Barrett and Holland scoring the other pair.

Speckled Trout Color Films Get Premiere Here

Two new full-color sound motion pictures produced by The Carling Conservation Club — one of them describing the wild life resources of Hastings and Lennox and Addington Counties — will be shown for the first time at a screening arranged in Belleville Friday by the Tourist and Publicity Committee of the County of Hastings and the City of Belleville.

The films were produced by Carling's as part of a series to arouse public interest in the need for conserving Canada's wild life and natural resources.

MAYOR PERC KETCHESON

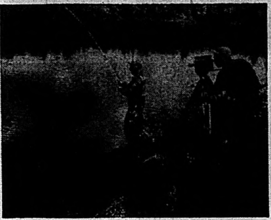
One film, "Duel in the Pool", was filmed in some of the Belleville areas finest fishing spots and featuring Major P. J. (Ketch) Ketcheson of Napanee, roving secretary of The Carling Conservation Club and Ralph Seaman, United States secretary of the Club.

The second film, "Speckled Trout", is a documentary describing the life and habits of this popular game fish. By the use of time-lapse photography, important stages in the life cycle of a fish — such as the hatching of an egg — can be compressed into a few seconds on the screen, permitting the audience to see the fish actually emerging from the egg.

The film also has numerous close-ups of the fish and describes the operation of fish hatcheries and the restocking of pools.

Both pictures were filmed by William R. Carrick, Carling's roving cameraman, and editing and sound was by Crawley Films Limited, Ottawa. Both are available for showing to fish and game clubs, service clubs, fraternal and veterans groups and other interested organizations.

'Hold It, Ketch, Looks Like a Beauty!'



William R. Carrick, the Carling Conservation Club cameraman, focuses on the club's secretary, Major P. J. (Ketch) Ketcheson, of Napanee, during the filming of "Duel in the Pool," a new Carling's color motion picture describing the wildlife resources of Hastings and Lennox and Addington Counties. "Duel in the Pool" and "Speckled Trout," another Carling's production, will have their first showings at a special screening in Belleville arranged by the Tourist and Publicity Committee of the City of Belleville and the County of Hastings.

Toss of Coin Gets Greenshirts Fifth Place

Toronto, March 6 (CP)—A toss of a coin today gave Kitchener Greenshirts the right to fifth place in the OHA Junior A League standing.

In their final league game last night, Kitchener defeated Galt Black Hawks 8-5, to tie St. Catharines Teepees for the No. 5 spot. OHA regulations state goal averages, to three decimal points, decide the foremost team in case of a tie. Both teams had a .530 average, so the toss was held in the OHA offices.

The teams open their best of five C series in Kitchener Friday night. Second game will be played Saturday night in St. Catharines with the dates of other games to be announced later.

Foot-and-Mouth Victim

Here is one of the Regina district's foot-and-mouth disease victims. White slobbering from the mouth is one of the major symptoms. Often blisters appear on the tongue and udders of stricken dairy cows. This photo of one of the victims of the outbreak was taken by the Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture.—(CP Photo.)

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

The cumbersome systems of bridge put harm in harmony. The Horse Sense method puts sure in pleasure. You discover this at the start when it comes to counting tricks.

Count one trick for each high card (ace or king or queen) and one trick for each short card (short of average of three). Nothing else. All the scientists on earth could not find an easier way.

If your opening bid is one you promise, among other things, not less than five tricks. If your opening bid is two in a suit you assure partner that your hand contains at least nine tricks.

Look at the deal shown here:

NORTH
♠A 8 6 5
♥J 4 3
♦9 8 5
♣A 7 2

WEST
♠K
♥K Q 10 9 8 6 2
♦None
♣J 10 9 8 5

EAST
♠Q J 9 7 4 3 2
♥7
♦J 7 3 2
♣4

SOUTH
♠10
♥A 5
♦A K Q 10 6 4
♣K Q 6 3

You are the south dealer. Count your tricks. Two aces, two kings, two queens; six high cards. Two shorts in spades, one short in hearts; three short cards. Total nine tricks. Open with two in a suit.

The purpose of opening a hand with two in a suit is to signal partner that your pair must reach at least a game. In the process of getting there you tell each other what you can.

But competition is always in a two-way stretch. If unable to win points you try to lose the least. If opponents may win points, you prefer to take a loss for less.

When you open with two diamonds, west will prefer to bid even if his pair is defeated. Providing his loss will not exceed game worth. In this case his two heart bid will not worry him.

Later, you and your partner may show enough to make a slam. If so, west and east may decide to bid six in one of their suits. This they may do if their loss will be less than your side can make.

In experienced play, the skilled can frequently tell when such a sacrifice is worth taking. But you have to know when or the use of such tactics can ruin you. As many partners probably have.

Havana, March 6 — (Reuters) — Three persons were injured yesterday when a bomb exploded in the centre of Havana at a building where a leading opposition politician has his offices

Arden United Church Burns, Loss $40,000

Arden, Ont., March 6 (CP)—A $40,000 fire late yesterday destroyed the United Church in this community 45 miles north of Kingston.

Loss included a pipe organ installed five years ago and a new furnace, as well as all the furnishings, choir gowns and hymn books.

Four hundred persons from the village and the surrounding district quickly organized a bucket brigade but firefighters who sought to enter the building were forced back by flames and intense heat.

Cause of the fire was not definitely established. The congregation will probably use the village hall for services until other arrangements can be made.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, March 6 (AP)—"Romance and ballet do not mix too well," sighed Maria Tallchief, latest of the ballerinas to be imported to Hollywood.

Miss Tallchief, one of the stars of the New York Centre Ballet, was brought here to portray Anna Pavlova in "The One-Piece Bathing Suit." Her Indian-sounding name is the McCoy; she was born in Oklahoma to an Osage father and Scottish-Irish mother. The young dancer isn't like the aloof ballerina of legend. She talked animatedly on many topics, including matters of the heart.

"Of course, some people in the ballet do get married and have families," she said. "But many people find that mixing ballet and marriage is too difficult.

Odd Habits

"For instance, when I am doing a night performance, I generally have dinner at four o'clock in the afternoon. Then I have a bite to eat after the performance. It would be hard to find a man who could understand and adjust to such odd habits.

"A ballet performer would have little time to devote to a home, what with practising and rehearsing. Then there are the tours. I will be leaving soon when our company tours Europe for five months. How could I explain that to a husband?"

Miss Tallchief added that the most likely mate for a ballerina would be someone who was also connected with the ballet. She tried that herself but failed. Her marriage to George Ballachine, the famous ballet director, was annulled.

Little Temperament

The ballerina punctured some beliefs about the ballet, particularly concerning temperament.

"The old-time ballerina who would blow up at the slightest mishap is a thing of the past," she remarked. "Dancers don't make big scenes backstage any more; the companies just won't put up with it.

"Of course, I don't mean to say that there is no temperament in the ballet. Naturally, when you get so many sensitive people together, there is bound to be some temper. But they are generally minor flare-ups over such things as the orchestra tempo not being right."

BCI Girl Cagers Split Victories With OSD Teams

By BETTE AND BEV.

In the collegiate gym on Tuesday night, B. C. I. Seniors defeated O. S. D. 21-10 while O. S. D. downed the Juniors 30-18

SENIORS

In their last game of the schedule B. C. I. racked up another win to end up in top spot with no losses to their credit. They will now travel to Toronto on the weekend of March 14 to compete in the Senior C. O. S. S. A.

The locals will play an exhibition fixture against Kingston Seniors in the collegiate gym next Monday, March 10. Come on out and see your team in action.

High scorer for the locals was Diane Gourley with 8 points. Doris Kerr was next with 5, while Diane Gibson and Barbara Bennett followed close behind with 4 points apiece.

O. S. D. was paced by the brilliant performance of L. Cayer who tallied all of the 10 points.

Lineup

Belleville—Barbara Bennett 4, Diane Gibson 4, Diane Gourley 8, Doris Kerr 5, Eve Robbins, Beth Wilbur, Carol Weston, Dene Lawrence, Elinor McCormick, Joan Walden, B. J. Goodwin, Betty Seldon.

O. S. D.—L. Cayer 10, A. Allen, E. Garnett, D. McArthur, J. Lazarauick, E. Manoryk, L. McOrmond, I. Muir, J. Thow.

JUNIORS

B. C. I. Juniors met O. S. D. in their last game of the season and were defeated 30-18. In their recent games they have shown improved form, and their prospects for next year look very good. We hope to see you in their pitching again next season so keep up the good work, girls!

For the winners Alberta Fox and Anne Bennett were tied with 6 points apieces. Marjorie Kellet was next with four points going to her credit.

For O. S. D. Doreen Brown played an outstanding game scoring 20 of the 30 points.

Lineup

'Curtain at 8.30' Presents Musical 'Dancing Years'

"Dancing Years" a sprightly musical comedy in technicolor now in its 11th year in London is the feature attraction of "Curtain at 8.30" at the Capitol Theatre tonight.

Written by Ivor Novello, famous British playwright, 'Dancing Years' is a lavish screen version of the most successful musical plays ever written. It has been viewed by more than six million people.

The film stars Dennis Price and Giselle Preville, and should be a "must" for lovers of musical comedy.

ONLY TWO INJURED

Tokyo, March 6 — (AP) — A giant stratocruiser hospital plane carrying 58 patients cracked up on a take-off from Haneda airport today but only two were injured. Pieces of propeller blades broke off and hit them when the props crashed on the runway. Their injuries were described as slight. The plane's landing gear collapsed as the C-97 was racing down the runway for its take-off for Midway Island.

AT THE BELLE — Greer Garson and Fernando Lamas make a romantic twosome in one of the screen's great stories, MGM's "The Law and The Lady," starring Michael Wilding and Marjorie Main. An Edgar Kennedy comedy and M.G.M. Color Cartoon are among the shorts.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR FRIDAY, MARCH 7

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—No day for idling, carelessness or recklessness; there's a tendency toward these. Be mindful of duties, urgent tasks and family interests, and you will come through okay.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—"A little with contentment is great gain" is a motto to embrace today. Do your best, whatever your obligations; don't be upset, and you will not only help yourself but also others.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Several restrictions: Include careful calculations in your day, stress poise, patience, promptness in work, appointments, accuracy, too. Stiff orders? Obey them!

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Start day's activities with a prayer and good cheer, and be surprised how much quicked you can accomplish. Good period for study, checking for errors, improvements.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo) — Returns for efforts may not be full or satisfying as expected but good work won't be lost. It is well that some days are restricting, or just quiet. Plan properly.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo)—Instead of crowding your schedule with more than you can sensibly manage, select the urgent matters, do them calmly, well, and arrange for the others later. Be serene.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Not unfriendly but not too helpful are some of today's indications. Much is up to your effort and attitude. Wise not to overexpand, nor reach for the moon. Keep steadily at your schedule.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Moderation in all things, please! You may get ahead only slowly, but that is better than rushing and doing things only half well. Familiar and daily tasks most favored.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—If extra care is stressed in most endeavors and lines of business or labor, it can be a fruitful day for sound investments, raising funds for worthy causes, for your own occupation.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn) — In activities for which you are trained or have special talent, you can move ahead, but don't be disappointed if some matters seem slow, irritating. Rays most favor evident interests.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—May have sudden decisions, changes. Accept that which is satisfactory to most concerned. Check important issues. Be content if you do your best, but don't—procrastinate!

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—You like most of us today are on the "be careful" list for best all round results. Thoughtfulness, cheerfulness will pay big dividends. Familiar activities, religion favored.

YOU BORN TODAY: Friendliness, industriousness, intelligence are outstanding characteristics. Very artistic and intuitive. May have to be urged to come out of a too self-effacing attitude in order to advance as quickly and thoroughly as you can. You desire and can handle higher education—should make every effort to have it. And so much is available free if we but appreciate and use it all rightly. Do not strain for impossible attainment but do advance steadily in chosen profession, trades, business, or as home-maker. Blessings!

Street Urchins Create Serious Korean Problem

By BILL BOSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Seoul, Korea, March 6—(CP)—The jeep had barely stopped before a boy with bright black eyes popped up beside it from nowhere.

"Want whisky?" he asked with easy familiarity. "Canadian whisky."

His name was Lee Dong Soo, 16. the

His name was Lee Dong Soo, 16. The whisky was $12 a bottle. Lee said he would get 2,000 won (34 cents) if he sold it.

That proved he was a middleman, not in business for himself. He was getting his commission in won on a dollar transaction.

Lee knew what soldiers liked and what they usually had to sell. He knew where they could get what they wanted and who would buy what they offered.

Lee dealt in anything from women to army boots, from whisky and beer to chocolate bars and cigarets.

The United Nations civilian assistance command estimates there are 10,000 youngsters like him in Seoul and 17,000 in the whole of Seoul province.

Says the C. A. C. provincial team commander: "They're a terrific problem, caused by the breakdown or disappearance of the home influence and the lack of schooling."

Earnings High

Some, like Lee, are nominally cigaret boys. Others are either shoeshine boys or newsboys.

"They get 1,000 won (about 17 cents) a shine. Two a day gives them more than a laborer earns. Some earn as much as 10,000 or 12,000 won a day.

"Every one helps worsen inflation, and some are petty thieves and pickpockets."

The superintendent of Seoul's civilian police said he is trying to work out a licensing system, authorizing boys who help support their families to shine shoes and sell newspapers. The other urchins would be rounded up and put in institutions.

That, said a C. A. C. welfare officer, is wishful thinking at this stage.

"For the time being we have all we can handle with the children already in institutions."

Live by Wits

Meanwhile boys like Lee live by their wits on the streets. He had completed his first year of technical high school when hostilities began. He worked for a while with United States army units, then returned home two weeks before to find his mother keeping herself alive by dealing in firewood and doing needlework, earning 6,000 won (1) a week.

He hadn't enough money to set himself us as a cigaret dealer, so he patrolled a corner far from the congested centre of the city. He said he averaged as much as other boys — between 3,000 and 5,000 won a day — because in town they forced one another to divide their earnings.

The smile vanished and an unexpected tear dropped when he was asked what he thought of himself and his work.

"A year ago I'd have said I was a bad boy," he said.

"Today some neighbors say I'm bad, but others say I'm good because I'm doing this to help my mother. What do you think?"

FAMOUS RIVERS

The Thames is England's busiest waterway, but the Severn is the longest, flowing 220 miles.

ANCIENT TANNERS

Goatskins were used by nomad tribes in Palestine for sandals and waterbags as long ago as 2,000 B.C.

Reds Hold Control Over Italy's Worker Federation

(Editor's Note:— Italy is a key point in the Kremlin's efforts to fashion a fifth - column noose around Western Europe. How the communists are moving there is described here by William L. Ryan, Russian-speaking analyst of the AP foreign staff who is on a tour of Europe. Tomorrow—Mapping chaos for Germany.)

By WILLIAM L. RYAN

Rome, March 6 — (AP) — The communists evidently are organizing furiously in Italy to build their Trojan horse. Moscow's 1952 version of the storied steed that broke the defences of ancient Troy.

The chain of command from cominform through the World Federation of Trade Unions and into Italian labor is easily discernible.

The communists, in control of the big general confederation of Italian labor, have imposed a high-level, hard-core command over the unions, and the command is organized down to the factory level.

Giuseppe Di Vittorio, a Moscow-trained communist, has installed in each factory what he calls a "peace committee." This committee is the cell through which the communists will exercise their control when and if the chips are down.

Foreign observers in Rome have little doubt these committees are the "action committees" of the future, ready to react swiftly in the event of crisis. The label "peace committee" clearly shows the influence of the cominform and the W.F.T.U.

C.G.I.L. Strongest

The C. G. I. L. is one of three major labor organizations in Italy, and by far the strongest. It claims more than 5,000,000 members, although a more accurate figure probably would be 3,500,000. The non - communist unions are represented by the Confederation of Italian Trade Unions, claiming more than 2,000,000 members but probably having only 1,400,000, and the United Italian labor, with 400,000 members, mostly socialists.

The Italian communist command includes strongmen Palmiro Togliatti, Pietro Secchia and Luigi Longo.

All are Moscow-brand communists. Togliatti, 59, a veteran of fascist jails, is a scholar who knows how to use words with telling effect. While he still seems to be the boss and to enjoy the favor of Moscow, a large body of opinion in Rome is that he would be displaced in a time of crisis.

The man who might take over is Secchia, 49, a tough, Moscow-trained communist who is a member of the Italian Senate. He did a five-year stretch in jail for organizing labor in Turin during the fascist regime.

Longo, 52, is considered a powerful behind - the - scenes string puller.

SUPPORT GIVEN

Brockville to Benefit

He pledged the Liberal opposition to support the project.

G. C. MacOdrum (PC-Leeds) said the seaway would stimulate industry in Brockville which would be at the upper end of the St. Lawrence canal. "At the present time, plants representing hundreds of millions of dollars are negotiating and in some instances actually in the course of construction within a 15-mile radius of Brockville."

W. M. Nickle (PC-Kingston) predicted larger growth for his riding as a result of the project.

Voices from northern ridings also supported the seaway-power plan.

A. R. Herbert (PC-Timiskaming) said the new power supplies would help to develop the raw materials of Timiskaming and other northern Ontario areas.

W. G. Noden (PC-Rainy River) said the people of his riding were anxious that the present plan go through although they are far away from the St. Lawrence. They had always felt Hydro development was "vital."

P. T. Kelly (PC-Cochrane North) said his riding provided an alternative source of steel, power and coal if the project did not go through. There were steel supplies in the Belcher Islands of James Bay, power in the Albany River and coal deposits in the area.

W. K. Warrender (PC-Hamilton Centre) praised Hamilton harbor as one of the best land-locked harbors in Canada. He said it already is expanding its facilities to meet increased trade from the seaway.

New docks were being built and inquiries were coming from nearly every country in the world about sites for new industries in the Hamilton area.

Customers' Corner

Wanted: One First Class Crystal Ball!

Serving folks for almost a century now, we like to think we're pretty good at knowing just what they want and how to please 'em best. But experience and intuition can go just so far.

Sometimes we think we could use a "crystal ball" to find out if customers have "Something on their mind" they're not telling us — that we don't know but should— in order to serve them better.

Have you something on your mind that concerns us? We'd appreciate knowing it — then the crystal ball won't be necessary. Please write:

NOW—She Laughs at age

Springtime in her heart again! New-found gaiety, peppy energy. A new, alive woman—sparkling eyes, better color, fresh, calm youthfulness — has replaced the worn, tired look. No wonder life has taken on new interests. Yes, thousands of once faded women, weary from blood-iron poverty, have bloomed anew with the help of Dr. Williams Pink Pills. Try Dr. Williams Pink Pills yourself for 30 days! Enjoy new health, pep and energy. Start today! Get back "in the pink" with

DR. WILLIAMS PINK PILLS

Skinny men, women gain 5, 10, 15 lbs.
Get New Pep, Vim, Vigor

What a thrill! Bony limbs fill out; ugly hollows fill up; neck no longer scrawny; body loses half-starved, sickly "bean-pole" look. Thousands of girls, women, men, who never could gain before, are now proud of shapely, healthy-looking bodies. They thank the special vigor-building, flesh-building tonic, Ostrex. Its tonics, stimulants, invigorators, iron, vitamin B1, calcium, enrich blood, improve appetite and digestion so food gives you more strength and nourishment; put flesh on bare bones. Don't fear getting too fat. Stop when you've gained the 5, 10, 15 or 20 lbs. you need for normal weight. Costs little. New "get acquainted" size only 60c. Try famous Ostrex Tonic Tablets for new vigor and added pounds, this very day. At all druggists.

Oh my! I'll bet this costs us plenty!

Silly accident, but expensive!

All accidents are silly — and unexpected.
The grocer boy does not intend to trip over a toy wagon in your driveway and break an arm or leg. But it can cost you thousands in a damage suit.
Or your dog may bite a stranger (or a friend). You may hit somebody with a golf ball. Your child may strike a passerby with a rock. The mail man may slip on the ice or a roller skate.
A very inexpensive insurance policy will cover you against damage suits from all these and other expensive, unplanned misfortunes. For example you can get $10,000 liability protection for only $10 a year.

Nobody Loves Forever

By Margaretta Brucker

As they drove along she wondered if Lucy's irritation could be entirely due to the incident at the airport. Lucy had come home from the office the noon before looking tired and wretched. She never gave Jessica her confidence, but she had obviously been unstrung and worried. Not about her job, surely—Jessica felt a stab of panic, for her sister-in-law contributed much to her comfort. Lucy often stood between her and her mother-in-law. She wished she had not upset the girl. She could not deny that she had been a fool; Lucy was angry with her and Betsy was hot and irritable. She was glad when the car drew up in front of the tall gray house where she lived with Lucy and her mother.

"Better have stayed at home, hadn't we pet?" she whispered to the heavy, sleepy baby as she carried her up the long, steep flight of stairs and entered her own room.

But her thoughts would wander back to that interval when she had stood in the bright sunshine with the man's admiring glance appraising her and her mind carefree and absorbed in the activity about her. In spite of herself the memory of that admiration lingered.

She dumped Betsy down on the big bed and moved restlessly about the room, pausing before the dresser. There was a picture of Tom in a cheap metal frame. A big blond giant in a corporal's uniform. Unconsciously she compared Tom with the man at the airport.

Above the picture her dark eyes met her own reflection in the mirror. She was still pretty, she thought. Her hair — she brushed back the two rolls of hair which framed her face. Yes, this was the same Jessica who went to a Virginia finishing school and attended the derby and danced her slippers thin at balls in Louisville and Memphis. How long ago that seemed! Only today had the past seemed a part of this drab and monotonous present. Day after day just the same. The constant effort to make herself agreeable to a woman who met all her attempts at friendliness coldly.

She thought when Tom comes back everything will be different. If it isn't—

She was ashamed of the thought which flashed into her mind for a minute. For the first time she had been disloyal to Tom in thought at least.

When Jessica Gordon came home from Virginia finishing school in June 1942, she found the small sleepy Kentucky town overrun with soldiers. camp had been set up just a few miles distant and Mary Belle Evans, who was Jessica's best friend, told her "Honey, you never saw so many men in your whole life. I wish they weren't Yankees, but they sure are cute. There's a dance at the country club this week and you'll see for yourself."

"I'm not interested in soldiers. If you really want to see something you should meet my roommate's brother, Tay Haydn. He finished at Annapolis this June."

Mary Belle sighed. "Poor me, having to stay at home in Titusville all year and keep house for Granddad. I'm lucky to get an ol' Yankee to flirt with me."

Jessica felt no interest in Yankees. If she had given the matter a thought, she would have said she had never known a northern man. But now she had plenty of opportunity to see them; for the town was filled with soldiers. They looked pretty much alike in their uniforms, with the exception of one, a big blond man with close-clipped light hair and long-lashed blue-grey eyes. She met this man every where. He lounged against the wall at the club and watched her every move; he appeared at the drugstore which had always been a local rendezvous. Other servicemen eyed the girls appraisingly, whistled or made bold attempts to flirt, but not this man.

"He's shy," Mary Belle told Jessica with a rippling giggle. "Yes he is. But he's gone on you, honey."

Even Jessica did not deny this. She felt annoyed for the most part.

Then one day as they sat in the drug store, Jessica sipping a soda and Mary Belle delving into a dish of ice-cream, the soldier appeared again. Awkward, blushing when he saw them.

"I wish he'd be shipped out," said Jessica with a touch of irritation.

"I think he's cute," Mary Belle announced with a judicious nod. "I feel sorry for him," she added. "Look, I'm going to introduce him to you. I've met him at the club but he never speaks—scared to, probably. Here—" She signalled imperiously with her spoon and the big man stared, started toward them, and stopped as Jessica frowned discouragingly.

"Come and sit down and have a drink," Mary Belle invited, ignoring the man's confusion and Jessica's black looks.

He advanced and stood twisting his cap, his eyes fixed on Jessica.

Mary Belle slanted her small brown eyes at him. "Sit down," she repeated. "Your name's Tom—"

"Blake— Tom Blake," he said nervously. He pulled up a chair.

Mary Belle's eyes twinkled. "Tomm Blake—Jessica Gordon."

Jessica felt ill at ease, unable to meet the man's eyes. He was different from anyone she knew. Handsome eyes, a stubborn chin, a big nose. Good hands, large with calloused palms. Not like the hands of Tay Hadyn. She thought Tay's slender, aristocratic hands, of her father's long, well-shaped fingers.

Probably this man worked with his hands.

Suddenly she realized she had never known a man who worked, really worked. She regarded Tom curiously.

Although he seemed ill at ease, he remained until they rose to go. He knocked over his chair as he pushed back from the table. He followed right at their heels when they left the store and stood outside for a little while, big and blundering and self-conscious but but reluctant to leave them. The girls in their brief white play suits with bare, tanned arms and legs. The soldier in his uniform. Mary Belle giggling and amused and Jessica sober and uneasy as they finally said goodby and went toward Mary Belle's roadster.

As they climbed into the car and set off, Mary Belle said suddenly "he looks dangerous. You know, I'd just as soon flirt with a baby lion."

Jessica made no reply to this. She wouldn't see the man again if she could avoid him. She would think about Tay, she decided, and chattered on to Mary Belle about her visit to her roommate, the handsome brother just out of Annapolis, the tobacco plantations he would inherit, his lovely home and his family.

"Going to marry him?" asked Mary Belle directly.

"Not until he asks me. Tay isn't interested in a war bride."

Yet he had been clever enough to imply that he intended to make marriage his first postwar project.

It would be so right to marry Tay. She forced her thoughts to centre about him after she had left Mary Belle, and denied that the worship of this awkward northern soldier intrigued her.

Tay would fit perfectly into her pattern of life. He would be so acceptable to her father, that very elegant, reserved gentleman who indulged in her every whim.

I'm a terrific snob, Jessica confessed to herself as she went up the box-bordered walk which led to the old brick house which had sheltered Gordons for generations. I like my background, she thought proudly, as she stepped into the cool, dark hall with its gleaming polished floors and heavy old mahogany furniture. I'd be lost in any other environment.

Of course she would not meet the blond soldier boy again. But she did and not when Mary Belle was present. When he appeared suddenly beside her downtown one day, she found herself unable to snub him properly.

Other meetings followed, planned meetings. And then Tom told her he loved her. He was humble, he made no attempt to touch her. He was terribly hurt when she told him curtly that she did not care for him and it would be best for both of them not to meet again.

He accepted her decision. That surprised her. For a week she saw nothing of him. She went downtown more often than usual. She found herself glancing up and down the street for a tall, broad-shouldered soldier who had always been right at her heels whenever he could get a pass to town.

The weeks passed. No Tom.

Had he gone away without telling her? She wanted to see him just once more and tell him that she was sorry she had hurt him. She must see him, she decided finally. She took the car and drove out toward the camp and met Tom walking doggedly along a mile from town.

Jessica drew up at the side of the road and hailed him. "Hi, want a lift?"

He shook his head and plodded on.

"Tom, stop!"

He paused, turned around and waited.

"I want to talk to you," she stammered. "Please get in."

He hesitated. Then he strode back and climbed in beside her.

"Let's drive up into the hills," she said.

"O.K." He was very quiet and sat staring straight ahead with his mouth a tight, hard line.

Jessica felt uneasy. She drove blindly for a mile, two miles, and then turned onto a side road and climbed into the tree-clad hills of Kentucky.

"Stop here," said Tom suddenly.

Jessica obeyed. Her hands trembled on the wheel as she turned and caught the emotion in his steady eyes. Before she could read his intentions, he had her in his arms and tight against his chest with his lips meeting hers in a long hard kiss. Her heart slowed with terror—raced with joy. She was wild with rage and tried to break away but Tom held her fast. He kissed her over and over. Her eyes, her cheeks, her mouth.

She was limp in his arms. She cried and he held her gently, fondling her soft, dark hair with his big, calloused hand. He laughed softly and deeply.

"You belong to me," he said. "I'll never let you go. I love you—I love you—and you love me!" he ended triumphantly.

Back Hurt, Limbs Ached Felt Tired-Out, Rundown

Stomach Out of Order, Nerves on Edge; Couldn't Sleep — Tells of Grand Relief She Got by Taking Syntona.

Of particular interest to men and women suffering from stomach disorders, nervousness and tired, rundown condition is the recent experience of Mrs. Florence Bailey, 37 Childers Street, London, Ontario. It is typical of the many thousands who have found prompt, lasting relief by using Syntona Herbal Compound. Many people have said that a short treatment of Syntona has done more for them than anything they ever used before.

Here is Mrs. Bailey's own story:—"For a year I suffered from stomach disorders having awful gas, indigestion and sour acid risings after my meals. I would get sick headaches and dizzy feelings and my nerves were so on edge I couldn't sleep. My back hurt, limbs ached all over and I constantly felt tired-out and rundown.

"After taking one thing and another without any relief a friend urged me to try Syntona. She recommended it so highly that I got some and even with the first bottle I felt better. Now, after taking it a few weeks, all the troubles I mentioned are cleared up. I sleep well, have no pain anywhere, and enjoy all my meals without distress afterwards.

"It is wonderful to find a medicine like this and I highly recommend it to others."

One Man Dead, Another Missing In Cobalt Fire

Blaze in Heart of Business Section, Heavy Damage

Cobalt, March 7 — (CP) — One man was found dead and another was listed as missing today in this Northern Ontario silver-mining town's worst fire in five years.

The body of Cecil Gennoe, a Kirkland Lake diamond driller about 40 years old, was recovered from the ruins of three business premises and second-storey rooming quarters. Missing and believed dead was an old-age pensioner known only as "Old Pete."

The blaze was in the heart of the business section of this community 65 miles south of Kirkland Lake.

The two victims roomed in the Welcome Inn, a frame structure where the fire started. It spread through the Silver Bar Lunch and a barber shop.

Another roomer, Herbert Parker, jumped from a window to escape the flames. He was taken to hospital with a broken leg.

Shifting winds threatened to drive the flames along the street to the Silanco building. Late reports said the structure was being evacuated of furniture and other valuables.

Clouds of dense smoke masked the entire business section and rose hundreds of feet into the air.

The fire is said to have broken out about 8.30 a.m. Gerard Presse, operator of the barber shop, said that when he came to work about 8.30, he saw clouds of smoke coming from windows over the street-level Welcome Inn. "I went upstairs yelling at the top of my lungs, but the smoke forced me back."

Mrs. Cora Petrakos helped remove Mrs. Pete Dworski, an invalid, from her living quarters at the Silver Lunch Bar.

Bus driver Lloyd Hammond said that as he stopped his vehicle outside the building, a man came running out of the Welcome Inn in his underclothing.

Firemen were covered with ice as thousands of gallons of water were poured on the blazing structure. The building is one of the oldest in Cobalt and "tinder dry," firemen said.

Sees Red Empire Being Undermined

Dr. C. W. Boldyreff, head of the Russian language department at Georgetown University in Washington, uses a map of Russia to explain the extent of the undermining activities that, he says, are undermining the red empire of Josef Stalin. Dr. Boldyreff, Russian-born, is one of the foremost authorities on anti-communist underground organizations. In 1942 he succeeded in slipping secretely into the Soviet Union and for more than two years was active in the anti-red underground in Russia. — Central Press Canadian.

Coronation May Be Held in May, June Next Year

London, March 7. (AP)—The coronation of the Queen might take place in May or early June next year, the Church of England newspaper predicts today.

The paper says such an important event is "bound to be related in some way to the Christian calendar."

It therefore "could not take place until after Easter and probably not until after Whitsuntide", the official church organ says.

"If other circumstances are suitable, the coronation would be a seemly event to fix for a day within the octave of Whit Sunday, the feast of the Holy Spirit, and nothing could be more appropriate to such solemnities associated with the head of a Christian state."

Whit Sunday in 1953 falls on May 24. The church paper's speculation thus suggests the coronation might take place in, or soon after, the week beginning May 25.

Three Officers Resign

Buffalo, N.Y., March 7 (AP)—A deputy police commissioner and two captains resigned yesterday after conviction on charges of bribery, conspiracy and taking illegal fees.

Deputy Commissioner Glenn G. Pauley and Capt. Raymond J. Smith and George F. Tourjie were found guilty in Buffalo's second pinball trial Wednesday night on all 81 counts of an indictment brought by a hold-over grand jury investigating gambling.

Police Commissioner Michael C. Noeppel yesterday formally notified the men they were suspended. He ordered them to turn in badges, guns and police keys, and said they would be brought up latter on departmental charges.

THE WEATHER

Toronto March 7 —(CP)—Synopsis: The extensive area of high pressure and clear skies stretching from Hudson Bay to the Gulf of Mexico continues to dominate the weather map. However, cloud persists over central and southern forecast regions. Little change in this picture is anticipated for today and Saturday with the cloud clearing very slowly in southwestern Ontario and temperatures across the province showing little change.

FREAK LIGHTNING STORM

San Jose, Calif., March 7 (AP)—A lightning storm that bounced balls of fire through houses and off bicycles, blew holes in homes and created numerous other freak effects, hit Santa Clara County yesterday. The weird display struck in San Jose and in Gilroy, 28 miles south, at almost the same time. It was accompanied by a downpour of rain.

FIFTY SHIPS IDLE

Melbourne, Australia, March 7 (Reuters) — Fifty ships were made idle in the port of Melbourne today when 5,000 dock workers staged a lightning strike. The men walked off the ships in support of eight men suspended by the management for Absteeism.

FEDERATION ASKS ECONOMIC BURDEN SPREAD AROUND

Wants Govt. to Support Beef and Lamb Prices

(By The Canadian Press)

The government's program to help farmers whose livestock, buildings and crops are destroyed in efforts to check foot-and-mouth disease is law.

As the bill outlining the program was passed by the Senate yesterday the government was faced with demands from the Canadian Federation of Agriculture to spread the economic burden of the disease across the country.

The federation, spokesman for 400,000 organized farmers, suggested in its annual brief to the government that the government support beef and lamb prices at the point they were before foot-and-mouth disease broke out.

The CFA said it would be unfair to ask farmers alone to bear the brunt of a price drop in beef and lamb. If government support put a floor on these prices at the level of a week before the outbreak, consumers still would get their meat at a price considerably lower than in January.

Meanwhile, in the Commons Prime Minister St. Laurent took up opposition charges that government officials showed "gross negligence" in handling the outbreak in its early stages.

Should not Prejudge

He said these officials should not be prejudged before they were able to defend themselves. It would not be fair to have them examined publicly as to what they did and their reasons for so acting.

Lieut. Sansom In Hospital At Toronto

Toronto, March 7 — (CP) — Lieut. Elizabeth Sansom, Canadian Army nurse recently found in New York City after being missing since Christmas, is a patient in Toronto Military Hospital.

A hospital spokesman said last night Lieut. Sansom came in for observation a few days ago from her Stanley, N.B., home. He refused to amplify.

A brief statement from the army Feb. 27 said the 26-year-old nurse had been located in New York and that she appeared to "have been a victim of amnesia."

Lieut. Sansom, a niece of Lt.-Gen. E. W. Sansom, Canadian overseas corps commander during the Second World War, disappeared after boarding a train at Kingston, where she was stationed, last Dec. 24. She was presumably going to spend Christmas with relatives at Sherbrooke, Que.

President Forecasts Ultimate Decay of Soviet Slave World

Washington, March 7 — (AP)—President Truman forecast today the "ultimate decay of the Soviet slave world," provided free countries build up their military strength.

But, he told Congress, the free world cannot rearm adequately without continued United States help.

Submitting to Congress the first report on the $7,900,000,000 mutual security program, Truman made his third plea in 24 hours for the plan's approval.

Congress, still talking about scaling down the program despite his 7,500-word special message to the legislators yesterday followed by a direct radio-TV plea to the country last night, heard the president say:

"The ultimate decision between free world and slave world lies in the balance . . .

"For the nations of western Europe, the year 1952 may well be the critical time in the defence build-up, bridging the period between extreme vulnerability and effective preparedness."

Today's report went far beyond his message to Congress and the radio address in supporting arguments for the mutual security program. But even administration supporters conceded that the program faces a tough time in this election-year Congress.

Truman said "neutralism" has steadily declined as confidence in the free world's defence has grown.

He said "Not one nation has turned from the path of co-operation" and that U. S. Atlantic allies in Europe have increased their standing armies during the last two years by more than 500,000 men.

The power of communism in the western European countries had declined. It remained a threat in France and Italy, although its power had been "very substantially reduced" in those countries.

The U. S. had been compelled to meet a variety of Soviet challenges to the free countries in the form of subversion, revolution and, in Korea, "unveiled military aggression."

The U. S. has had to employ an equal variety of measures to deal with these moves, he said.

Credit Union at Naval Air Station Robbed of $100,000, Two Masked Gunmen Escape

The bandits raced their getaway car through the station gate at 50 miles an hour. Three marines were on duty at the gate.

Gerald Lynch of Apponaug, R.I. Union manager, and Thomas Smith, civilian guard, were about to carry the funds—in canvas sacks—from their parked cars at the rear of the building when the bandits drove up.

Lynch said the gunmen jumped out of their car, waved the guns at them and one of them said:

"We're not kidding."

One of the marines at the gate jumped into a car and gave chase but was unable to overtake the men. The bandits' car was found abandoned and ablaze about five miles from the station.

Lynch received the money from the naval disbursing department to cash pay cheques for civil service employees at the station. No government funds were involved in the holdup.

The Credit Union is an organization composed largely of civilian employees at the station. Its assets are listed at $1,500,000.

The air station is located in the southern part of Rhode Island, on Narragansett Bay.

A safe in the Credit Union's office was broken into in February, 1951, and $60,000 in cash taken.

Members of Canadian Brigade Reported To Be In Battle Line

Seoul, Korea, March 7. (CP)—The 1st Commonwealth division of which the 25th Canadian Brigade group is a part, was identified today by the United States Eighth Army among three divisions on the battle line.

The Commonwealth and U.S. 3rd Divisions are on the western front facing the Chinese. The U.S. 1st Marine Division is on the mountainous eastern front.

The Eighth Army announcement did not say whether any other divisions are in action.

Reports from the Commonwealth division said Chinese machine-guns opened up at long range on a patrol but inflicted no casualties.

The 1st Commonwealth division, made up of the 25th. 28th, and 29th brigades, has men from the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, India and South Africa in its ranks.

The Canadians consist of battalions from the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, the Royal Canadian regiment and the Royal 22nd regiment and artillery units.

The Canadians specifically were last identified in the line Jan. 19. This was the last date on which censorship permitted them to be identified in the line or in connection with operations.

Plea for Sound Management Of Resources Made in House

Toronto, March 7 (CP)—A plea for sound management of northern Ontario's timber resources was made in the Ontario legislature yesterday by Albert Wren, Liberal-Labor member for Kenora.

Mr. Wren, one of three members taking part in the Throne Speech debate, which continues today charged that there has been "trading in Crown timber property."

Timber was his district's "only continuing asset" and government policies should ensure that holders of timber licences should either develop permanent industries or be forced to turn back their holdings to the Crown.

Other speakers in yesterday's debate were W. J. Stewart (PC-Toronto Parkdale) and J. B. Salsberg (Lab-Prog.-Toronto St. Andrew).

A government bill also was introduced under which a portion of the salaries of temporary civil servants will be withheld, and the accrued amount turned over to their superannuation when they join the permanent staff. The amount would be returned if they left the service before reaching permanent status.

Mr. Wren said in the past "there has been very deliberate mismanagement of forests on several occasions."

Timber licences should be given only to persons who would develop permanent industries. If this was not done, improvements such as roads and mills should be purchased and the area returned to the Crown.

Icebreaker Makes Way to Port, Sets New Record

Montreal, March 7. (CP)— The icebreaker N. B. McLean today crunched her way through the ice to arrive at the oil docks in Montreal East, breaking the record she set last year when she nosed into port April 8.

Behind her are the icebreakers Ernest Lapointe and Saurel, criss-crossing the river to keep the ice moving and prevent it from blocking the narrow channel.

Shipping men expect the navigation season will open six or seven days ahead of last year. The Beaverlake is due to arrive in Quebec April 8 and is scheduled to leave for Montreal the same day. Barring unforeseen ice conditions, she could dock in Montreal April 9.

Soldier Ignores Wound to Save Life of Comrade

Ottawa, March 7. (CP)—A Manitoba soldier who ignored a wound to save the life of a comrade has been awarded the British Empire Medal "for outstanding service" in Korea, the army announced today.

He is L. Cpl. Herbert J. McCreary, of Treherne, Man., a member of the 25th Brigade's Engineers Field Squadron and a Second World War veteran of the Italian and European campaigns.

His wife is living in Port Reeve, Sask.

On August 25, 1951, while the engineers were clearing a heavily-mined area, one sapper strayed into a mined section, tripped an anti-personnel mine and wounded himself, Cpl. McCreary and three other men.

The citation adds:

"Without thought to his own safety and in spite of his shrapnel wounds, Cpl. McCreary immediately seized a mine prod and proceeded to clear a narrow path through the minefield to where the sapper lay wounded. When told of his own wounds he replied 'I know', all the while continuing to work diligently to reach his wounded comrade. His quick action in reaching the sapper no doubt saved the life of this soldier."

Car Hits Truck Five Quebec Youths, Killed

Quebec, March 7 (CP)—Four youths were killed last night and a fifth died in hospital today after their automobile collided with a truck near Les Ecureuils, Que., about 15 miles west of here. All are from Neuville, Que.

The dead: Raymond Delisle, 23, Guy Nadeau, 23, Jean-Loen Lapierre, 19, Gerard Hardy, 18, and Albert Burns, 23 who died in hospital.

The youths were returning home from Donnacona when they collided with a truck at the entrance of a tunnel.

Occupants of the truck wree unhurt.

CANADIANS CAN FORGET ANY HOPE OF TAX CUTS

Two Non-Confidence Motions Defeated

Ottawa, March 7 (CP) —Canadians can forget any hope for big tax cuts this year.

Prime Minister St. Laurent made this plain yesterday as the Commons swung briefly into the traditional, wide-ranging Throne Speech debate and quickly defeated two opposition motions of non-confidence in the government.

Members voted 88 to 44 against a Progressive Conservative motion charging that government taxes are excessive and burdensome; that the government refuses to cut out waste and extravagance and that it isn't dealing adequately with the cost of living.

They voted 90 to 45 against a CCF motion criticizing the government for having "failed" to inaugurate a national health insurance program with provision for participation by the provinces.

The votes came surprisingly early in the debate, which usually runs for weeks and concludes with divisions on the traditional non-confidence motions.

Finance Minister Abbott adjourned the debate on the main motion and will speak today. As many members as wish can follow. The opposition parties also can present new motions of non-confidence.

No Substantial Cuts

Mr. St. Laurent not only indicated there will be no substantial tax cuts this year. but he said they should not be anticipated "so long as the world situation continues as it is." He also indicated that taxes will not rise under present circumstances.

His statement, scooping Mr. Abbott's April budget, came in reply to a demand from George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, that the government give immediate assurance of tax reductions in view of a $700,000,000 surplus at the three-quarter mark of the fiscal year which ends this month.

Mother's Saliva May Determine Sex Before Birth

Washington, March 7 (AP) — Indications that the sex of a baby may be determined before birth by tests of the mother's saliva were reported yesterday by two Chicago scientists.

Doctors Gustav W. Rapp and Garwood C. Richardson said they had preliminary evidence of this possibility and were reporting it "to allow early verification by others."

The researchers, both biochemists at Loyola University's school of dentistry, made their report in Science, weekly of the American Association for the advancement of science.

The indications are, they said, that there is some still-unidentified substance—believed to be a male horome—which is present in the saliva of a woman who is to have a male baby, but is absent in one who is to bear a

Newly-Discovered Island in Arctic Named After Discoverer, Stefansson

Toronto, March 7 (CP)—Newly-discovered island within the Arctic Circle has been named "Stefansson Island" in honor of the great Canadian-born Arctic explorer, Dr. Viljhalmur Stefansson. The island is 1,000 miles from the North Pole.

Announcement of the tribute was made by the Canadian Board on geographical names of the mines and technical surveys department in Ottawa.

It coincides with the veteran explorer's appearance in Toronto Monday next when he will begin a series of Canadian club luncheon addresses in Ontario which will take him also to Hamilton, London, Port Hope, Belleville, Montreal and Ottawa.

Stefansson Island is at the tip of a peninsula forming the northeast section of Victoria Island, jutting into Melville Sound and bounded by the west by Hadley Bay and on the east by M'Clinctock Channel.

The board is departing from its general practice of not naming geographical areas after living persons but this recognition of the great international fame and worth of the explorer, born in Armes, Man., has been planned for some time.

Only the discovery of something considered worthy of bearing his name delayed the tribute. Last year this discovery was made.

An aerial survey disclosed that the tip of the peninsula was in fact an island separated from the main finger of land by a well-defined but narrow strait. The island is about 8,000 square miles in area.

Dr. Stefansson carried on explorations in the vicinity during his 10 winters in the Arctic which have made him one of the greatest living authorities on the north.

He has published more than 20 books on the Arctic, including "The Friendly Arctic" "My Life with the Eskimos," and "Ultima Thule." He is a great advocate of the theory that Canada's far north is an "almost untapped reservoir of the earth's riches, easily and comfortably habitable with the aid of modern engineering, transport and communications."

For the last 10 years he has been working on his international encyclopedia of the Arctic and directing his Arctic collection and library at Dartmouth College.

Police Hold Three Women, Two Men Object of Search

Both Will be Charged With Attempted Murder

Toronto, March 7 — (CP) — Police seeking two gunmen for wounding two detectives expressed belief today the fugitives have made a rendezvous with Edwin Boyd, wanted for armed bank robberies and jail-breaking.

They think the three men — Steve Suchan, 24, alias Valino Lesso, Leonard Jackson, 29, and Boyd — have taken cover in an underworld hideout. Suchan and Jackson are sought on warrants charging attempted murder and a $2,000 reward has been offered for their capture.

Meanwhile Sergeant of Detectives Edmund Tong — English but nicknamed "The Chinaman" by the city's criminal element — continued to fight for life in hospital. He was shot through both lungs yesterday when he and Det.-Sgt. Roy Perry stopped a car on west-end College Street yesterday to question its occupants. Sgt. Perry suffered bullet wounds in the right arm and wrist.

Three women were taken into custody in connection with the case. One was held as a material witness and the other on vagrancy charges.

More than 1,000 police officers, including many who volunteered to work on what was to have been their day off, combed the city, particularly the west end. Squads of detectives raided west-end rooming houses, walking in with drawn guns and questioning the occupants.

The women were arrested last night after raids on west-end rooming houses. Held as a material witness is Mrs. Anna Camero, 28-year-old blonde whose car was identified as the one driven by the gunmen. Police said the car was reported stolen after the shooting.

Those charged with vagrancy were identified as Jane Blahut, 40, of Toronto and Betty Huluk, about 25, also of Toronto.

Sgt. Tong was able to whisper Suchan's name and a west-end address to a woman eyewitness to the shooting before he slipped into unconsciousness.

Assigned to Case

Sgt. Tong, a gangland nemesis with a long memory, and Perry were assigned to the $24,000 armed holdup of the Bank of Montreal branch at College and Manning Avenue last Tuesday.

They were hunting for a late-model auto believed connected with the holdup. On west-end Dundas Street, yesterday they sighted a car answering the description caught up to it and forced it into the curb.

As Tong stepped from the police cruiser, one of the men in the vehicle ahead stepped out with drawn gun and shot him through the body. The second gunman, leaning out the window, swept the police car with a fusillade of shots.

Perry painfully started for the cruiser's radio microphone and summoned aid.

Chief Constable John Chisholm and Inspector of Detectives Alex McCathie took joint control of the search. He was authorized by Mayor Allan Lamport, chairman of the police commission, to post "a substantial reward" for Suchan's arrest.

Police described Suchan as 6 feet 1 1-2 inches tall, medium build, dark brown hair and brown eyes. Jackson, the other man sought, escaped with bank robber Edwin Lloyd last Nov. 4 from the Don jail. Recently it was Sgt. Tong who captured Jackson, wanted for at least four bank robberies throughout Ontario.

Kindness Repaid

George E. Buchanan, trust company executive, is $15,000 richer because of a kindness extending over 30 years to Toronto ragpicker Alvin Poser. Mr. Buchanan advised Poser on his investments but in spite of his possession of $25,000 Poser continued to live as a pauper, seldom washing and dressing in old clothes held together by twine and string. His body was found in a rooming house four days after he had died. He willed $15,000 to Buchanan and the rest to persons who had befriended him. — Central Press Canadian.

First of Series Of Rentals Boards Is Announced

Toronto, March 7. (CP)— The first of a series of rentals boards appointed under Ontario's new rent control regualtions were announced today.

The boards, for the most part one-man affairs, will replace the former courts of rental appeals. Three-man boards will be appointed later to handle increases in appeals under the new regulations.

All of the appointments, made by order-in-council, have been serving on courts of rental appeals.

While actual rent ceilings are to be established by rental appraisers, the rentals boards will hear appeals from their decisions and also cases where landlords seek eviction of tenants. The boards can exercise wider powers of arbitration than appraisers.

TRANSIENT PICKED UP BY TRENTON POLICE

As a result of a description circularized by city police a transient was picked up by Trenton police yesterday and has been returned to Belleville to appear on a theft charge. The man gave his name as Patrick Quinn, a transient.

Quinn is charged with theft of a purse from the office of the Canada Life Insurance on McAnnany Street earlier in the week. The purse was recovered by the office manager but the man disappeared before police could arrive on the scene. He will appear in court next Friday.

Three Business Premises Entered During Night

Another series of break-ins, two of them in the downtown area, was reported by city police during the night.

Entry was gained to the Bowl-O-Drome and to the Penguin Fish and Chip Store on Front Street, while also entered was the Trinidad Leaseholds Warehouse on South Front Street. Close to $50 was reported taken at the fish and chip store.

At the Bowl-O-Drome entry was gained by smashing a padlock off the front door. Drawers in the office were strewn about but until a close check was made it was not known if anything was missing. At the Trinidad Leaseholds entry was gained by smashing a glass in the door, while at the fish and chip store the rear door was forced.

Dr. Bruce Cronk Elected to College Of Physicians

It was announced recently, that Dr. Bruce Cronk, son of Dr. and Mrs. G. S. Cronk, has been elected by examination as a Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians of Canada, and at the age of 28, is one of the youngest doctors to receive this degree.

Upon graduating from the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School, Dr. Cronk attended Queen's University where he obtained his degree in medicine with high honors, winning the medal in surgery and prizes in clinical surgery, obstetrics and gynaecology and medicine.

During six years of post graduate study, Dr. Cronk interned at the Ottawa Civic Hospital, Kingston General Hospital, where he was medical resident, and spent two years at the Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, as a Fellow in Medicine.

Dr. Cronk is married, and has recently returned to Belleville where he is specializing in the field of internal medicine.

Strong Opposition To Applications For Two Licences

Decision was reserved by members of the Liquor Control Board for Ontario with respect to two applications for public hall licences which were spoken to at a special hearing held in the city hall council chambers today.

The applications being dealt with by the Board were those of the Canadian Legion at Belleville for a public hall licence for their club rooms on Coleman Street, and that of Holiday Inn for a licence in Hungerford township, outside the village of Tweed.

Liquor Control Board members present at the hearing were chairman W. T. Robb, vice chairman W. T. Nugent and J. F. White, member.

Rev. A. E. Baker, of Stirling, representing the Ontario Temperance Federation; Rev. S. E. Larman, vice-president of the Belleville Ministerial Association, and Robt. Andrews, and F. Bateman, representing householders in the Coleman Street area, spoke in opposition to the Legion application.

Speaking for the Legion were the Legion president LeRoy Madden and Max Matthews.

The council chambers were crowded with residents strong in opposition to the Legion application and L.C.B. chairman Robb referred to this fact as he reserved the board's decision and adjourned the hearing. He said the board ordinarily was favorable to a veterans' organization but noted this was the strongest opposition that he had seen against a similar application in a city the size of Belleville.

Robins are Back

The robins are back!

Another sign that spring is not far away was reported in the city today with Mrs. B. Mills, 270 East Moira Street having seen a robin on Victoria Avenue. This is the first robin reported in the Belleville area.

RCAF Planes to 'Bomb' District On Red Cross Campaign 'Blitz' Day

On Tuesday, March 11, Royal Canadian Air Force planes will roar over Belleville, Picton and smaller centres in Hastings and Prince Edward counties.

Swooping low the aircraft will release their "bombs" twice during the day. The first "bombing" will take place at 9:30 a.m. and the second at 5:30 p.m.

The "bombs" will disintegrate and scatter their paper fragments over wide areas. The fragments will be paper slips urging the good folks of the district to rally behind the Red Cross in its drive for funds on that date.

The Royal Canadian Air Force is co-operating one hundred per cent with the Red Cross campaign Committee, general chairman Alan Sprague said today.

The air force like the other armed services, is fully cognizant of the work of the Red Cross. Naturally the armed forces are vitally interested in the blood bank work, a job that the Red Cross makes a specialty of. Its blood donor clinics are nationwide.

Endorsed by Viscount Alexander

One of the last official acts of Viscount Alexander of Tunis before relinquishing his title as governor-general of Canada in January, was to endorse the March appeal of the Canadian Red Cross Society of which His Excellency is president.

Praising the many services operated by the Red Cross, His Excellency emphasized the importance of its commitment to secure, process and supply all the blood and blood products required by the armed forces.

"It is always a pleasure to endorse the national appeal of the Canadian Red Cross Society each March," he wrote, "for it must continue its task of serving as a channel for each man's kind and generous impulses in promoting the general health and welfare of our fellow citizens."

He added that Canadians can be "justly proud" of the steady expansion of the free national Blood Transfusion Service, "one of the greatest health ventures ever undertaken by a voluntary organization," the Outpost hospitals and Nursing Stations which bring medical aid to still expanding frontiers, and the Veterans' Services of the Red Cross.

"The Red Cross is well worthy of your generous support for it is truly national and international in service, a living part of the great international organization dedicated to the relief of suffering and distress wherever it may occur in war or peace."

Cheese Factory Had Biggest Year in History

Black River Cheese and Butter Company had its biggest year in the history of the factory it was shown at the annual meeting held at Milford.

During the past year 5,109,033 lbs. of milk was received from which 452,038 lbs. of cheese was manufactured with a value of $152,046. Whey fat sold amounted to 11,368 lbs., valued at $6,989.

Patrons received $135,525 for their milk, including Dominion bonus of $3,983. The average lbs. milk per lb. cheese was 11.30 and the price per cwt. received by farmers $2.70. Milk hauling cost $8,795, an average of $1.72 per thousand lbs.

The same board of directors was re-elected. Bert Jones is the cheese maker.

Weston's Enter Owl Loop Finals

Weston's Bread won the right to meet Trudeaus in the finals for the Owl League championship last night with an 8-2 victory over Boyce's Garage.

The finals series will start likely next Tuesday night.

Boyce's grabbed an early two-goal lead with Cannon and Joyce scoring. Westons came back strong and held the Garagemen scoreless while firing home eight goals to clinch the win.

Barriage paced the Weston attack with three goals. Jackson got himself a pair with Desjardins, Hamilton and Foster getting singles.

The game was cleanly played with both teams playing the puck and as a result no penalties were handed out by referee Burkholder.

Obituary

HAROLD W. WAKEFIELD

Harold W. Wakefield, administrator of the Belleville General Hospital, died suddenly at that institution of coronary thrombosis early Thursday morning. He was found dead, slumped in his chair in his office, shortly after seven o'clock and was last seen about the hospital about three o'clock.

Mr. Wakefield came to the hospital as administrator three-and-one-half years ago from the staff of Toronto General Hospital. He had been on that staff for nearly 20 years and came from England to join the Banting Institute in research work. Since coming to the city, Mr. Wakefield has raised the hospital to a high point of efficiency and was well liked by patients, doctors and personnel of the institution.

He was born in England, 44 years ago, being the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Wakefield. Since coming to Belleville he has taken an active interest in all community work and a wide circle of friends will sincerely regret his death.

He was a member of Christ Church and fraternally was identified with Ionic Masonic Lodge in Toronto. He was a member of the Officers' Club in Toronto.

Surviving are his wife, the former Alma Ransom, three daughters, Misses Margaret, Mary and Vicki at home, his parents, three brothers and three sisters in England.

Resting at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, the funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this edition.

MRS. THOMAS MITCHELL
(Toronto-Campbellford)

Campbellford. — Margurite Reid, wife of Thomas Mitchell, of Toronto, well known in this district, was buried here on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Mitchell collapsed and died in a Peterborough Funeral Parlor, where she had gone to pay her last respects to an aunt, Mrs. George N. Reid, who had died last week. She had been in apparent good health up until the time she suffered a heart attack as she stood by the casket of her aunt. She was 42.

Born in Campbellford, Mrs. Mitchell was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Reid, of this community| Her parents reside on Church Street here. Besides her husband, Thomas Mitchell, she leaves two sons, Paul, of Toronto, and Ronald, with the Canadian Army in Korea. There is one sister, (Babe), Mrs. Leonard Anderson, of Toronto, and two brothers, Warren Reid of Campbellford and Manson Reid, of Toronto.

The deceased woman was well-known locally, and moved to Toronto with her husband about ten yearf ago. She attended the United Church both here and in Toronto.

The Rev. Dr. D. M. Smith of St. John's United Church conducted funeral services from the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Reid of, Church Street. Burial was in Mt. Pleasant Cemetery.

The pall bearers were George Gagnon, and William Budd, of Toronto; Basil Reid, Douglas Barringer, Jack Weir and Joseph Wiggins.

HENRY M. CALVER
(Thurlow Township)

Ill for three days, Henry M. Calver, 1st concession Thurlow township (Kingston Road), died in the Belleville General Hospital early this Friday morning. Mr. Calver was wellknown and highly respected in this community. He was a bus driver for the Rawson bus lines for the past eight years and was highly appreciated by the travelling public for his kindness and consideration. He came to Belleville from Oshawa 16 years ago. Mr. Calver was an ardent angler and hunter and spent most of his spare time either on a stream or in the woods of the northland.

He was born in Bath, 49 years ago, being the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Calver. The late Mr. Calver was a member of the United Church and surviving are his parents, his wife, the former Florence Rosatte, four daughters, Mrs. J. W. (Ileen) McMillen, Mrs. Kenneth (Doreen) Aston, Mrs. David (Nancy) Hastie of Oshawa, Mrs. Clifford (Lila) Johnston of Belleville, and five sisters, Mrs. Henry Amos of Napanee, Mrs. Robert Lemon of Odessa, Mrs. Henry Littlefield and Mrs. James Mack of Dorland and Mrs. John Lewis of Adolphustown.

Resting at the Belleville Burial Funeral Home, the funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this edition.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, March 7 (CP) —Stock market prices remained mixed and trendless today in dull early afternoon dealings.

Volume for the first three hours was 1,592,000 shares.

Miscellaneous issues posted a scattered list of fractional advances to form industrials' strongest section. Agricultures and retail stores also drew firm support but papers, foods, refining oils, and manufacturing companies slipped.

Base metals were mixed as Anacon Lead, Falconbridge, Coldstream, Hudson Bay, Sherritt-Gordon and Steep Rock strengthened while Barvue, East Rim, East Sullivan, Quebec Copper and United Asbestos weakened.

Western oils showed gains and losses in balance. Canada Southern, Canadian Williston, Federated Petroleum, General Petroleum, and Selburn edged upward. Anglo-Canadian, Calgary and Edmonton, National Petroleum and Scurry eased.

Senior golds posted two small gains against three moderate losses. Juniors, prospects and holding companies showed little trend.

Manitoba Wins Curling Title For Ninth Time

Winnipeg, March 7 — (CP) — Manitoba won the Canadian curling championship today with a hard-fought 10th-round 10-7 victory over Alberta. It was Manitoba's 9th straight triumph against a 7-2 won-lost record for second-place Albertans.

The final round of the championships will be played this afternoon but the outcome will have no bearing on the title.

The title now returns to Western Canada after an absence of three years. A Northern Ontario rink won it for the first time in history in 1950 and last year Nova Scotia's Don Oyler of Kentville ran up 10 straight victories to give the easterners the title for the first time since 1927—the year the championship started.

Society Lawyer Wounded By Mystery Gunman

New York, March 7 (AP) —Sol. A. Rosenblatt, society lawyer and disputed heir to a J. P. Morgan granddaughter's fortune, was wounded last night by a mystery gunman as he entered his Park Ave. home.

The lawyer, one-time general council for the Democratic National Committee, was struck in the left thigh by one of three shots fired by his assailant, who escaped in a car with another man.

The car, reported stolen, later was found abandoned four blocks away.

Rosenblatt, 51, a key figure in the currently-contested will left by Mrs. Eleanor Morgan Satterlee, kin of the late J. P. Morgan the elder, said after the shooting:

"I wish I had something to tell you but I don't know anything."

His wound was described as not serious. A policeman was assigned to guard him in hospital.

Rosenblatt, besides handing the legal affairs of numerous society figures, is impartial chairman of the New York Cloak and Suit industry, often a storm centre in labor relations.

The shooting came six hours after hearings on the disputed will had been postponed without explanation until Monday.

The will of Mrs. Satterlee, who died last April 11, made Rosenblatt the chief beneficiary in an estate estimated from $35,000 to several hundred thousand dollars. The document is being contested in surrogate's court by Mrs. Mabel S. Ingalls, Mrs. Satterlee's sister, who received nothing.

Mrs. Ingalls charges that Rosenblatt and Dr. Richard H. Hoffmann, Park Avenue psychiatrist, exerted undue influence over Mrs. Satterlee.

Red Labor Group Making Inroads In West Germany

(Editor's note: The seeds of communist chaos are being planted in Germany. William L. Ryan, AP foreign news analyst who is on a tour of Europe, surveys the German situation in this article, last of a series of four.)

By WILLIAM L. RYAN

Frankfurt, March 7 — (AP) — Boring from within . . .

That's the openly-proclaimed policy for communists in western Germany. The World Federation of Trade Unions, an all-purpose revolutionary arm of Moscow, has made it clear.

But there are secret plans, too, for tying the drive in this country to the world revolution Stalin seeks. The W. F. T. U. keeps quiet about those plans, but there is no doubt remaining that they call for creating chaos, if and when Moscow sees the chance.

The red drive in Germany, as elsewhere in Europe, is aimed at the strategic industries. Some competent observers here express concern at the inroads it appears to me making.

Attempts at infiltration have been considerably stepped up in the industrial Ruhr Valley, where the communists have built up a strong party organization. Semi-official sources place the communist party strength in western Germany at 375,000 members, of whom fully 150,000 are in the Ruhr.

Just how much the communists have gained is known only to the party itself.

Trump Cards

The communists have several trump cards which are being used with some success. One is the remilitarization issue. Another is the issue of German reunification. A third is the fear that Germany will become a battleground for a third world war — a strong fear in a country still reeling from the effects of the last conflict.

The West German Trade Union Federation has about 6,000,000 members and exerts a powerful political influence. The great bulk of its membership is strongly anti-communist. But there have been many labor protests against western plans to rearm the Germans.

The communists already are actively engaged in a campaign in this country within individual factories in strategic industries, to agitate against the western defence program. The hand of the W. F. T. U. is clearly in evidence.

The W. F. T. U.'s open aims in Germany — to support all strikes and agitation against remilitarization, to infiltrate non - communist labor ranks, to agitate for the kind of peace Moscow wants, to campaign for "independence from imperialist exploitation" — were made public in Berlin last November.

The secret aims laid down at that meeting were something else. This program includes plans for sudden, swift action if and when the Soviet Union sees the need to paralyze western countries by striking at the vital industries and stirring up political chaos.

That is the path charted for the Trojan horse in West Germany. .

A STRIKE THAT BOOMERANGED

A few weeks ago, the employees of the Toronto Transportation Commission staged a strike. As is usual in such cases, the T.T.C. employees wanted more money for their services, a lot more money. When their demands were countered by an offer to arbitrate, they unhesitatingly tried to throw the whole of Toronto and its suburbs into chaos by halting the municipally-owned transportation system.

But the members of the Toronto Transportation Commission stood firm. Assisted by thousands of business firms, the people who felt they were being victimized by this strike formed car pools and truck pools to transport workers to and from their employment. Toronto's life went on. Finally, the strike was ended and the strikers went back to work.

But the people of Toronto and its environs did not all again begin patronizing the T.T.C. buses and street cars. Instead of transporting 950,000 revenue passengers a day, as it had been averaging before the strike, the T.T.C. is now transporting a daily average of only about 800,000.

As a result of this recession in revenues, the T.T.C. has announced drastic cuts in service. Buses which formerly operated around the clock will now, in some cases, be operated in rush hours only. Street car service is going to be similarly curtailed. Many of the employees of the T.T.C. will start immediately to work split shifts, instead of a straight eight hour shift, as formerly. A good many more are to be laid off, perhaps permanently.

As might be expected, members of the T.T.C. employees' union are unhappy about this. Their gains from the strike were trivial in relation to their losses and now a good many of them may be forced to compete for jobs in the open market.

There is a lesson to be learned from this by the members of any labor union which is continually demanding more and more money for less and less work. But there is also a lesson for members of municipal councils and of the various boards and commissions through which the affairs of the municipalities are administered. That lesson is this: the demands of civic employees, in Toronto and elsewhere, do not have to be met with an unending list of retreats and concessions.

A JUSTIFIED COMPLAINT

If the federal government is going to continue bringing displaced persons and other immigrants into this country, it should be willing to guarantee that they do not become public charges, Hon. Mackinnon Phillips, the Ontario minister of health, declared in the Ontario legislature, the other day.

At the present time, Dr. Phillips said, the Ottawa authorities assume responsibility for immigrants for only one year after their arrival. If an immigrant becomes ill after that, he becomes a charge on either the municipality or the province. If the illness were tuberculosis or insanity, the province footed the bill entirely, Dr. Phillips said. Since January 1, 1948, Ontario had paid for 70,000 days of hospital treatment for immigrants at a cost of more than $200,000, he added.

Unless the federal government could be induced to change its policy, Dr. Phillips said, "the province and the municipalities are going to be saddled with enormous hospitalization costs." He continued that many diseases did not make themselves apparent until after the victim had been here for more than a year.

Whether the federal government and its immigration department will pay any attention to Dr. Phillips or not remains to be seen, but surely he is not asking too much when he suggests that the agency which is responsible for bringing immigrants into the country should see that they do not become charges on either the province or the municipalities.

HE'S IN RED CHINA NOW

From Peiping, the capital of Red China, comes word that Canada's own Dr. James Endicott has turned up there. Dr. Endicott is chairman of the Canadian Peace Congress, which is the same sort of outfit as the Canadian-Soviet Friendship League.

Dr. Endicott denies that he is a Communist, but he seems on remarkably good terms with Communists everywhere and he is continually showing up at Communist gatherings and celebrations in various parts of the world.

Maybe Dr. Endicott is not Red, but he is certainly a deep shade of pink. Anyone who has ever heard one of his speeches knows that.

NOTE TO GABBY HAYES

A beard like yours I'll have to grow—
A bushy one and gray—
For when to Terry's home I go
Your role I have to play.

I am not grandpa any more.
So strong this western craze
Now Terry greets me at the door
With, "Howdy! Gabby Hayes."

Though hard to learn your speech I try,
I fear I never shall,
But "Howdy pardner!" I reply.
"What's new in the corral?"

And when with chow the table's spread
And spoken thanks and praise,
With him I share your favorite bread,

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

March 7th., 1932

This morning Belleville and district was attempting to dig out of the heaviest snowfall of the winter and were fighting a losing battle. Snow which began to fall early last evening continued with almost unabated force to this morning when it is estimated fifteen inches of snow had fallen. Front Street presented a strange sight as the heavy drifts piled high in the more sheltered places. Country roads are blocked and telephone and electric wires sagged under the weight of the clinging snow; tree branches gave way in many cases due to the weight of the snow. Scores of men were put to work by the city authorities to clear the streets even while snow continued to fall. Merchants had some job clearing entrances to their stores.

All snow ploughs in this district were returned to Toronto a week ago last Saturday by Smith and Sons upon instruction from the Department of Highways and as a consequence the highways can not be cleared of the unexpected heavy snowfall. Stages are getting through to Belleville, but are considerably behind time.

Mr. Harry Pearson, Seed Inspector for this district, says that the snowfall is the best thing that could have happened for the seeds and roots which have been almost ruined by the cold snaps and soft thaws of recent weeks.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

AND I COMPLAIN

I received a letter from a minister friend recently which set me back on my heels. We had been associated together many years ago. Suddenly he was stricken with tuberculosis. A valiant struggle of several years resulted in his return to full-time work. Then deafness—complete deafness—came upon him so that he has to follow conversation by lip reading alone. Yet in spite of all this, he is as cheerful as a lark, has done fine work as a pastor, and refusing to be retired has, in his declining years, given up a large congregation where he was greatly loved and sought out a smaller congregation where he could continue to be useful.

Just after receiving this letter from my friend, I was standing on a busy street corner waiting for a taxi. On the other side of the street I noticed a young man pulling a little express wagon filled with groceries. He was blind and was being led by a faithful dog trained for that purpose.

Yesterday I received word that a young friend, just past forty, was dying with an incurable disease. He had only recently reached business goal for which he had been striving for twenty years.

Three words overwhelmed me the rest of the day with an awful sense of guilt: "And I complain."

PUPPET SHOW

I happened to be perched in the gallery of the Victoria Plaza de Toros the other day when Mr. Don C. Brown, the Conservative MLA for Vancouver Burard, made his remarkable double somersault on the question of colored margarine.

As a member of the coalition government, you'll recall, Mr. Brown always made the noises expected of him in opposing colored margarine.

Now, having abruptly become a member of the opposition, he had made a clean switch in attitude and sharply criticizing the government ("in the interests of the consuming public") for their stand.

Now, Lord love you, I would not suggest that Mr. Brown was one of the roving kind. Heavens, no! But there are a staggering number of politicians who look eagerly to the cheer leader and will chant on cue. My party, right or wrong.

It got me to thinking, in my naive, boyish, idealistic way, what a fine thing it would be if we had a few politicians who would speak and vote for what they thought was right and not merely from what was written in their scripts.

Given a faint gleam of intellectual honesty by individual members and the world "politician" might be heard without ribald laughter.

As it is, I find myself sitting there as a spectator watching a kind of phony game, played by rules made in hotel rooms and committee chambers by fools masquerading as cunning men. You can count on the fingers of your hands the number of men who sit down there and are honest to themselves.

I've covered too many legislatures to be disturbed by this.

But now my daughter, aged 12, sat beside me and I saw that she was vastly impressed by the activities, by the feeling of democratic procedure which is still, thank God, bigger than all these sharp-brained little politicos.

For a moment I had the idiotic idea of springing up and shouting down at them, "Look! My daughter's here! Why don't you people stop the puppet show and get a little stature!"

My, it's trying to be an idealist.

Half of Five

What's happening out here? Is somebody going around tearing five-dollar bills in half?

Ten days ago somebody sent me a half a five-dollar bill (serial No. UC2956319) and I asked for the missing half to make it negotiable.

Today another half a fiver comes in from Lennie Pahto, who found it on the street at a place called Sointula, B. C., which is a new one on me. This one is serial No. NC3391102.

The two would join up nicely, but I suppose that's illegal. Actually, they're both large-size halves and in terms of area alone I reckon they'd make $5.50.

I can't think of anything to do with them except arrange them cleverly in my wallet so they make a nice opulent flash when I open it up to look for a dime.

New Dreams

These are sure enough confusing times, particularly in the realm of economics, and I've been brooding about the case of a friend of mine I'll call George which happens to be his name.

George is one of those people, who, since the war, has been dreaming of building a home of his own. He keeps putting in off, year to year, always living in hopes that the price of construction will come down.

Yesterday I got a cheerful letter from him, enclosing a clipping from the magazine Business Week.

Business Week reports that a substantial minority of American businessmen are anticipating a recession of an outright depression. Some say it has already started. Others think we'll face the real thing in about 18 months.

"This is a straw in the wind," George wrote. "If these people are right the cost of housing is bound to come down and it will have been worth my while waiting."

This sounded sensible, I thought, but there was something awfully wrong somewhere. It is surely a cockeyed state of affairs when a man will look hopefully ahead for hard times.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

ON PREPARATION

It is fine to be an important person in the world, but this always takes conscientious preparation. None of us just spring to fame or distinction overnight. It takes long preparation for the thing we most desire.

Recently we have been celebrating the birthdays of three great Americans who are as widely known and loved in foreign lands as in America. The three—Washington, Lincoln, and Edison. But if you read the lives of these great men you will note that it took long preparation to bring them to their final fame, which grows in lustre as the years accumulate. Washington was a farmer and surveyor. Lincoln was a backwoodsman —a rail-splitter, as the record says, and Edison was once a newsboy and telegraph operator. But each kept growing. Each had a long preparation for his great space in history.

There is no royal road to anything worth while. It's a rough road mostly taking courage, patience and many a setback, before great achievements begin to bloom and blossom. We are living in a fast-moving age in which the competent are those who keep climbing higher and who daily illustrate the power behind all thorough preparation.

We are often amazed by the sudden fame of a person never before known to us, but if we look to the record of the years of that one we will learn that long years of preparation gave the nod to that sudden distinction.

A goodly number of us recall that famous speech of William Jennings Bryan—known as "the Cross of Gold" speech, at the Democratic convention in Chicago of 1896. So great was the reception of that electrifying speech that his followers urged he be nominated for President that night. But Bryan said 'No' He said if it couldn't wait overnight he did not want it. Unknown to many, Bryan had been preparing for many years for that nomination! As things turned out, he could not be elected president, but many of his ideas—radical then—have long been enacted into the laws of today.

We can well afford never to get too anxious, never to become irked and impatient over failing to reach the goal of our dreams. Preparation in itself is an achievement!

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

At this time of year, it is cheering to realize that there are some people who do not give a hoot about the weather. And they are to be found among those who have to go out in it, regardless of what it is like. Postmen, truck drivers, locomotive engineers, milkmen, baker's men.

For them there is no choice. Those who have the choice of going out or staying in are the ones who kick up the worst fuss about the weather: housewives, real estate men, lawyers, parsons.

But a postman, for instance, takes a wholly rational attitude towards weather.

"Fatalistic?" I suggested to my postman.

"That's too fancy a word for it," explained the sleet-drenched postie. "I think it's plain indifference. When you are a young postman, you fuss about the weather. But in time, you gradually get used to the idea that you have to go out no matter what the weather is like. Cold, or sweating hot; pouring rain, deep snow to wade through with the bundle, or sleet like today. You begin to work out your philosophy by ignoring the weather. Presently, you reach a higher stage. You don't have to ignore it. You simply fail to think of it."

And the gallant fellow, with a good thirty pounds of mail in his big haversack, stepped out into the storm to trudge his old familiar round, along the same sidewalks, up the same steps, past the same bells, shove the mail into the same slots, day after week after month after year. He is surely one of the best if not the best characters in every neighborhood, and on such ugly days as can blow up this particular season, we let him pass by without a thought.

Next time we are at dinner while the wind howls and the windows shake, let somebody get up at table and give a toast to the boys who don't give a hoot; the postman, the milkman, the baker's man and all who drive machinery across the night.

THAT HANDY ACID CONDITION

Every day among the scores of readers who insist on reciting their symptoms several offer an assist—a physician or perhaps a dentist has told 'em their trouble is caused by an acid condition. Evidently they think that will make the diagnosis and treatment so simple that even I can handle it by mail.

This acid condition is handy to have around the office. It keeps the poor geeks guessing, even the smart ones who know as much as the quack himself knows about the conventional diagnostic dodges, such as "your nerves," "autointoxication," "toxicosis" and "indigestion."

I have often wondered what use people not under the care of a physician can have for lists of foods that leave acid, alkaline or neutral ash. Perhaps some seer has told them they have an acid condition.

In health and in most acute and chronic illnesses the body tissues and the blood are neutral or slightly alkaline. In some serious illnesses an acid condition may develop, and this acidosis, as physicians call it, is a serious complication which requires vigorous emergency treatment. This being a health column we may mention only diabetes as an instance of such illness. Every diabetic should be instructed about this by his physician, and every diabetic's family should be on the alert for any unusual drowsiness or stuporousness, which calls for immediate medical care.

For the special benefit of knuckleheads who can read here are some truths which no ordinary doctor, specialist or authority can deny:

No blood test will show whether an individual has cancer.

No electrical, radio, cosmic ray or other gadget will detect the presence of, or show the site of any disease the dupe may have.

X-ray examination (fluoroscope or picture) in the diagnosis of disease is hardly worth the price except as the X-ray evidence is interpreted by the technician (laboratory expert) in cooperation with the patient's physician, and even in such circumstances it is not decisive, as too many gullible customers imagine.

The quack who has only to learn that your chief complaint may be in order to sit back and tell you what to eat or what not to eat or what medicine to take or what beverage to drink to avoid or what kind of bath to take or whether you need a change of climate, behaves that way because he knows you are a sucker. Didn't you come to him, rather than go to a reputable physician, because he blows his own horn?

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

One is Enough

Ca and D as you suggest in the headache pamphlet has cured my migraine. A million thanks . . . (D. E. M.

Answer—Any reader who asks for it in writing (do not send a clipping) and incloses stamped self-addressed envelope, may have the pamphlet Why Have Headache?

Old Geek Heard From

I am an old geek who read your column or the parts of it that are printed, with pleasure and benefit. I inclose 25c and stamped, self-addressed envelope for your booklet, The Constipation Habit and Colon Hygiene. (S. W. F.)

Answer—Remember, I never called you an old geek.

Alcoholism

Husband is an alcoholic. Tries to quit but can't. It is undermining his health and making both of us very unhappy. Please prescribe something to rid him of the craving . . . (Mrs. S.)

Answer—There is no such magic. If your husband will get in touch with Alcoholics Anonymous and attend the meetings of the group in your vicinity, that may be the solution of the problem. If A. A. is not listed in telephone directory write Alcoholic Foundation, Box 858, Church Street Annex, New York City.

Cataract

Have cataract on my eye for 2 years. Please tell me if there is any eyewash that will take it off without operation. (J. D. T.))

Answer—Cataract is not on the eye. It is a clouding of the chrystalline lens in the interior of the eyeball. No eyewash or drops can remove. Operation is painless and may restore useful sight.

120 Die in Brazil Train Wreck

Mangled bodies meet the eyes of rescuers as they work amid the wreckage of a train disaster near Rio de Janeiro. At least 120 persons were killed and 300 injured when a suburban electric train struck the remains of two tank cars derailed a month ago, jumped the tracks and plunged into an oncoming express. The train disaster is described as the worst in the history of Brazil. — Central Press Canadian.

Joe Magarac Is Paul Bunyan Of Steelworkers

Pittsburgh, March 7. (AP)—Know why the United States has the greatest steel mills in the world? It's because a fellow named Joe Magarac jumped into a bath of molten metal.

At least that's what some steelworkers in the Monongahela River Valley near here tell you. They spin tall tales about big Joe, who had arms as big around as your waist, a back as broad as a barn door and a neck thick as a bull's.

He flattened steel ingots the way a housewife rolls pie dough and made cannonballs the way a youngster packs snowballs. He squeezed out railroad rails with his bare hands and cut sheets of steel with his teeth.

What Paul Bunyan is to lumbermen, Joe Magarac is to steelworkers. Like Paul, too, tales of his fabulous exploits grow just a little bigger with each recital.

Magarac is best known in the giant steel mills which dot the Monongahela Valley but his fame has spread to wherever men make steel.

The tale of how Joe first appeared goes like this:

"Steve Mestrovich, an open hearth worker, was having his annual picnic-party. Steve had a beautiful daughter, Mary, whom every bachelor wanted to marry.

Steve decided to stage a weightlifting contest. Mary would go to the strongest man.

Three huge steel bars were used for weights, the biggest scaling 350 pounds. Only three of the scores of strapping youths qualified to try their hand at the heaviest bar. One of the trio managed to move it slightly.

As he strained, the biggest man anyone ever saw strode up to the youth, lifted him with one hand and picked up the bar with the other.

"I'm Joe Magarac," the giant said, laughing.

"I was born inside an iron ore mountain," Joe said, "and lived in an ore pile for 20 years. I came here today to get a job in the mills. As for Mary, let her marry some fine steelworker. I just want to work and eat."

Great as Joe was, he couldn't live forever. According to one version Joe, died soon after his mill shut down for a brief time. His boss found him sitting in a ladle of molten steel one day.

"I don't like sitting around idle," Joe explained. "I hear new mills will be springing up all over the country shortly and that old ones will be needing repairs. I figure if I melt myself down I can become a part of the steel that goes into them. Then I can work all the time."

Then big Joe sat back, held his chin in the bubbling metal and melted away. The steel from the ladle was said to be the best ever poured.

CAMPBELLFORD

Fire Caused In an Attempt To Thaw Pipes

Campbellford—Fire, caused by an attempt to thaw frozen water pipes with the use of a blow torch, resulted in considerable damage about noon Wednesday to a grocery store and living quarters above it on Bridge Street East here.

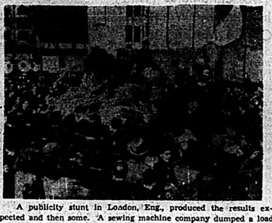
Mr. W. J. Masterson and Chas. Collins were using the torch to thaw the frozen pipes, when timbers caught fire and got out of control. When the firemen arrived, flames and smoke were shooting high above the building. Mrs. Masterson and her four small children, who occupy the apartment above the grocery store, were forced to flee to the street. A number of angira rabbits and a puppy were smothered by smoke and died in the building.

Firemen soon had the blaze under control, but not before the flames had done considerable damage to the rear of the living quarters. Stock from the Canadian Tire Corporation store adjoining the grocery, was removed to safety, but the interior of the store was not damaged. A great deal of smoke in the grocery store hampered firemen and made appraisal of the damage difficult. No official estimate of the damage has been made, but unofficial estimates place it as high as $5,000. This allows for smoke damage to the grocery stock.

11TH DIVORCE SUIT

Worcester, Mass., March 7 (AP)—The 11th divorce suit involving Ralph Picard and Mrs. Edith Picard and Mrs. Edith Picard was filed yesterday. Mrs. Picard asked a divorce for the sixth time, charging cruelty. Each has filed five suits previously with no action taken on any. And after each suit a reconciliation has taken place, officials said. They were married Dec. 9, 1944.

Looking for Needle in the Haystack



A publicity stunt in London, Eng., produced the results expected and then some. A sewing machine company dumped a load of hay in front of St. Paul's Cathedral and invited the public to look for a needle which had been thrown into the stack. So thousands of Londoners joined in the search, the prize being a new sewing machine. — Central Press Canadian.

Hydro Chairman Saunders Declares Selfish Interests Delay Construction of Seaway

Trenton. (Special.) — Ontario's hydro commissioner Robert Saunders blamed a few people with selfish personal interest for holding up construction of the seaway project when he addressed a meeting of Trenton businessmen at a dinner sponsored by the local Rotarians Monday night. Toronto's former mayor touched briefly the part the U.S. would share if they decided to back the plan.

Mr. Saunders said that the most remarkable co-operation "between Toronto and the Ottawa government", had risen out of the St. Lawrence discussions. He used two phraseologies to describe the potential of the St. Lawrence river. "The most dependable flow of water in the country" and "nature's greatest gift of natural even flow of valuable water." He said there would be an abundance of power available if the St. Lawrence project went through.

Commissioner Saunders impressed on the gathering that a hydro surplus must be built up to serve industrial expansion, which was going ahead by leaps and bounds. It was necessary to construct sources of supply years ahead.

Turning to the amusing side, Mr. Saunders recalled a time during Ontario's enforced power saving periods when a discontented party went so far as to accuse him of being associated with the Coleman lamp people.

Trenton public utilities manager E. R. Smithrim introduced the commissioner and Rev. A. S. McConnell, M.B.E., tendered the vote of thanks.

This will be the first time a prime minister has awarded the cup—most coveted prize in British soccer.

PAY BACK TAXES

Los Angeles, March 7 (AP) — The Duncan sisters—Rosetta and Vivian—yesterday danced to Uncle Sam's tune and paid up back income taxes of $3,577. The once-famous dance team thus ended a 10 year squabble. The government first filed suit in 1942 and received a judge which was reaffirmed in 1950.

Farewell Present For H.M.C.S. Sioux

Before H.M.C.S. Sioux left Korean waters they prepared a special party for the benefit of North Korean communists. They painted a practice shell white and wrote on it: "Compliments of H.M.C.S. Sioux — our 3,566th" and fired it at a shore battery. Lieut. Howard V. Clark of Stratford, Ont., holds the farewell token. The Sioux is expected to arrive at Esquimault on March 8. — Central Press Canadian.

WEDDINGS

BONTER—HOLLAND

A quiet, but pretty wedding was recently solemnized at the Rectory of the Church of St. Michael the Archangel, Belleville, by the Reverend Father J. J. Buckley, when Mary Patricia Holland, of Belleville, daughter of Mrs. Thomas J. Holland, and the late Mr. T. J. Holland, became the bride of Elmer Randall Bonter, of Trenton, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Randall Bonter.

The bride was attractively attired in a light grey tailored suit with pale pink accessories, and wearing a corsage of pink roses. She was attended by Mrs. R. J. Holland, of Belleville, who wore light green ensemble with brown accessories, and corsage of yellow roses.

Mr. Dolph McFadden of Belleville, attended the bridegroom.

Following a reception for fifty local and out-of-town guests, Mr. and Mrs. Bonter left for a wedding trip to Toronto, St. Catharines and Buffalo. They are residing in Trenton.

Out-of-town guests were present from Toronto, Peterborough, Trenton and Kingston.

Does Death Dance Before Plane Crash

Joan Katzman ,shown) 22-year-old ballerina, of New York, whose stage name is Harriet Toby, was among 37 persons killed and burned shortly after leaving the Riviera resort city of Nice. Miss Katzman had danced the night before in a ballet, ironically called "Del Amor a la Muerte" ("From Love to Death"). Witnesses said the two left engines of the four-engined "Languedoc" plane went dead as it began climbing, and it plunged to the ground. — Central Press Canadian.

Ingersoll Sketch Club Exhibits Paintings

An event of considerable interest to local artists, beginning this week at the Little Gallery, 110 Pinnacle Street, and continuing for two weeks, is an exchange exhibition of 20 paintings between the Ingersoll Sketch Club and that of the Belleville Arts and Crafts, which display opens in Ingersoll in April.

The pictures exhibited include two oils, "Stormy Skies", and "Approaching Rain", by Harry Whitwell, director of the Ingersoll Sketch Club; "The Pear Tree and March", by Betty Crawford; "Autumn Ballet and Autumn Sentinels", by Jean Beattie; "Autumn Tints and Afterglow", by Florence Crutcher; "Prelude III and Portrait of Lynda", by Jessie G. Robbins; "Pines and Nets", by Phyllis McFarlane; "Floral Piece", by Amy Deamude; "Still Life", by Ruth Griever; "After Rain", by Ida M. Grimes; "Tropic Turf", by Katherine Armstrong; "Friends", by Adelaide Engle; "The Ploughed Field", By Mildred Scott; and "Northern Lake", by William Kragh.

This fine collection may be viewed from 7 to 10 in the evenings. Another exhibition which has been on view at the McCarthy Theatre lounge for some weeks, under the sponsorship of the Belleville Arts and Crafts, and which is changed monthly, is also worthy of inspection.

Teachers View Home Economics In Rural Schools

The regular meeting of Thurlow Teachers' Association was held at Roslin Public School, Wednesday, with Mrs. Emily Burtt, president, in charge.

Miss Doris Pollock, teacher at Roslin school where a special experiment of home economics in rural schools is being carried on, introduced Miss Olive Brownlee, M.A., inspector of Home Economics, department of education in Ontario schools, who gave an extremely interesting talk on the methods, material, books, equipment, etc., of teaching home economics.

The primary objective of home economics teaching is to help the pupils to prepare to live a more satisfactory life. The content of the course is unique in that it covers a wide field—food, clothing, shelter, and happy human relationships. Each teacher adapts the course to the pupils' needs. The family and community background influence the program in each school.

Problems of nutrition, food preservation, purchasing of food, as well as wise buying in clothing are problems to be considered. The grade 8 teacher may discuss clothing problems of girls about to enter secondary school.

Child care is carried on with actual experiences in the classroom.

Care of the sick, setting up trays and care of the bedroom is considered.

Special Skills Help

The equipment would determine the scope of the work in a rural school but special skills of the teacher may take the pupils a long way. Home economics can be correlated with art. Senior girls or boys can be placed in charge of smaller pupils. The school lunch is a school project. There is no end to what may be accomplished using the home and school effectively. Home economics makes a substantial contribution to better family living. It is important to accept the family as it is and seek to give it a broader experience. It is a mistaken idea to try to teach economics as though there were one way of doing a certain thing.

Under Miss Pollock's supervision three grade eight girls, Shirley Skinner, Helen Sayers and Margaret Howes, demonstrated table manners and the proper serving of food.

R. H. Macklem, inspector for South Hastings, announced that a Recreation Leadership Training Course would be given in the Y.M.C.A., Belleville, on March 10 and 11, and that the local school radio broadcasts would be heard every Thursday afternoon from 2.15 to 2.30. He concluded his remarks by presenting a public speaking trophy to Mrs. Emily Burtt whose pupil Wallace Smiley came second in the district final at Brighton last fall.

K. M. Bird, president of the South Hastings Educational Association announced that a film strip projector had been purchased for the free use of schools in South Hastings and that school record forms and filing boxes are being distributed at cost to the public school boards who order them through the secretary, Mrs. Helen Shetler, R.R. 6, Belleville. Mr. Bird also moved a vote of thanks to Miss Olive Brownlee, Miss Pollock, Mrs. Empson, Mrs. Norman White, and others who had helped to make this one of the best meetings ever held in Thurlow township.

St. Andrew's W.M.S. Holds Attractive Tea

Wednesday afternoon, in spite of slushy streets, many attended the attractive tea and sale of homecooking held at the home of Mrs. W. J. Taylor, 221 Charles Street, under the auspices of St. Andrew's Women's Missionary Society.

Those who received were the hostess, Mrs. W. J. Taylor, Mrs. J. G. Hornsby and Mrs. V. Weir, who most graciously welcomed the guests, passing them on to the treasurers of the afternoon, Mrs. A. McCullough and Mrs. I. L. Moore, after which they were free to roam about the spacious rooms, where both art and delicious homecooking vied for prominence.

The tea table was prettily centred by a silver bowl with yellow and rose tinted tulips, pale blue iris, golden daffodils, asparagus fern and mauve and white stocks, upon an oriental cloth of Chinese lace, flanked by tall tapers of similar hues in silver holders. Near by, upon an antique buffet, yellow and pale blue tapers in a four-branched silver holder with vases of yellow daffodils and mauve stocks, added a complementary touch.

Those who presided at the silver services were, Mrs. J. Reid, Mrs. J. Lumsden and Miss Burnside, while those who served included, Mrs. W. D. Elliott, Mrs. H. Yorke, Mrs. D. Kane, Mrs. H. Arnott, Mrs. E. Pigden, Mrs. M. C. Ward, Mrs. J. Brisbin and Mrs. A. Taylor.

Those replenishing the trays of dainty sandwich and tiny cakes were: Mrs. A. Taylor and Mrs. J. Craig. The tea-room hostesses were Mrs. D. L. Fleming and Mrs. A. Cameron.

Mrs. J. Browning and Mrs. L. Hiddleston assisted in the kitchen.

The homecooking table, convened by Mrs. W. Mills and Mrs. J. Miller, was most attractive, and its mouth-watering date bread loaves; heart-shaped cake with mounds of white boiled frosting, delicately tinted green on top; choice rolls and buns; chocolate cake; taffy tarts; chocolate squares; and luscious lemon pie, jams, jellies, relishes and pickles, soon found ready purchasers.

A delightful tea, nicely convened.

Two Candidates Initiated by Women Of the Moose

On Thursday evening the Women of the Moose held their regular meeting in the Moose Hall with protem Senior Regent, Emily Jeffrey, presiding.

Recorder Gladys Ritch read the communications, and a report from the activities committee which was held in Lindsay last month. The proceeds from the rummage sale were turned in from Child Care chairman, Mary Peoples. Part of the proceeds will be donated to Holy Rosary school for windows for the library.

Two candidates were initiated, Olive Rath, sponsored by Sentinel Lena Connel and Beatrice Stapley, sponsored by Graduate Regent, Kay Donovan. Congratulations were tendered the sponsors of these candidates for bringing their friends into the chapter.

Following the meeting, refreshments were served by homemaker, Marg Mallette, assisted by Gladys Robertson, Luella Downes, Sheila McQuaid and Beatrice Stapley.

Fashion Flashes

A BRIGHT NOTE streaks through Spring and early Summer fashions. It is a cheerful yellow, rather on the mimosa tone, and it goes beautifully with the grays and blues that are so popular.

NEAT NUMBERS abound in the best millinery collections. Typical of the new hats is a small and pretty little Empire coif of rough red straw that curves to dual points on either sire of the forehead. Hat is finished with a lacy nose-length veil.

A SMOOTHIE about the hipline, with a nice flare towards the hemline—that's the new petticoat story. Nylon makes a nice number, smooth as can be, and finished with a triple ruffle. The first is of cut-out embroidery with matching insertion, the second a ruffle of stiffened horsehair braid and the bottom ruffle is plain.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Be casual about an "off-again-on-again" romance

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been going with a very nice fellow for about a year and a half, on a sort of off-and-on basis. That is, for six months we had swell times together, then for no reason at all he stopped calling me and didn't come around for a few months, so I started to date other fellows. Before I had time to like anyone else equally well, this fellow, with no explanation at all, came back into my life. He started calling me and asking for dates at a rapid pace he had never gone at before. All I could think of was that he had broken up with another girl and in order to forget her came back to me.

I don't know what to make of it. If he really loves me, as he has confessed on one occasion that he does, would he have stayed away those few months? Shall I try to see other fellows and not take this one seriously, or should I keep going with this fellow even though I keep wondering why he acted as he did? Do you think I should ask him for some explanation, or go on as if I didn't think twice about what he did? He asks me out every week, and I'm sure he isn't dating anyone else, but I don't accept all his invitations because I want him to think he isn't the only fish in the pond. After all, I'm afraid he might do the same thing again, and if I should get to love him, things would be pretty miserable. I am going on 18 and he is past 19.—S. N.

Dear S. N.:

My advice to you is to stop thinking so much about what made this young man act the way he did and just keep on seeing him now and then, as you're doing, and await developments. If he's really serious about you, the explanation will come out in time, while if you press him for an explanation now, you may ruin everything.

By all means go out with other young men and go on letting him think he isn't "the only fish in the pond." Again, if he is really serious, he won't stand for that very long, but will take steps to keep you to himself.

Here from Europe, mothers says no to privileges for her

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My family and I just came here from Europe a year ago. I am 15 and have a sister of 16 and a little brother two years old. My mother won't let me go to the movies, and won't let me stay after school to watch the sports, and I can't go to dancing school because I have to take care of my little brother.

Some of the boys of my school have several times asked me to go to parties, but my mother's answer was always no.

What can I do?—M. Z.

Dear M. Z.:

Have you ever thought that perhaps the reason your mother won't let you go out is because the boys and girls in the country where you came from are not allowed the freedom American boys and girls enjoy, and she doesn't understand?

If I were you, I would ask one of your teachers in school if she won't visit your home and get acquainted with your family. Tell her just what your problem is, and I'm sure she will know how to explain to your mother that in this country it is quite all right for girls of 15 to go to movies and parties with boys, and to attend school events of whatever kind.

Once your mother understands how things are done here, you'll probably find her eager for you to be like the girls in your adopted country.

HOLLOWAY ST. W. M. S. AUXILIARY

The March meeting of the Holloway St. W. M. S. auxiliary was held in the church parlor on Tuesday afternoon. The president., Mrs. G. Coulter presided.

Mrs. L. Bird and Mrs. R. Kilbank were named delegates to the Presbyterial meeting in Trenton

Following the reports and business, Mrs. R. Bell took charge of the worship service. A solo "Tell Me the Stories of Jesus," by Master David Templer was greatly appreciated.

Mrs. R. Bell, assisted by Mrs. W. Johns, Mrs. L. Bird, Mrs. H. Quinsey and Mrs Hutchinson presented another chapter of the study book telling of the work of the United Church among Canadians of European background.

Everyone enjoyed a social half hour when Mrs. R. Bell and her group served tea.

Readers' Friday Column

QUESTION:

I read your colmn in the paper and know you help others so I am hoping you can help me. Recently I have gotten a Dutch Oven and I know that properly used meats are not supposed to taste like a stew. Could you help me out and tell me how it is done and also any recipes you may have for using a Dutch Oven.

I know that wheat germ is very nutritious; have you any recipes using it in something small like cookies or muffins?—Mrs. T. M.

ANSWER:

There are many readers who will want the answer to this good question. I shall give you the method of making my favorite

POT ROAST
(Dutch Oven)

This is old-fashioned and I hope you are strict enough with your cooking to follow every detail. This is 'different" but delicious.

Cut of beef should be a 4-lb. piece boned and rolled, blade or chuck beef. Besides it you will need 3-4 cup sour cream which is easy and cheap to buy these days, salt, 1 teaspoon pepper, 1 clove garlic, 1 large carrot, 1 large onion, 3-4 cup unsweetened apple juice (in the old days when sherry was commonly used in cooking it was the liquid used for pot roast), 3 tablespoons flour, 1-2 cup water, 1 1-2 teaspoons lemon juice. The sour cream should be lukewarm so stand it near the heat. Mix together some salt and pepper and rub well into the surface of the meat. Sear all surfaces of the meat in about 3 tablespoons good drippings—this requires 12 minutes of constant turning, in the Dutch Oven without the trivet. Chop the garlic finely and add it and the thinly sliced carrot and onion, and cook while searing the meat during the last 3 minutes. Reduce heat as low as possible.

Heat the unsweetened apple juice or cooking sherry and pour over the meat. Stir in the sour cream which should be warm by now, cover tightly and cook over as low heat as possible for 2 3-4 to 3 hours—until when meat is pierced with 2-tined fork it is quite tender. Remove meat to hot platter. Pour or skim off excess fat. Stir flour into cold water until smooth; stir this paste into gravy which you should make up to 2 cups with additional hot water or hot potato water. Stir until thick. Add lemon juice and, if desired, 1 teaspoon sugar. This is ideal with mashed or Duchess Potatoes.

CHAMPION DROP COOKIES

The great objection to wheat germ is its flavor. Fresh wheat germ tastes good. So much of it is allowed to get stale and rancid most folks think this is its normal taste.

One-half cup soft shortening, 1 1-4 cups sugar, 2 eggs, 6 tablespoons light molasses, 1 1-2 cups sifted flour, 1-2 cup fresh wheat germ, 1 teaspoon each soda, salt, cinnamon, 2 cups rolled oats, 1-2 cup chopped nuts, 1 cup seedless or chopped raisins. Cream shortening then cream in sugar. Beat in eggs and molasses. Sift together the flour, soda, salt and cinnamon, and sift it over the creamed mixture and stir in. Stir in remaining ingredients. Drop by teaspoonfuls onto greased baking sheet—pointing up the drops and having them 2 inches apart. (If you've time chill this dough before dropping—chilling prevents spreading.) Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. for 8 or 10 minutes.

Use wheat germ in making porridge—1-2 cup, for each 2 to be served, mixed with the regular cereal you are using, such as cornmeal, oatmeal, 3-grain cereal or cracked wheat cereal.

A good rule for the Dutch Oven is to use it for everything you would either boil or bake or roast, but use an absolute minimum of water and heat. Watch this column for other wheat germ and Dutch Oven comment.

QUESTION:

Would you please send me some recipes how to make doughnuts with cream, buttermilk and milk. Also some recipes about using leftover oatmal. . . would appreciate other cookie recipes too with oatmeal.—Mrs. Wm. R.

ANSWER:

See above for oatmeal cookie recipe.

When I have not more than 1-2 cup leftover oatmeal I add it to the soup pot. Or use it instead of breadcrumbs in your meat balls or meat loaf. But the best solution is to very slightly reduce your amount of water and cereal used until you make just the right amount. This is difficult of course, if your family is large and some of them have a choice between cereal and eggs.

SWEET MILK DOUGHNUTS

Three and one-half cups sifted flour (plus a little more), 4 1-2 teaspoons baking powder, 1-2 teaspoon each cinnamon, nutmeg and salt, 3 tablespoons soft shortening, 1 cup sugar, 2 beaten eggs, 1 cup milk. Sift the flour, baking powder, spices and salt. Cream the shortening, then cream the sugar into it until mixture is light. Beat in eggs. Sift the dry mixture over alternately with the milk, stirring well between additions. If dough is too soft to handle add 1-2 cup additional sifted flour. Chill through. Roll out to 1-3 or 1-2 inch thickness and cut out with floured cutter. Heat fat to 390 deg. Fahr. (a cube of day-old bread will brown in 60 second in this) and slip in cut-out doughnuts, turning them over when under side is golden. Four are enough in the fat at one time. Drain on unglazed paper. Dredge with powdered sugar when cold.

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Strapless bodies are covered for the wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My daughter is to be married in a Methodist church in the afternoon: 2:30 o'clock. She not only insists that the maid of honor and bridesmaids wear strapless dresses, but also that she herself is to select the dresses. (1) Are strapless dresses correct for the bridal attendants to wear at the wedding? (2) If the bride-to-be selects the dresses, then who pays for them?—M.

(1) Today very many bridal attendants' dresses have strapless bodices—but of course the shoulders are covered for the wedding. Sometimes by a smart, short bolero, sometimes by an abbreviated edition of the fashionable spencer, sometimes by a little cape, often a tiered or draped cape.

(2) The bride-to-be always should select the dresses of her attendants, and plan every detail of their costumes. But each bridal attendant pays for her own costume, every detail of it except her flowers, which are provided by the bride or her parents.

Groom's relatives and friends invited to wedding even if they can't come

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Our son is being married in a state some distance from here, and the bride's family is sending invitations, but no announcements. Since, because of the distance, very, very few of our relatives or friends will be able to attend the wedding, our son doesn't want us to have invitations sent except to the very few who might be able to go. He insists that an invitation sent to someone we know cannot come to the wedding looks as if we were asking for presents. We want to do the proper thing—he knows we are writing to you, and promises to abide by your decision. Is he right in his point of view about the invitations?—Groom's Mother.

No; your son isn't right in his point of view about the invitations. Since the bride's family is sending invitations to their relatives and friends, they will naturally expect you and your son to compile and send to them a list of your relatives, friends of your family, and his own friends. When formal wedding invitations are being sent, they are sent to all relatives and friends, the groom's as well as the bride's—and whether or not they will be able to come to the wedding.

A wedding invitation is a friendly gesture that means that the bride and groom would like to have you with them at their wedding, and they hope it will be possible. You might remind your son also that certainly he would not want to have his fiancee's family think he hasn't any relatives and friends he would like to honor by sending them invitationes to his wedding! Also explain that in his case these invitations are even more important as "news" of the wedding, since no announcements are to be sent. Tell him, too, not to worry about the present-suggesting of the invitations. . . he has done his mannerly part when he has the invitations sent, and he can "let nature take its course" as to what they wish to do about sending presents. The invitation-bow is the important thing. . .the bow that says "We hope you can be with us on Our Day!"

Excessive Perspiration

Distributed by King Features Syndicate.

Emotional storms will cause excess perspiration

It is a generally accepted idea that, in civilized countries, the bathtub has become an institution, used daily by every member of the family. Unfortunately this is not the case, since the perspiration odor is something with which we come in contact now and then. Surely the victims of this affliction must be conscious of the fact that they are insulting the public nose. Even a girl's mother hesitates to refer to it, because she fears that she will hurt daughter's feelings. But she should take a chance on that. The unpleasant odor of skin moisture has changed the current of the lives of many women; it is a handicap to social and business affairs.

Lack of personal hygiene is the common cause. In ordinary cases, the daily bath—with plenty of soap, warm water and a brush of heavy bristles—will do away with the trouble. The use of the brush is necessary, as the chemical deposits of sweat glands cling to dead skin scales, and heavy friction will remove them. Undies should be changed frequently, stockings changed every day, foot powder sprinkled in shoe and, of course, a deterrent or deodorant applied to the arm pits now and then.

These toiletries are harmless and effective. They come in several forms. There are creams, powders and liquids. Some of the stronger liquid preparations, which must be used according to exact directions, will close the pores; these need to be applied only once every few months. No difficulties attend their use; the exudations of the sweat glands find outlets elsewhere, as your physician will tell you.

Nervousness is often a factor. An inclination to indulge in emotional storms will excess perspiration. Moisture will suddenly appear all over the body, especially in the palms of the hands. Hence the need of emotional control. Anger, jealousy, envy—all the mean emotions—have a deplorable effect upon the general health disturbing the nervous system, interfering with nutrition, bringing beauty ills long before their time.

One should not save on the cleaner's bill. The odor of perspiration will cling for some time. Sweaters must be washed frequently, even if they do not show signs of soil.

Careful attention to the diet is helpful. Rich foods should be avoided: boiled and roasted meats should be consumed in place of friedones. The diet should include plenty of fruit, fruit juices, vegetables and green salads.

Fashion Flashes

A COLLECTION of belts is a favorite device with girls who are boluse-and-skirt or sweater-and-skirt addicts. A handsome model is in brown calf, the sides widely curved to shape the waistline and edged with semi-circles of natural bamboo wood. Tailored front and small leather—covered square buckle.

A FAMOUS STORE in Texas has introduced a beautiful glove designed by the very youthful daughter of a famous movie mogul. It is of soft white glace kid with a tiny bluebird of blue kid appliqued onto the palm, wings out-stretched as though trapped while fluttering. Charming!

CASUAL and at—home fashions continue to gain interest with well-handled novelties in both fabric and design. Cloth woven of fine, all-over quilted yellow straw, makes a handsome skirt worn with white or with a bodice and "shrug" bolero of black velvet.

GALA EVENTS tend to bring out the full-length evening dress, especially on matrons—from young—marrieds to youthful grandmas. But the young girls still like the short evening dress for all but the most formal events. Beige silk organdie makes a delightful dance dress with a broad V neckline. Sleeves billow from a molded shoulder line. Woven gold stripes in various widths accentuate the cut of the bodice.

A WONDERFUL RANGE of styles and fabrics will be found in the new blouses now coming into the stores. Silk surah makes a nice suit blouse that has a deep shawl collar with a pull-through bow. The natural shoulder has a modified dolman sleeve finished with narrow, buttoned bands.

IT'S NICE, on a cold, gray, blustery day, to look in on a spring hat collection. We did just that, and admired a rocker sailor in black organdie woven like straw with black and pink organdie bows finishing the crown band in front and accenting the turned-up brim in back. The back bows are larger and looser.

FANTASY and imagination mark straw bags for resort wear, for Summer later on. A beauty is a wood box bag completely covered with woven raffia. Rosettes in an intricate design cover the entire lid. The bag is fitted with raffia-covered compact lighter, and so on.

SOMETHING NEW and different is the embroidered calfskin bag. A box bag of fine black calfskin, with a step-down lid and red leather lining, has a wide, long luggage handle decorated with jet beading and silk braid in scrolls to which little jet beads are attached.

Woodstock Youth is Named Easter Seal Child for 1952

THE LONE RANGER
Coloring Book

Each year a crippled child is designated as "Timmy" to typify the handicapped youngsters on whose behalf the Ontario Society for Crippled Children makes the Easter Seal campaign for funds. "Timmy" 1952 is Fred Atkinson of Woodstock, shown here with his mother, Mrs. Edward Atkinson.

Frederick Atkinson, 12, of 595 Mary Street, Woodstock, was today named the province's "Timmy" or Easter Seal Child for 1952, by officials of the Ontario Society for Crippled Children.

The clean-cut, handsome youth was chosen as typical of Ontario's crippled children who are receiving services from the society, financed through Easter Seal funds. His dramatic story of fighting a winning battle against a crippling disease for more than 12 years illustrates what Easter Seal services actually do to help crippled children become healthy, useful adults.

When he was born, Fred was weak, anemic baby with no control over his lower limbs. Some doctors despaired of his life and others said he would never be able to walk.

Diagnosis by specialists revealed that Fred had "spina bifida," a condition in which a segment of the spine is missing and all muscles from the waist down are paralyzed.

Fortunately for Fred and his parents, the Rotary Club of Woodstock and the Ontario Society for Crippled Children discovered their son, made him their protege and saw that he had the care of doctors, therapists and teachers. At the age of seven months he was sent to one of the Society's clinics in London where a tumor, which had formed on his spine was removed. At seven years of age he was again sent to a clinic, this time an orthopedic one in Toronto, where he was outfitted with special braces and crutches.

Fred's treatments are still continuing after 12 years but today, with the help of leg braces and crutches, he "walks" alone and is thinking of joining his 5 year old sister, Judy and his father and mother in the Woodstock Easter parde.

Fred goes to Grade V in Northdale Public School and is as happy as any other 12 year old there. He plays shinny with the other kids on Mary Street, hikes downtown to the Saturday matinees, goes for guitar lessons and in the summer plays baseball and golf. His hobbies are building model boats in their basement workshop with his dad, a feed mill employee, and painting in water colors. Some day he hopes to study medicine.

"I've always tried to make Fred feel there's nothing other boys 12 years old do that he can't do," said Mrs. Atkinson. "So war I've seen nothing he actually misses out on. Our house has been so happy since Fred really started to 'walk.'"

The 1952 Easter Seal campaign will extend from March 13 to Easter Sunday, during which time the Ontario Society for Crippled Children expects to reach its quota of $400,000. There are 4,700 crippled children under care in Ontario. Your Easter Seal contribution will make possible services which help them walk, talk and live like other children.

FEDERATION

There should be a more careful investigation, he said. If it were found that through lack of either knowledge or diligence there had been mistakes, they should be brought to light and dealt with.

Similar charges of negligence or delay were brought up in the Senate and dealt with by Agriculture Minister Gardiner. He said the first indication that anything more serious than stomatitis had appeared in Saskatchewan came Feb. 13. Tests were now being made to determine whether what was first diagnosed as stomatitis actually was foot-and-mouth disease.

Mr. Gardiner also came under fire outside parliament—this time for statement that specimens from which foot-and-mouth disease was diagnosed came from the Burns and Co. Ltd., plant in Regina.

The manager of the Regina plant, A. R. Pearson, said there was "no evidence whatever" that the disease was first discovered in, or spread from his plant.

Almost Completed

He also referred to Mr. Gardiner's statement that an outbreak of the disease at the Burns plant was followed by others along Wascana Creek which carried offal from the plant and supplied water to several frams.

In the 50-mile-square area eligible for federal aid, slaughtering of herds was almost completed. Veterinarians prepared to clean and disinfect farm buildings with teams of government men.

Meanwhile, the livestock trade continued unsettled as a result of the outbreak and subsequent embargoes by various provinces against prairie livestock and meat.

Reports said meat supplies were short in the British Columbia interior as a result of that province closing its borders to livestock. Vancouver packers' stocks were dwindling in supplying the interior and prices were rising.

Four of Meek's Relatives Were In Mental Hospital

Cornwall, March 7. (CP)—Evidence that four of Elias Meek's relatives had been confined to a mental hospital was introduced yesterday at his trial on a charge of murdering Mrs. Dolly Alguire.

After Mr. Justice H. A. Aylen denied a defence motion for acquittal on grounds on insufficient evidence, the defence opened its case by calling two psychiatrists and a physician to the stand.

The 21-year-old farmhand is charged with the fatal stabbing last Sept. 28 of his employer's wife on the farm of Allan Alguire at nearby Harrison's Corners.

Dr. Maclean Houze, of the Ontario Hospital, at Brockville, said four of Meek's relatives, including two sisters, had been treated at the institution. Dr. Houze said the accused's two sisters suffered from schizophrenia. An aunt had suffered from melancholia, while a cousin was a schizophrenic and also mentally deficient.

Dr. Gordon Lugsdin, Ottawa psychiatrist, said he found Meek suffering from a type of schizophrenia. Fifty to sixty per cent of cases of this kind had a family history of the disease.

Dr. J. C. Wilson, Cornwall physician, said he had doubts about Meek's sanity from the time of his first examination of the accused last fall. He said Meek had a "deadpan" expression, spoke in monotones, showed indifference and suffered delusions. Dr Wilson agreed, however, that the opinion of mental experts was more reliable than his in determining Meek's sanity.

Robert Meek, brother of the accused, said Elias was a quiet type, but he noticed a change in him about a month before the "accident". At that time the witness said, he thought Elias looked pale and his eyes were staring, although his talk was normal.

CANADIANS CAN

The only cheerful financial news Mr. St. Laurent brought forth was his statement that there will be some tax adjustments in the budget and that the cost of living shows signs of stabilizing.

From the standpoint of interest to the man in the street, his statement highlighted a day which saw himself, Mr. Drew, M. J. Coldwell, CCF leader, and Solon Low, Social Credit chief, touch off the debate which normally last for a week.

Urged to Take Lead

Other highlights:

1. Mr. Coldwell urged Canada to take the lead in advocating a new political approach to end what he called a military stalemate in the search for a Korean armistice. He said American leadership, if unchecked, may touch off a general war with China.

2. Mr. Drew questioned whether the government has the authority to drop the term Dominion from official documents without consulting parliament and the provinces and said any tampering with the term should be done in the open in parliament and not "by indirection."

3. Mr. St. Laurent said the most careful probe should be made by a Commons committee of the handling of the foot-and-mouth cattle outbreak by government officials. The officials should not be judged before they have a chance to explain themselves.

4. Mr. Low accused the government of dragging the office of governor-general into the realm of contentious politics by naming a Canadian. He added, however, that he has only admiration for Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey, the first Canadian-born governor-general.

Mr. St. Laurent's speech was a point-by-point reply to Mr. Drew. In it, he conceded that "most Canadian taxpayers feel that under semi-peaceful conditions, even under conditions of a cold war, taxation has just about reached as high limits as it is proper for them to bear at this time."

Surplus May be $500 Million

He said there is no way that inflation can be completely choked off by government action but he pointed to the fact that there have been no startling developments in the cost-of-living index in the last two months and said the trend indicates a stabilization.

The Prime Minister indicated that the government's surplus, $721,000,000 after nine months, will taper off to something more than $500,000,000 compared to the $30,000,000 originally forecast by Mr. Abbott.

To charges that nothing is being done to regain Canada's British markets, Mr. St. Laurent said Canada unfortunately is not in a position to offer either gifts or loans because she herself must sell all she can produce to balance trade.

His reply to Mr. Drew on the Dominion issue was that the government is merely removing the name Dominion of Canada from various statutes because it is not the right name. Canada is a Dominion, he said, but its right name under the constitution is Canada.

All to Get Raise

Toronto, March 7. (CP)— All Toronto Board of Education employees, teachers and non-academic staff alike, will get a straight $200 cost-of-living bonus this year.

The Board decided on the move last night as a stop-gap measure for 1952 to aid employees, who have been asking for higher pay.

The bonus will add about $740,000 to the tax bill, since there are 2,800 teachers and 900 non-academic employees.

Tom Gard's Note Book

Autumn always brings a number of tasks to the home owner, especially if he is a gardener. A few days ago I noticed such a man preparing for winter. He had already constructed a reel for his garden hose, impressing upon me the need to drain it after use, then to store it dry in order to prevent the rubber from rotting. Well, his idea is worth copying.

HAMPERS FOR CLOTHES

His wife was just as handy, in fact she had converted a bushel basket into a clothes-basket by enamelling the outside white, and the inside lined with colourful chintz. This seemed to be the envy of her neighbours.

DOOR-MAT FROM BOTTLE TOPS

There was a youngster in the home, the kind that thoughtlessly ran in after school without wiping his feet. Dad soon corrected this by collecting bottle tops, then in a few minutes he made a door-mat by nailing the tops in even rows on two pieces of pine joined with a pair of cleats. I noticed that the tops were nailed closely together.

ORANGE CRATES FOR SHELVES

This chap turned out to be quite an amateur craftsman, and he liked everything in order. He was very proud of two shelves he had constructed from orange crates, one to serve his purposes in the basement, and the second one, nicely finished, for the living room.

Fulford Shield Presented To Guild Head

At their regular meeting on Wednesday night, members of the Belleville Theatre Guild enthusiastically acclaimed the cast and stage staff of "The Voice of the People," the presentation which won for the group the Fulford Shield at the recent Eastern Ontario Drama League Festival. Director Sid Rose presented the shield to Mrs. W. J. Doyle, Guild president, who announced that arrangements had been made to display it for a time in the window of a Front Street store.

Apart from this brief but pleasing ceremony, the main feature of the evening was the presentation of a short workshop play under the direction of Catherine Darlington. Entitled "Suitable for Charity," the play struck a note of comedy right from the start, and maintained it throughout to a hilarious finish, giving the cast plenty of practice in the difficult art of "waiting for laughs." The cast was as follows. Nina Gault, Eleanor Jerard, Helen Sulman, Graham Bell, Murray Irwin, Ray Brule and Jack Darlington.

Letter of Resignation

During the business section of the meeting, secretary Ed Day read a letter of resignation from Tom Peake, formerly treasurer and business manager, who is leaving the city. Mrs. Doyle announced that the executive had decided to split this office and that Jules Abramsky had been appointed treasurer and John Ryan, business manager. The latter lost no time in announcing the arrangements made regarding ticket sales for the Guild's next performance early in April, and most of the tickets were distributed to members before the end of the evening. Joe MacKay spoke briefly on the staging of the plays, which it had been decided would be put on in the Queen Victoria School auditorium, and Robert Tanner asked for volunteers to help construct stage lighting equipment for this event.

Mrs. Doyle mentioned future activities of the group. The invitation of B.C.I. Home and School Association to present a play for discussion at one of their meetings had been accepted with Mrs. J. C. R. Punchard appointed director. Casting for this would take immediately after the meeting. In addition, it was proposed that two more workshop plays should be prepared, casting for which would be done at the next Guild meeting. Of the plays chosen, one had an exclusively female cast, the other required four men.

After the formal meeting was adjourned, members showed little inclination to go home as they stood or sat around in groups, discussing in animated fashion all the various aspects of the theatre.

'Y' to Sponsor Special Course

A course for recreation leaders will be conducted by the Y.M.C.A. on Monday and Tuesday afternoons and evenings March 10 and 11, which will be of interest to church leaders, school teachers, camp counsellors, industrial and community recreation leaders, parents and all persons concerned with increasing their knowledge and ability to give leadership in various phases of recreation..

For this course, Harold Harton, social recreation consultant, Community Programs Branch of the Department of Education has been secured as the director. Mr. Harton has had an extensive experience in various phases of recreation. He started as a member of the Y.M.C.A. Leaders' Corps and was a member of Provincial Hi-Y and Ontario Boys' Parliament. He served as a Y.M.C.A. Boys' Work Secretary and Adult Program Director, before becoming Recreation Director for Forest Hill village. He joined the staff of the Ontario Department of Education in 1949 as a field representative and became adviser in social recreation. Mr. Harton has conducted over one hundred and fifty demonstration courses in all parts of Ontario.

A descriptive folder on the course is available at the Y.M.C.A. Only a limited number of persons will be registered in order to give opportunity for individual instruction. Interested persons are therefore advised to make application for registration without delay.

CAMPBELLFORD

Firemen Hostile Over Action Of Seymour Council

Campbellford—Campbellford firemen have stated they will wait only 10 days for the township of Seymour to place an order for a new fire truck, or after that time they will refuse to go out into township to fight fires. The firemen met at a special meeting on Tuesday night to discuss the new agreement between the town and the township relative to the Campbellford truck answering calls to Seymour township fires.

At the council meeting held here on Monday evening, the town ratified agreement with the Seymour council whereby the local equipment, and men, would answer fire calls to the township. A rate of $50 for the first hour or portion thereof, and $25 for each additional hour or portion thereof, as well as 20 cents per mile, both ways was decided upon.

This agreement was to be in force for one calendar year, or until such time as Seymour took delivery of their new truck. A number of fires in the township resulting in a great deal of property loss, that could have been avoided if equipment had been available, sparked ratepayers into demanding action from the Seymour council. They finally stated they would buy a truck as soon as possible and in the meantime would buy fire protection from the town.

Will Not Buy at Present

At a meeting of the Seymour council on Monday, after signing the agreement with Campbellford, the council decided to shelve the whole issue and said they would not consider purchasing fire fighting equipment at present.

The firemen took the attitude that they thought this was the way things would turn out, and stated they did not think Seymour had any intention of purchasing their own equipment. They stated bluntly on Tuesday that after 10 days, if Seymour has not placed an order for their new truck, they will notify the town council that they refuse to answer township calls, and the new agreement will have to be cancelled. One clause of the agreement states that if there is sufficient reason, either party may cancel the agreement by giving the other party 10 days notice.

Now that firemen have taken this stand, no one knows just what will happen next. It is expected Mayor W. A. Kingston will call a special meeting of the council and firemen this week to try to iron the thing out. The firemen were to be paid $5 extra for each call to the country.

Junior Hawks Rally In 3rd To Take 2nd Victory From Kingston Vics 10-8

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

CLOSE ONE!

The junior Hawks have a two-game lead on the Kingston Vics in this struggle for the junior "B" group championship and it looks at this moment as if they will take it. But if they do or don't, they will know they have been in a hockey battle when the trumpeters sound taps.

Just what these Hawklets have in reserve appears to be plenty. For the third time in three weeks they have roared from behind to snatch victory from almost certain defeat. They did it in Peterborough twice and last night in Kingston they unleashed a flaming third-period offensive to score six goals and snitch the win from under the very nose of Maxie Jackson's gallant crew.

It must have been heart-warming for Jackson to see that crowd of over 1400 paying customers in the pews in the new Community centre. If ever a hockey coach, sponsor, mentor or whatever other monikers Jackson holds, deserved a financial "break" it is Der Maxie. He hung on when things were darkest. He drained the Jackson financial barrel and one night went home with $1,25 as his share of the "spoils". In addition he sponsors a minor hockey team or teams. He deserves everything that is coming to him in a financial sense.

But back to the Hawklets. They are two games up—but they are not out of the woods yet. This Kingston crew is far from beaten. And they're the type of team that won't admit defeat until the final whistle. They're back here Saturday night, and don't think for a minute that this scuffle won't be a honey of a tussle. The Vics are desperate. And they're liable to come up with the brand of hockey that swept aside the powerful Lindsay threat. Don't sell 'em short.

PRODIGALS!

The following paragraph appeared in the column of the Peterborough sports scrivener.

"Meantime, the annual meeting of the C.O.B.L. has been set for March 11 at the LaSalle Hotel in Kingston. Teams in last season were: Belleville, Batawa, Napanee, Kingston, Picton, Brockville and Smiths Falls. Some talk this time of taking in a few U.S.A. teams and maybe operating in two sections. Perhaps the odd interlocking game, too. It mightn't be too bad a setup for Petes and Oshawa this summer, provided the opposition was strong enough. If it's senior calibre then the locals should check into the circuit and seek entry. But we don't want any more intermediate ball masquerading as the senior brand."

And what is the COBL supposed to do about it. Go into paroxysms of joy, get out the bands, hold a civic reception with a few figurative fatted calves to celebrate the return of the baseball prodigals?

Out in the baseball cold so to speak, Oshawa and Peterborough, the latter at least, now want to get back into the Central Ontario fold. Oshawa was denied entry into the Intercounty League. Both Oshawa and Peterborough, heaved out of the Viaduct League last year, are aware they are welcome to stay away from that loop this year. In fact the Viaduct League went on record as wanting no part of them.

Now, according to the Peterborough scribe , "It (COBL) mightn't be too bad a set-up for Petes and Oshawa this summer." To use that gentleman's own description of the COBL last summer, this "outlaw intermediate" loop might, like the Intercounty and Viaduct, want no part of them either.

The Central Ontario League operated very nicely last year thank you. True, some of the squads went in the "hole", had their arguments and so forth but it was not a bad season taking everything into consideration. None of the squads in the loop could afford the high-priced help that decorated the Oshawa-Peterborough squads, nor can they do so this year.

In all probability the COBL will operate along the same lines as last year and outsiders can take it or leave it. It's downright decent of the Peterborough scrivener to suggest his "locals check into the circuit and seek entry."

Following this baseball kit inspection we imagine every entry in the COBL will be tearing its hair and gnawing its nails in a mental frenzy awaiting the verdict.

Egad, men, far be it from the COBL to foist "intermediate baseball masquerading as the senior brand" on the good folk of Peterborough. This "intermediate" brand, call it what you will, was good enough for the fans of teams from Belleville to Smith's Falls, and in all probability twill be the same this year.

After all, there is nothing to prevent the Oshawa-Peterborough "senior" squads from having a cosy little two-team loop of their own, and giving the fans of each city the brand of baseball to which they are accustomed.

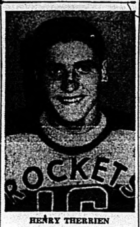
The Thomas Bata memorial trophy will go to the grand champions, while a trophy donated by Frank Oppenshaw of Trent Bridge will be presented to the most valuable player in the league.

Therrien Scores Winning Goal In Fiery Last-Heat Comeback As Mates Notch Six Goals



HENRY THERRIEN
.. Pokes Potent Puck

A dramatic third period comeback by the Belleville Hawks gained them a 10-8 decision over the Kingston Vics in the second game of the junior B final series at the Kingston Community Centre last night. One thousand four hundred and 93 saw the game.

Trailing by two goals going into the third period, the Hawks rallied to even the count for the first time in the game at the six minute mark. Vics regained the lead momentarily but the Hawks flew back to the attack and went ahead for the first time at the three-quarter mark in the period. Once again the homesters rallied to knot the score but within seconds, the Hawks regained and held the winning margin.

Penalties were evenly divided, five to each squad, although Kingston gained an extra three minutes on Houle's major penalty for clipping Reynolds across the brow with his stick in the first period.

Three Injured

Don Senior and Reynolds of the Vics and Therrien of the Hawks all retired temporarily from the game for repairs.

Vics carried a wide margin of the play throughout the first two periods and deserved a better fate. They led 4-3 at the end of the first 20 minutes, 6-4 at the end of the second, but collapsed before a determined Hawk onslaught in the third.

Maurice Chevrefils, centreman of the Kingston team, was high scorer garnering three goals and a pair of assists. His linemate, Wilson Reid, notched one and fed for three while Bob Vallier on the other side of the line scored once and assisted on two more. Whyte, Tozer and Redmond scored singletons, the latter gaining an assist while Montgomery aided on a pair.

Hec Lalande was the top goal man for the winners, turning the hat trick, two of them unassisted. Ted DeGray tallied twice and assisted once while Henry Therrien bagged a pair of important goals. Gilmour and Strahan each picked up a goal and an assist, Doran getting the other goal and assists going to Mason, Carey and Pete Green who had a pair.

Score Alternates

The play started off at a furious pace in the first period with first the Vics and then the Hawks scoring. Vics got the jump when Houle received his major and a couple of minutes later Wilson went off for tripping. They failed to hold however and Hector Lalande broke away while the Kingston team had a two man advantage and beat Senior cleanly.

Vics jumped back into a two goal lead on Chevrefils first goal and appeared headed for a runaway.

Strahan tallied on a Hawk pressure play while the Vics were undermanned, shooting from behind the net, the puck deflecting in off a defender's stick.

Chevrefils' second goal, just before the end of the period, put the Vics two goals up.

The Hawks, however, had other ideas and pressured the attack. It was just like a circus on the ice for a few minutes, goals being scored at the pace of one a minute, Hawks having a 3-1 edge to knot the count. Henry Therrien knotted the tying goal on a lovely finish to a three way attack with Green and Carey. Lalande knotted the count the second time on a smart play with Bill Strahan.

Therrien's second goal was a beauty. He grabbed a loose puck at the Belleville blue line, rounded 2 Vic defencemen and tore in, making no mistake, pulling Senior out before shooting.

Chevrefils, Vallier and Montgomery combined to tie things up again but Hec Lalande notched the winner at 16.36 when he netted one from the corner.

Coach Max Jackson of the Vics pulled his netminder with one minute and thirty-five seconds to play when his team gained an important face-off in the Belleville end. The scheme backfired when Ted DeGray lifted a long shot down the centre that carried into an empty cage.

Stars for the winners were Lalande and Therrien, the latter being used only sparingly, Doran and DeGray.

Chevrefils, Reid, Whyte and Redmond were all flying for Vics, being very good on the offensive but, like their Hawk counterparts, weak on the backchecking.

The Teams:

Belleville Hawks: Goal, Barclay; defence, P. Green, Wilson; centre, Lalande; wings, Jacklin, Strahan; subs DeGray, Doran, Gilmour, Mason, Carey, Therrien, Houle, Munroe.

Officials: Louis Lecompte, Trenton, and Jim Crombie, Bowmanville.

Bisons Clinch Third Spot In American League

(By The Associated Press)

The Buffalo Bisons, assured of an American Hockey League playoff berth, are not coasting.

Buffalo clinched the third and last place in the eastern division Wednesday night. They have only a slim chance of taking over second from the Providence Reds but they are not giving up hope.

The Bisons came from behind and defeated Indianapolis Caps, 6-4 last night to pull within seven points of the Reds. The Bisons have seven games to play and Providence six.

Indianapolis jumped off to a 4-1 lead in the first period but the Bisons came back with two in the second and rifled home three more in the third to win.

Stan Warachri tied it up at 4-4 shortly after the 15 minute mark of the third. George Pargeter blazed home the winner with 59 seconds remaining and veteran Ab Demarco clinched it by firing into an empty net with only 17 seconds of play left.

Major Leagues Spring Games Open Tomorrow

New York, March 7 (AP)—All 16 of the American and National League teams are scheduled to open their spring exhibition game schedule on a broad southern and western baseball front tomorrow.

New York Yankees, world champions and American League pennant winners will start off against St. Louis Cardinals of the National loop at St. Petersburg, Fla.

Cleveland Indians and New York Giants open their Grapefruit League at Tucson, Ariz. The Giants are defending National League champions.

Mohawks Ready For Playoffs

Cincinnati, O., March 7 (AP)—Cincinnati Mohawks of the American Hockey League, who have been operating for more than two weeks with a substitute goalie, today brought in David Broadbelt, 19-year-old amateur from Montreal, for goal-tending "insurance" in their drive toward a playoff position.

The veteran Paul Bibeault, Mohawk ticket manager, has been holding down the goalie's job since Emile Francis was recalled by New York Rangers.

Broadbelt has been playing with Montreal Royals. Mohawk officials said he will be used only in the event Bibeault should be injured.

Boivin Starts With Maple Leafs

Toronto, March 7 (CP) —Leo Boivin will skate into his National Hockey League debut with Toronto Maple Leafs here tomorrow night.

The 183-pound former junior with Port Arthur Bruins has been brought up from Pittsburgh Hornets of the American Hockey League to bolster the Leafs' defence, riddled with injuries. Boivin was sent to the A.H.L. after he left the Leafs to ponder at his Prescott home whether he wanted a pro hockey career.

Hoppe Hops To Good Start

San Francisco, March 7 (AP) — Defending champion Willie Hoppe got off to a flying start last night when he defeated Herb Hardt of Chicago 50-26 in a first-round match of the world three-cushion billiard tournament.

Hoppe, 64, ran out a string in 44 innings. He has won the world title 10 times.

A crowd estimated at more than 400 saw the match.

Annual Last-Ditch Battle On In National Hockey League; Rangers Take Over 4th Place

(By The Canadian Press)

The annual last-ditch battle for the four-team National Hockey League playoffs is on.

New York Rangers contributed to it last night by downing the last-place Chicago Black Hawks 5-3, to take over sole possession of fourth place, two points ahead of Boston Bruins.

Detroit Red Wings, who sewed up the N. H. L. championship Wednesday night, made their contribution to the New York cause by coming from behind for a final-period 2-1 victory over the Bruins. New York and Boston previously were tied for fourth.

Detroit's victory was the first of nine games which the Wings will play to finish out the schedule with nothing more at stake than a few individual honors.

But they played as if they were battling for survival—in a rough, close checking contest. Tony Leswick sent them in front midway in the second period and Ed Sandford deadlocked it a few minutes later. Marty Pavelich's winning goal came near the 10-minute mark of the last frame.

Third With Rally

It marked the third straight game Detroit has beaten Boston with a third-period rally. Some 10,691 Detroit fans saw it.

Reg. Sinclair and Edgar Laprade led the Rangers' assault before 8,196 Chicago fans. Sinclair banged in two goals and assisted on another, while Laprade ran up three assists.

Chicago moved into the lead at the outset with Jimmy Peters' goal at 3.33 of the opening period. But New York quickly took over 2-1, increasing the margin to 3-1 in the second.

Sinclair's second goal of the night at 1:41 of the last frame set the New Yorkers up with a comfortable edge until the end.

Besides Sinclair, it was Steve Kraftcheck, Ed Kullman and Ed Slowinski who counted for the Rangers. Rookie Steve Wituk and Bill Mosienko were the other goal-getters for the Hawks.

The playoff picture may be clearer after five weekend games. Detroit meets third-place Toronto twice, Saturday at Toronto and Sunday at home while Chicago takes on second-place Montreal Saturday and then moves to Boston for a game with the Bruins. Montreal plays the Rangers at New York Sunday.

Chess Masters Tie

Havana, Cuba, March 7 (AP)—Nicolas Rossolimo, French champion, moved into a first-place tie yesterday with Erik Eliskases of Argentina in the 22-round international chess tournament.

Rossolimo defeated Carlos E. Guimard in 47 moves in a 10th-round game which had been adjourned Wednesday night.

This gave Rossolimo eight points and put him just ahead of Miguel Najdorf of Argentina, with 7 1-2 points, who did not play yesterday. Eliskases has won six, drawn four, lost none, while Rossolimo has won seven, drawn two and lost one.

Galt's Attempt To Force Game Vetoed by OHA

Toronto, March 7 CP) —An attempt by Galt Black Hawks to force Toronto St. Michael's and Toronto Marlboros to play the final game of their Ontario Hockey Association Junior A schedule failed yesterday at a meeting of the OHA council.

Officials of St. Michael's and Marlboros, with the approval of the OHA had agreed to forget their last league game because it would have no effect on the league standings.

Galt had contended that in not playing the game the Toronto teams were liable to forfeiture of their $500 league bond and were ineligible for the playoffs.

The council took no action on the charge but passed a measure making it obligatory in future for all teams in the league to consent to a game cancellation.

Business Girls Trim Northern

"Y" Business Girls defeated the Northern Electric B. team in a one-sided score of 75-13 in the Y.M.C.A. ladies' basketball league on Wednesday night. The Business Girls kept themselves in possession of first place with 7 wins and no losses while the Northern team remains at the bottom of the heap with 5 losses.

D. McLean was high scorer with 19 points closely followed by Marg Cousins with 18 points. B. Gibson scored 14 points while S. Culkin scored 10 points. Other point getters for the winners were M. Marinoff with 8, T. Ruttan with 4 and S. Bovay with 2.

For Northern, Jean York scored 8 points and Betty McGowan and Doris Danyard scored 3 and 2 points respectively. Doug Soule and Bill Spafford handled the whistles while Ted Batchelor was scorer.

FORTS WIN TWO

Fort William, March 7 (CP) — Fort William Hurricanes made it two victories in a row over the title-defending Port Arthur Bruins here last night by winning 4-3 to take a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven Thunder Bay Junior Hockey League finals.

FIGHTS LAST NIGHT

St. Paul — Joey Maxim, 184, Cleveland, outpointed Ted Lowry, 179, Boston, (10), (non-title).

Syracuse — Robert Villemain, 164, Paris, knocked out Joey DeJohn, 163½, Syracuse, (9).

The Leafs defeated the Canadiens 6-2 and came within two points of the second-place Montrealers. —(CP Photo.)

Canada Will Be In Olympic Hockey, Contrary Stories 'Bunk', Says Writer

By JACK SULLIVAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, March 7. (CP)—A chubby, pink-cheeked Canadian and a slick, sharp-eyed Irishman collided in an Oslo hotel a couple of weeks ago.

The repercussions may affect Canada's future representation in International Amateur Hockey.

That's the interpretation going the rounds of a scrap between Doug Grimston of New Westminster, B.C., president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, and John F. (Bunny) Ahearne of London, travel agent and European representative of the C.A.H.A. It happened Feb. 25 closing date of the Oslo Winter Olympic games but became public only yesterday.

The scrap started over Edmonton Mercurys who won the Olympic Hockey title for Canada. They threatened to cut short their continental exhibition tour, charging that Ahearne siphoned off the profits. Ahearne, who made all the bookings, became indignant.

He and Grimston clashed in a hotel over the issue. After heated discussions it was decided that Mercurys would fulfil their commitments and return to Canada by air around April 1.

Called 'Chiseller'

Grimston said yesterday he "definitely" will suggest to the C.A.H.A. annual meeting at Minaki, Ont., June 15-19 that Canada step out of the Olympic Hockey picture. The odds, however, are that Canadian hockey players will be around for the 1956 games at Cortina, Italy.

Grimston and Ahearne will give their versions of the Oslo incident at Minaki. There will be plenty of talk about firing Ahearne who is used to being called a "chiseller", "grafter" and so on.

There also will be talk about stopping all European junkets by Canadian teams. The bet is that these will continue and that Bunny, as usual, will handle the financial arrangements, draw up exhibition dates and, of course, take his 10-per-cent cut on the teams' travelling costs and other "incidentals".

All of this is old stuff. There was talk after the 1948 Olympics of refusing to send teams to future games and every Canadian team sent to Europe the last few years has beefed about Ahearne. The same goes for C.A.H.A. officials who have made the trip.

Ahearne has always talked his way out of the difficulties at C.A.H.A. annual meetings.

It was in London a few years ago when he got into hot water with C.A.H.A. officials. I was on hand for the Grimston-Ahearne tiff. There was name-calling—nothing unusual—threatening gestures and some shouting. Beyond that, it wasn't important.

But the C.A.H.A. needs a representative in Europe to look after the interests of Canadian players on English teams. Ahearne has the authority to take any disciplinary measures necessary to players who overstep the line.

And he is needed also to shepherd touring clubs on the continent.

He is the dictator of English hockey, has first-class connections with continental arenas and removal of him by the C.A.H.A. would just about put theFritz on any team going to Europe. Ahearne could see to it that they don't get a game on the continent.

Attractive Girl Is New Zealand's Top Olympic Hope

By J. C. GRAHAM
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Auckland, N. Z., March 7 (CP) — Tall, attractive 22-year-old Yvette Williams is New Zealand's brightest hope for the Olympic Games at Helsinki.

An all-round athlete, she has been dubbed the New Zealand Blankers-Koen. She has broken existing New Zealand records — usually her own — 32 times and excels in so many events she cannot concentrate on them all.

She once went out to give a broad jump coaching demonstration after eating six cakes, two cups of tea and a glass of water, and jumped 20 feet 6 inches, which equals the world record held by Holland's Fanny Blankers-Koen. At this year's New Zealand championships she jumped 20 feet 7 3-4 inches, but the record was disallowed owing to a slight following breeze. She won the broad jump at the last Empire games and now is jumping regularly near or over the 20 - foot mark.

She also holds the New Zealand record for the discus throw at 134 feet 4 1-2 inches, and the shot put, at 41 feet 8 1-2 inches, both of which put her into Olympic class. In addition she is a sprinter and a member of relay teams. In the winter she captains her province at basketball.

Yvette is quiet and modest. She does not smoke and keeps in strict training the year round, with a rigorous schedule which prescribes bed by 9 o'clock most nights.

Lucky Strikes 'Go Happy', Set Record

Another Suspect Held

Brantford, March 7. (CP)—Police today held Leo Laramie, 22, alias Larry Banks, of Toronto, for East York officers who want him as a third suspect in the $50,000 holdup of the Bank of Montreal branch there two weeks ago.

Police in East York, Toronto suburb, have charged two brothers, George Nicholson, 24, and Robert Nicholson, 22, with armed robbery in the case.

Laramie, who was reported to have been in Syracuse, N.Y., last week, was picked up yesterday on No. 5 highway. With him was a woman companion, who is also held on unstated charges.

Sport in Brief

(By The Canadian Press)

The scheduled March 17 fight in Toronto between Philadelphia's L'il Arthur King and Fitzie Pruden of St. Catharines, now fighting out of Patterson, N. J., has been postponed at the request of both fighters.

Pruden and King have asked they be given more time to prepare. The bout will be held later.

The March 17 date will be filled by a match between Allan McFater, Toronto lightweight, and Solly Cantor of Edmonton or Enrique Bolanos of California.

St. Louis Browns filled out their 1952 roster yesterday with receipt of a signed contract from pitcher John E. Hetki, acquired from Toronto last fall. Hetki, a righthander, has been playing winter ball in Venezuela.

Max Faulkner, British open golf champion, has accepted an invitation to play in the international round-robin golf tourney at Wykagyl Country Club, New Rochelle, N. Y., May 15-18, tourney director Harold McSpaden said yesterday in New York.

Budge Patty of New York teamed with Nils Rohlsson of Stockholm to win a second-round tennis doubles match yesterday in Kingston, Jamaica, from the Canadian Davis Cup pair of Lorne Main and Brendan Macken 2-6, 6-1, 6-0. Mrs. Patricia Canning Todd of La Jolla, Calif., reached the finals of the women's singles in the Caribbean lawn tennis championships by defeating defending champion Althea Gibson of New York 6-3, 6-4.

Robert Villemain, French middleweight, knocked out Joey Dejohn of Syracuse at 2:37 of the ninth round of their scheduled 10-rounder before an overflow crowd of 9,500 last night, Villemain weighed 164 pounds, Dejohn 163½.

Buffalo Bisons of the International League yesterday signed Pat Haggerty, 23, right-handed outfielder who led the class AA Southern Association in batting with an average of .346, while with Little Rock in 1950. He played last year with Williamsport, Pa., of the class A Eastern League and Toledo of the American Association.

Red Schoendienst Sure of Position

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 7—(AP) — Schoendienst in German means "good service" and Albert Fred Schoendienst, St. Louis Cardinals' happy-go-lucky redhead, is living up to his name.

Since Eddie Stanky was named Cardinal manager and followed it up by announcing he would be a strong candidate for Schoendienst's second-base job, baseball fans have been wondering how Red would react.

Rumors, all unconfirmed, flew thick and fast, but here is what really happened.

One of the first things Stanky did after taking over the reins of the Redbirds was to pay Schoendienst a personal visit in St. Louis. Among other things Eddie told the all-star second sacker he was going to compete with him for the second-base job. If Eddie's playing meant the club would be stronger, Red would be shifted to another position. But Red would play regularly somewhere.

Schoendienst assured Stanky the arrangement was satisfactory.

"I'll play anywhere you want me to," Schoendienst told his manager. "All I want to do is help the club win. If I do that I don't care where I play, just as long as I play."

Schoendienst worked out at first base for the first time last Tuesday and looked good, displaying his usual fine footwork and ability with the glove, even though unfamiliar with the position.

And the Redhead has been named co-captain with Enos Slaughter.

"I'd like to have somebody in the infield with authority in case I'm not in the line-up," Stanky told him.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, March 7 — (AP)— Fifty years ago, a stage - struck kid named Edwin Leopold ran away from his Philadelphia home to join a medicine show. Today he is still in show business, known to television fans as Ed Wynn.

Wynn's career, to be commemorated on his TV show tomorrow night, has covered virtually every field of the entertainment business, including stage dramas and musicals, vaudeville, radio and movies. He has even played short engagements in a circus and a night club, so his scope would be complete.

The only medium he hasn't played is burlesque.

"I have never told an off-color joke to an audience," he said. "I'm proud of that."

Wynn is so firm on his point that he once advised a fellow comedian in a George White musical: "You could be one of the biggest comedians in the country if you would only drop your dirty material." White dubbed him "The preacher" after that incident.

Top Men

I asked Wynn to name the top comedians of his day. He listed 20 comics or teams, and I present them in more or less chronological order:

Weber and Fields, De Wolf Hopper, McIntyre and Heath, Montgomery and Stone, Raymond Hitchcock, George M. Cohan, Victor Moore, Bert Williams, Will Rogers, Al Jolson, W. C. Fields, Charlie Chaplin, Sir Harry Lauder, Jimmy Durante, Groucho Marx, Jack Benny, Bob Hope, Red Skelton, Danny Kaye and Jerry Lewis.

Of the living members on the list, only Victor Moore has been in the business longer than Wynn.

You can stand there and say I look it. But not always do I feel funny. Not even when my no-trump bid fails to have a stopper in the opponent suit. Nor is it intended to be funny.

No-trump is a bid sometimes used as a convention; a signal with an artificial meaning. When is it so used? When it is an answer to a partner's forcing bid of some kind.

When partner opens with two in a suit, if no bid intervenes, your response of two no-trump is a convention. It is an artificial signal for saying you have no sure trick anywhere in your hand.

If a bid intervenes, your pass says the same thing. Therefore, if a bid intervenes, your bid of two no-trump admits a sure trick. It does not say anything about having opponent suit stopped.

When south opened with two diamonds and west defended with two hearts, north said two no-trump in the deal shown here:

NORTH
♠A 8 6 5
♥J 4 3
♦9 8 5
♣A 7 2

WEST
♠K
♥K Q 10 9 8 6 2
♦None
♣J 10 9 8 5

EAST
♠Q J 9 7 4 3 2
♥7
♦J 7 3 2
♣4

SOUTH
♠10
♥A 5
♦A K Q 10 6 4
♣K Q 6 3

Lacking a biddable suit or support for a once-bid diamond suit, the only true north response is no-trump. It does not promise a stop in opponent suit. It guarantees at least one sure trick.

Learning this, south is now slam conscious. But there is no rush to get there. So, south bids three diamonds. Being less than game, he knows that north must keep the bidding alive.

Right there west could rebid his hearts. But he didn't. Instead, he decided to say four clubs. What was his object? To give east a choice of suits in which they might take a sacrifice, if necessary.

North now has a choice of two courses of action. He can double four clubs for penalty. Or assist diamonds and help south decide the slam it is now evident his pair must have. He bids four diamonds.

With such a choice, a player has another choice. He can make a fool of himself. Or he can let nature take its course.

MARMORA

Marmora Defeats Wellington 6-5, Wins Section Title

Marmora — Before the largest crowd of the season numbering about 900. Marmora won the championship of the central section of the Trent Valley Hockey League through defeating Wellington by the narrow margin of 6-5.

With nine second to go in the third the visitors pulled their goalie Parks, but Marmora defensive tactics proved equal to the occasion tieing goal did not materialize.

Lighthall who had been playing a good game for the southerners had the misfortune to fall and dislocate his shoulder about halfway through the first period.

The game was full of thrills each team in turn putting on the pressure.

Scott for the losers was the outstanding player of the game, beating Killian four times. Stewart was top scorer for Marmora with three goals and an assist. Trumble got two goals and an assist and Jones one goal and an assist. Both goalies made spectacular saves to keep the score down.

Marmora, it is understood will next be matched with the winner of the southern section laurels.

Teams

Wellington: Goal, Parks; defence Cork, Platford; centre, Scott; wings Twigg, Istead; subs: Cole, Stacey, Gassiro, Pettingill, Dumais, Lord, Lighthall, Wright.

Marmora: Goal Killian; defence, Maynes, Gray; centre, Forestell; wings, Lavender, Trumble; subs, Stewart, Jones, Mantle, Brown; Kerr, Smith, Darrah, Doyle. Spare goalie, Drummond.

Referees: W. Leggitt, P. Scarrow.

AT THE McCARTHY — As dawn approaches on the banks of the Rhine, Richard Basehart (left) informs Hans Christian Blech and Oskar Werner, his partners in a daring spy mission, that they will have to swim the icy river. It's a dramatic moment from 20th. Century-Fox's acclaimed production of "Decision Before Dawn," now playing at the Odeon McCarthy Theatre. Gary Merrill and Hildegarde Neff are co-starred with Basehart and Werner.

AT THE CAPITOL — Leader of the vengeful Osage tribe, this Indian chief blocks the trail of the wagon train in "Fort Osage," Monogram adventure in Cinecolor, starring Rod Cameron and showing today and Saturday at the Capitol Theatre. On the same program Leo Gorcey and Huntz Hall with the East Side Kids in "Bowery Blitzkrieg." Continuous show Saturday from 1.00.

T THE CAPITOL — A uniform and a badge are just an invitation to a scrap as far as those rampaging East Side Kids are concerned. Leo Gorcey tells off Warren Hull in "Bowery Blitzkrieg" at the Capitol Theatre today and Saturday. On the same program, in color by Cinecolor, "Fort Osage," starring Rod Cameron and Jane Nigh. Continuous show Saturday from 1.00.

Manitoba Rink Favored to Take Curling Title

(By AL VICKERY)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, March 7 (CP)—Manitoba's Billy Walsh takes his unbeaten rink into the 10th round of the Canadian Curling championships today with a chance to clinch the title.

The bespectacled Walsh, throwing his first rocks in the Dominion Curling final, now has a record of eight straight wins—one better than second-place Alberta led by Art Simpson of Bassano.

Their 10th-round clash is the feature game of today's final rounds. A victory for Walsh automatically gives him the championship. The two rinks will meet in a sudden-death game tonight if they are tied after the regulation 11 rounds.

There are no playoffs for tied positions other than first place.

Whatever the outcome, the championship is coming back to Western Canada for the first time since 1949 when a Manitoba rink skipper by draw-game artist Ken Watson won it.

No other rink stands a chance at the crown, won last year by Don Oyler, of Kentville, representing Nova Scotia.

Ontario's Dr. J. R. Clark slipped from contention last night by dropping a 14-9 defeat to Jimmy Guy's Northern Ontario rink. It was Clark's third defeat against five victories.

COUNCIL TO MEET

Toronto, March 7 — (CP) The Supreme Council of the Mystic Order of Veiled Prophets of the Enchanted Realm will arive in Toronto next June for the 62nd annual convention. More than 400 prophet-delegates and their wives are expected from the United States.

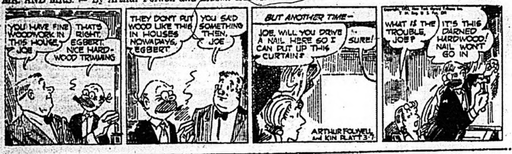
MR. AND MRS. — By Arthur Folwell and Ellison Hoover



YOU HAVE FINE WOODWORK IN THIS HOUSE, JOE
THAT'S RIGHT, EGBERT. NICE HARD-WOOD TRIMMING
THEY DON'T PUT WOOD LIKE THIS IN HOUSES NOWADAYS, EGBERT
YOU SAID SOMETHING THEN, JOE
BUT ANOTHER TIME—
JOE, WILL YOU DRIVE A NAIL HERE SO I CAN PUT UP THIS CURTAIN?
SURE!
WHAT IS THE TROUBLE, JOE?
IT'S THIS DARNED HARDWOOD! NAIL WON'T GO IN

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars,

FOR SATURDAY, MAR. 8, 1952

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Some inauspicious leanings. Hold steady; be aware that you have ability, and use it. You can make forward movement. But mind sensible cautions. Avoid unnecessary strenuous effort.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus) — Uncertainties and definite benefits, both of which help make the "spice of life." Take care in new ventures. There may be an upset, or change of plans needed. Stay on the same side.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Likely to be wholly on your own without leads, indications. And if not shrewd, thoughtful in management, could err badly. Fresh benefit towards marriage, children.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Keep alert, out of ruts and mistakes. these hectic days. Once caught in the orbit of recklessness it may be hard to extricate self. Forewarned is forearmed. Shun disputes, differences.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—Mild, some adverse tendencies. Be ready for things, especially problems dealing in human relations. Don't neglect personal matters and health for outside interests.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo)—Make the most of any encouraging situations. Buckle down, work hard; get early start and hold disposition on even keel. Better times for the striving and hopeful patience.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Day may be exciting; it can be productive in many ways. And it may be dull, just so-so at periods. You are the keystone, much will revolve around how you react and exert yourself.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio) — Unresponsive in sports. Stormy outlook for some business and personal affairs. Be calm in manner, philosophical; give good example.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—Excellent configurations; encouraging day. Make the most of all benefits. Work, professional affairs, business generally can advance. Heart interests also favored.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn) — Help make and keep it a productive, happy day. If things go fine, thank God; if not, offer them as sacrifice. Everyone must co-operate; give as well as take, for happiness.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius) — Some uncontrollable obstacles, contention. Most people don't want to bend a knee, nor have heartaches either, but we all must—at times. Display your natural patience and win.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Good day for business and personal matters. Be ready, alerted for the unusual. Take advantage of good openings; some may come unexpectedly and in peculiar ways. Be wide-awake.

YOU BORN TODAY: Generally tempered with a quiet calm which gives you the advantage over the more nervous, hasty person, and is the forerunner to a successful future. You appreciate originality, too. Try new ideas, yours or others, occasionally. Concentrate on one, you may bring it to high success. Many writers, business managers, teachers under this Sign. Don't anticipate trouble, don't fret.

Birthdate of many brilliant Pisces personalities.

OPERATING SURPLUS

Prescott, March 7 — (CP) This town had an operating surplus of $4,629 last year as a result of higher revenue and lower expenditures than anticipated. But town council learned that it will not be enough to bring down the tax rate which in 1952 is expected to be higher than last year's 65 mills.

Truman Slams Congress's Efforts To Halt Spending

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, Mar. 7—(AP) — President Truman asked a critical Congress today to vote every penny of his $7,900,000,000 new global foreign-aid program to meet a Soviet threat against the "survival of civilization."

Fully aware of mounting Congressional ire over foreign - aid spending, Truman will go on every major radio and television network at 10:30 tonight to carry his plea to the people.

Talk of withdrawing to the western hemisphere "has momentary seductiveness," Truman told Congress, "because it would seem to relieve us of the contributions we are now making to collective defence."

But he said the adoption of such a policy would be a "mandate for national suicide."

Will Aid Allies

Truman said the money he is asking for would be spent to send arms to allies of the United States in Europe, to build up allied countries in the middle and far east, to help European countries manufacture their own arms, and to raise the living standards of red-threatened countries in Africa and Asia.

Truman asked for the $7,900,000,000 in his budget message to Congress Jan. 21. His total budget requests add up to $85,444,008,000.

Not a single dollar should be cut out of the proposed program, Truman said, lest the U. S. be guilty of a "false economy" or "too little and too late."

MINTO

Minto—St. Thomas' W.A., held an afternoon meeting at the home of Mrs. Everett Sine on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. John B. Hagerman spent Sunday with Miss Barker and her mother of Tweed.

Mrs. Laura Hagerman, of Belleville, visited Mr. and Mrs. Will Wright and Mr. Hagerman on Friday afternoon.

Several of the ladies of Salem W.A. attended the Day of Prayer service at West Huntingdon.

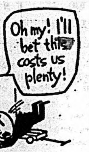
Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Tanner, Miss Edna Tanner and Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay Tanner attended the church service at Tweed on Sunday and spent the day with Mr. and Mrs. Graham Mouck.

Mrs. Phil Vance visited her daughter, Mrs. A. Reid, of Springbrook for a few days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. V. Heath were tea hour guests on Thursday of Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay Tanner.

St. Thomas' W.A. attended the Day of Prayer service at St. Marks, Bonarlaw.

Mr. Gordon Reid spent the weekend in Toronto.



Oh my! I'll bet this costs us plenty!

Silly accident,
but expensive!

All accidents are silly — and unexpected.
The grocer boy does not intend to trip over a toy wagon in your driveway and break an arm or leg.
But it can cost you thousands in a damage suit.
Or your dog may bite a stranger (or a friend). You may hit somebody with a golf ball. Your child may strike a passerby with a rock. The mail man may slip on the ice or a roller skate.
A very inexpensive insurance policy will cover you against damage suits from all these and other expensive, unplanned misfortunes. For example you can get $10,000 liability protection for only $10 a year.

WOOLER

P. Gooding Presents Interesting Travelogue At Pancake Supper

Wooler—The Sunday School room of the United Church, gay with colored balloons and streamers, was the scene of a pleasant evening on Friday when the ladies of the church were entertained to a pancake supper by the gentlemen.

Each lady as she entered the church was presented with a corsage of roses, tulips or daffodils.

Sumptuous Supper

Following grace, said by Rev. W. G. Fletcher a sumptuous uspper of orange juice, pancakes, sausages, apple sauce, syrup, buns, pickles, ice cream, doughnuts, water ice wafers and apples was served.

Mr. Wesley Down acted as toast master in his usual humorous manner. Mr. Percy Whaley proposed a toast to the ladies to which Mrs. R. Putnam president of the Woman's Association replied.

Musical selections included several songs by a male quartet comprised of Messrs. Alden Arthur, Clifford Rogers, Clifford Dunn and Nesbitt Haggerty, accompanied by Mr. Wayne Tompkins, a sing-song led by Rev. W. G. Fletcher and saxophone solos by Mr. Karl Austin.

Guest Speaker

The guest speaker, Mr. Percy Gooding was introduced. He gave an interesting address on his recent trip to England.

The singing of "God Save the Queen" brought this happy evening to a close.

CAMPBELLFORD

V. T. B. Rout Gives Talk on 'New Zealand'

Campbellford—Members of St. John's Young Adults Club played host to the Norwood 50-50 Club here on the weekend, when the two joined forces to enjoy an evening of entertainment arranged by Cozette Barnum of Campbellford.

Everette Steele, president of the local club, welcomed the large representation from Norwood, and Marion Smith led in a sing-song. Betty and Walter Elliott conducted the devotional period.

Feature of the evening was a talk on New Zealand by V. T. B. Rout of the Campbellford High School staff, who was introduced by the Rev. Dr. D. M. Smith.

Origin of Nane

Mr. Rout told how the name "New Zealand" had originated from the days when Tasman, the Dutch explorer, had chosen to refer to the land by the name of a province of his native Holland.

Automobiles are scarce and expensive. Electric refrigerators and other such household utilities are not found in the average home. Standards of wages are lower, and the country's sterling currency discourages the importing of luxuries, because of its low value.

The cot of living is just about one third of that of Canada, so far as the essentials are concerned. Butter sells for the Canadian equivalent of 20 cents per pound, and good beef goes at about 25 cents.

Social Legislation

New Zealand has been a leader in social legislation through the years and was ptrhaps the first nation to give women the right to vote in 1899. Old age pensions with a means test were instituted in 1898.

Thornton Waters thanked the speaker, Stanle- Flett, president of the Norwood 50-50 club, moved a vote of thanks to the Young Adults Club for the evening, and extended an invitation for a return visit.

REDNERSVILLE

Mrs. Honeychurch Gives Inspiring Message At World Day of Prayer

Rednersville—The W.M.S. of the Rednersville pastoral charge sponsored an open meeting at Centre Church on the evening of the World Day of Prayer when all present joined in the unbroken chain of prayer around the world in which the peoples of 104 countries had the privilege of participating. With Mrs. Clarence Vancleaf playing quiet music at the piano and with a nicely arranged worship centre at the front of the church an atmosphere of reverence was engendered as the congregation gathered.

Mrs. Spencer W.M.S. president was assisted in the leadership of the meeting by the leaders of the four W.A.'s of the charge. Mrs. McFaul, Centre, led the service of "Adoration," Miss A. Brickman, Victoria, "Penitence," Mrs. Hugh Weese, Albury, "Assurance" and Mrs. Dempsey, Rednersville, "Dedication". Mrs. J. P. Henderson led in the period of "Intercession" with several members leading in intercessory prayers for the various organizations and peoples of the world.

Guest Speaker

Following the hymn, "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross", Rev. J. P. Henderson introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. Honeychurch of the Belleville Salvation Army Corps. Mrs. Honeychurch continued the thought of the worship service in an inspirational message on "Christ Our Hope." She spoke of what the planting of 'seeds of hope' had meant and could mean to the world's people.

Much enjoyed also, were two solos, one by Miss June Bowerman, Albury, and one by Mr. Jim McKay, Rednersville, with Mrs. Kenneth Weese, accompanying at the piano.

Mrs. Spencer voiced the appreciation of the W.M.S. and of the evening's congregation as a whole to Mrs. Honeychurch for her timely message and to the soloists for their inspiration in song.

An offering of $8 was received and dedicated to the work of the Inter-Church Council of Canada in dispersing Christian literature throughout missionary countries.

The meeting closed with the hymn "The Day Thou Gavest, Lord, is Ended"—ended for this small corner of God's universe but it would roll on to the dusky Arctic where the World Day of Prayer would end for the year on her far away islands.

CROFTON

Crofton—Mr. and Mrs. Roy Morrison and boys of Belleville, were Sunday guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. Jones.

Nobody Loves Forever

By Margaretta Brucker

She denied it and he kissed her again. He was articulate for the first time. He was masterful, almost brutal, but the next minute tender. He was no longer shy or afraid of her. He had broken through her defence. Her pride was shattered. He had given her a taste of happiness she had never experienced.

She turned her face against Tom's uniform coat and clung to him. She pulled his face down and shamelessly kissed him.

Driving back to town she closed her mind to the reckless promises she had made Tom. She was mad, of course, she told herself after he left and she was back in her own room. Physical attraction — that explains what you felt for Tom. You should hate him.

After that, she managed to arrange meetings with Mary Belle present, much to Tom's disgust.

"You scared of that big brute?" Mary Belle teased.

Even Mary Belle guessed how serious her feelings were. Luckily no one else knew and then suddenly everyone knew.

One evening after dinner, when her father had been cool and aloof and uncommunicative, he called her into his study.

"Come in and close the door," he said curtly.

His eyes were cold. He sat beneath the portrait of the young dark-eyed mother Jessica had never known. Jessica stood, her back against the white paneling of the door, her slender figure trembling with fear.

"What's this I hear about you and a Yankee soldier?" Mr. Gordon demanded.

Jessica tried to speak and failed.

Her father said, "So it's true." His voice hardened. "How far has this affair gone?"

The words stung. Her face flamed. "I love Tom," Jessica said.

"You plan to marry him?"

She stammered. Tom had begged her to marry him. Until now she had rather shunned a real decision. But her temper matched her father's as she said, "why not?"

She did not believe her father capable of such rage. A torrent of words poured from his lips His black eyes blazed.

"When you marry that man you will leave my house!" He rose, and for a moment she thought he might strike her. "Go to your room," he concluded, "and stay there until you regain your senses."

Jessica fled from the study, tears blinding her as she ran up the stairs and closed the door behind her. What would she do now? Oppose her father? Would she dare? No, she thought woefully, she must obey and try to forget Tom. Then a hot loyalty for Tom flamed in her heart. Tom loved her. Was that a crime or anything to be ashamed of? Dared she defy her father and continue to meet Tom?

When she heard the telephone in the hall below she waited. No one answered. It rang again.

Finally she went down and took down the receiver. Tom said, "I must see you, Jess."

"I can't come out."

"But you must," he pleaded. "Otherwise I'll come over there."

"Please don't." She was terrified that he might run into her father. She consented to meet him in a few minutes at an appointed spot severeral blocks away.

The night was warm but she snatched up a short, light coat. She shivered as she sped through the darkness. Luckily, the door to her father's study had been closed. She felt relief when Tom's big figure appeared against the shadow of a hedge. "Hello," she said.

He reached out and pulled her to him. All her resolutions to forget him vanished as his eager lips touched hers. Tom released her.

"This is it, baby," he said.

"You mean—"

"I'm being shipped out," Tom was saying. "I have a few days furlough so—we'll have to get married right away."

She stared at him blankly. "Married?"

"Of course. You planned to marry me, didn't you?"

She hadn't planned that.

"You told me that you loved me.

"Yes. I do, but—"

He laughed. "Just for a minute you had me scared. But I didn't believe you'd stand me up. My friends think I'm a fool to hang around a girl like you. They swear you're just having fun and will forget me when I'm gone. But I fixed that."

"How?"

"A buddy of mine is picking us up in a few minutes. They make everything easy for you here in Kentucky. You and I are going to get married—now, tonight."

A rickety car swept up to the curb and a man in uniform sang the wedding march off key. Tom lifted her into the back seat and a gum-chewing girl who sat beside the driver said, "don't be scared honey."

Don't go, her better judgment told her. Refuse and humiliate Tom and let his friends think what they please, but don't do this. Then she thought, haven't I told Tom I loved him? Did I lie? Can I make a laughing stock of a man who is going into danger?

Asking herself these questions, she knew there was only one answer.

No. She must go through with a hole-in-the-corner marriage ceremony in shabby little parsonage parlar with the light from a kerosene lamp shining on Tom's blond head and on the slender gold ring he slid on her finger. She felt her heart constrict when the minister pronounced them man and wife, but she lifted her face gallantly for Tom's kiss and for a moment everything seemed all right.

The soldier with the stubble of red beard gave her a hearty smack and thumped Tom on the back. The girl, in a cheap, shocking ping sports outfit with a bunch of artificial flowers tucked in her frizzled pompadour, giggled and made crude jokes.

Tom was sober. His eyes held her own for a moment and she tucked her hand in his. His hand was cold. They went out onto the narrow porch and overhead a great white moon rode high and washed the wholesale landscape with light. Then they were crowded into a car and off down a highway which wound like a ribbon across the hills. Past cabins and tobacco fields until the driver brought the car to an abrupt stop in front of a huddle of all-night cabins.

"This the place?"

Tom nodded and jumped out and lifted Jessica to the ground.

Tom said awkwardly "it's all set. I was here this afternoon. Ours is the third from the end."

Long after Tom slept, Jessica lay wide-awake, staring through the small open window of the overnight cabin at a lopsided moon which shone across the bed and touched Tom's handsome face.

Tom was her husband. There was no going back now. The decision was made and she belonged to him. She must forget her doubts and uncertainty and remember instead the wild emotion which swept over her when Tom held her in his arms.

Was it love? Would it last? Why worry about the future now, with Tom's arm across her slender shoulders? Rather think of the happiness they had shared. Have faith in Tom.

But Tom planned to go away and leave her soon.

Jessica sat up in bed and pushed back her heavy hair.

Where would she live? Not at home. She had turned her back on home and the gracious living to which she was accustomed. To ease and luxury and idleness.

Tom stirred and opened his eyes and grinned and drew her close. "Hello, baby," he said sleepily, "I can't believe you're really here."

Neither can I, thought Jessica soberly, and promptly forgot her uneasiness as Tom held her mouth in a long hard kiss.

It was broad daylight when he wakened her. He tumbled out of bed, seizing his clothes. He was brisk and alert. He said "Golly, I hope Red won't forget his promise to pick us up this morning. I have to report at camp."

"I didn't like him," said Jessica.

"Why not?"

"He's common, and his wife—"

"He's not married," said Tom.

Jessica sat up. The blood surged to her soft, tumbled hair. "But—" she began.

Tom frowned as he tugged on his GI shoes. "I don't go in for that stuff myself," he said with a note of smugness. "Mom brought me up right. You can thank her and Lucy that you have a decent guy for a husband."

"Lucy?"

"My sister. We all live together."

He sat down on the bed and reached over and pulled her curls.

"I'm not your type, Jess," he said soberly. "I know that. Maybe I was wrong to rush you into something you may regret, but unless I had married you now I'd have lost you. I had to have you."

Jessica said "nothing matters if our love lasts forever."

"I'll see to that," he promised.

"But you won't be here."

"I'll come back," said Tom confidently. "Now get into your clothes. We'll have to step on it."

She washed in the stationary stand in the corner of the cabin, ran a comb through her curls and made up a brave face. No regrets. she told herself.

Red never came. Instead they walked a mile to a bus stop and waited by the side of the road. They stood up the whole trip to Tititusville. Tom suggested that Jessica leave the bus three blocks from town and go back and pack her things.

As the bus rolled away bearing Tom, her marriage began to assume enormous proportions. She was leaving home, possibly forever. She was going away with a man who was almost a complete stranger, to live alone and await his return. Jessica ran the last block feeling stifled and frightened and hysterical. Why had she done this insane thing? Her father? What would he say or do? Should she tell him? How escape telling?

Foot-and-Mouth Disease Stopped Says Minister

Govt. to Buy Surplus Pork For Canning and Processing

(By The Canadian Press)

Federal officials believe they have the outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease in Southern Saskatchewan stopped, Agriculture Minister Gardiner said Friday night.

In Regina, centre of efforts to stamp out the easily-spread disease, Mr. Gardiner also had this news for farmers:

1. The federal government is not ready to support beef prices, but may do something later.

2. The government will buy surplus pork for canning or processing.

3. He will try personally to convince provincial governments to relax their embargoes on movement of livestock.

Meanwhile, the National Dairy Council announced in Ottawa it will take up at its annual meeting the United States embargo on Canadian livestock and meats.

The council said about 300 dairymen from all provinces will consider that among other problems at Montebello, Que., March 17 because the embargo blocks export of pure-bred cattle and milk-producing cows.

Mr. Gardiner, who flew to Regina Friday, said "we don't think foot-and-mouth disease is going to spread. We think it is absolutely under control."

His department felt the 11-municipality quarantine area was sufficient to contain the disease. But some Manitoba official said they would feel more secure if a buffer zone was thrown around the isolation region which was being done.

Will Personally Take Hand

Mr. Gardiner told a conference of Saskatchewan government officials and farm groups that he personally will take a hand in trying to bring about relaxation of some of the provincial embargoes on livestock.

He said he expects to call on the Manitoba government on his way back to Ottawa to ask it to withdraw a ban on shipment of livestock through that province.

R.C.A.F. Vampire Jet Explodes In Mid-Air

Toronto, March 8 —(CP)— An RCAF Vampire jet exploded in mid-air today at King, some 20 miles north of Toronto. A second crash-landed some two miles distant.

Some reports said the two planes collided. Others said that one came apart in the air and that the other cruised around for a minute, then turned away and came down.

There were confused reports on whether anyone was killed. There was a report that a pilot parachuted to safety, another that a pilot who bailed out of the craft was dead when he hit the ground, three miles away from the plane.

Ontario Provincial Police reported one plane crashed and one was missing.

Other reports from King said that two planes collided in mid-air and that the pilot of one parachuted to safety.

One eyewitness said a plane parted in mid-air over her home and fell on the adjoining property.

Tom L. Wilson To Again Head Ontario Dailies

Toronto, March 8 (CP)—T. L. Wilson of the Oshawa Times-Gazette, yesterday was re-elected president of the Ontario Provincial Dailies Association.

J. R. Makes of the Sudbury Star was named vice-president and V. A. Henkleman of the Oshawa Times-Gazette secretary.

Directors are: R. Bates, St. Catharines Standard; Harry J. Shore, Welland-Port Colborne Tribune; Harold G. Burley, Sarnia Canadian Observer; W. J. Coyle, Kingston Whig-Standard; P. S. Robertson, Cornwall Standard-Freeholder; R. L. Curran, Sault Ste. Marie Star; J. F. Grainger, North Bay Nuggett; T. Kay, Kitchener-Waterloo Record; E. P. Rae, St. Thomas Times Journal; Peter M. Preston, Brantford Expositor, and S. L. McCabe, Thomson Dailies, Toronto.

Said They Saw Canadian Shot In Korean House

Seoul, Korea, March 8 (AP) — Two British soldiers testified yesterday at the murder trial of Canadian signalman Robert Burns MacDonald, 21, of New Waterford, N.S., that they saw another Canadian shot in a Korean house.

A Canadian general court martial is trying MacDonald on a charge of killing Pte. Harold Carlen Harrison, 31, of Truro, N.S., on Jan. 28. Harrison, a member of the 25th Canadian Infantry Brigade headquarters, died of a bullet wound in the stomach Feb. 3.

MacDonald, a member of the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery, pleaded innocent Wednesday. The two Britons said they heard Harrison say to MacDonald, "you shot me, you dirty dog" after hearing a gun that "popped."

THE WEATHER

Torono, March 8 (CP)—Synopsis: Skies are clearing over southwestern Ontario this morning as the high pressure area moves eastward. The fair weather is followed by cloud and snow which will move into Ontario late tonight and Sunday. Temperatures are expected to moderate somewhat tonight and Sunday.

Body Snow-Covered

Marmora, March 8. (CP) — The snow-covered body of Almond Boyd, a 40-year-old carpenter, was found Friday on the verandah of his former home, three miles west of here.

A bachelor he was found by two neighbors, Clarence Wallbridge and Art Peters, who went to the vacant house to investigate after he had not been seen for several days. He left his home last September to live here with his uncle, Bert Boyd. His aunt said she last saw him when he left for work Monday.

The two men found the body after they decided to take a closer look at what they first thought was part of an old mattress.

Opuim-for-Guns Smuggling Plan Said Keeping Nationalists in Burma

Near the Burmese Border in Northern Thailand, March 8 (AP) — Chinese Nationalist troops who have taken refuge in northeastern Burma are being supplied regularly through an opium-for-guns smuggling arrangement in Thailand.

This correspondent spent five days looking around the area extending from Chiang Mai 75 miles to the north and within 10 to 20 miles east of the Burmese border.

Sources in most cases cannot be identified for publication but they include teachers, missionaries, official foreign observers, leading merchants, local newspaper men, army officers, senior Thai civil servants and police officials.

Although their information varied in detail it outlined a general pattern strongly supported by evidence which could be observed. This is how the barter arrangement works:

A Chinese posing as a merchant but reported to be a Nationalist army colonel, maintains headquarters in Chiang Mai as the link between the Chinese Embassy in Bangkok, Thailand's capital, and the Nationalists in Burma.

His job is to funnel supplies received from Bangkok by air and rail, as well as locally-produced food and clothing, across the border. He has several assistants.

In exchange, the Chinese Nationalists in Burma send raw opium to Chiang Mai for forwarding to Bangkok and onward.

Since 1949 this illicit trade has been stimulated by the presence of about 10,000 ill-equipped and hungry Chinese Nationalist forces who were pushed over the Burma border by the Chinese reds.

These troops have been a source of acute anxiety to the Burmese and Thailand people and the governments of Britain and the United States.

Burma fears the situation will lead to trouble with red China.

TWO MEMBERS URGE NEW PLAN TO AID HOUSING

Land-Assembly Scheme Said Not Working Out

Toronto, March 8. (CP)—A government back-bencher and an opposition member in the Ontario Legislature yesterday both urged the government to develop a new plan to assist housing.

Harold Fishleigh (PC—Toronto Woodbine) and Arthur Reaume (L—Essex North) made their proposals during the Throne Speech debate.

Mr. Fishleigh, Toronto real estate salesman, urged a scheme under which the government could plan large-area housing developments, build public services such as sewers, waterworks and schools, and sell the land "at a fair profit" to private builders.

Such a large-area plan would permit mass production of homes "a thousand at a time."

Mr. Reaume made no specific suggestions but said the present land-assembly plan, sponsored jointly by federal, provincial and municipal governments, was "only scratching the surface".

He said he hoped the government would soon announce a housing plan "better than we have now."

Premier Frost said the Throne Speech debate will continue Monday along with committee work on government legislation. He said he hoped to bring down his budget March 18 or 20, and wanted to give the Throne Speech debate priority to allow as many members as possible a chance to speak.

Mr. Fishleigh suggested his plan for the Toronto Metropolitan area and said it could produce 30,000 homes in two years. But it applied to any other large community.

The main aim was low-cost housing. "We need it with $1,000 down and with not more than $75 per month to carry them."

This could only be done by mass production in large areas, willingness of suburban townships to subdivide more land was the chief difficulty.

Mr. Reaume, mayor of Windsor said 4,000 persons in his city are not properly housed. Families were living in basements, attics and garages and such conditions led to broken families.

He also praised Labor Minister Daley for leading the 20-day negotiations which recently averted a strike at the Ford Motor Company plants in Windsor.

"Everyone in Windsor is very happy over the job you did," he told Mr. Daley. One result of the settlement was the formation of a civic committee with representatives of industry, unions, local groups, and the city government which would try to "pursue a course to avoid future strikes."

BARN DESTROYED

Campbellford, March 8—(CP) —A barn belonging to Donald Stephens of Seamore Township, was destroyed by fire this afternoon. It contained seven brood sows, one boar, some drums of gasoline and a quantity of farm machinery. Campbellford is 20 miles east of Peterborough.

Persecuted Canadian Nuns Would Return to Red China For More Missionary Work

Hong Kong, March 8 (CP) — Three Canadian nuns, expelled from China by the Communists, said today that if it becomes possible they will return to their missionary work "full of enthusiasm" even if they have to suffer the same ordeal again.

The nuns, who arrived in Hong Kong, February 28 after the Communists had kept them imprisoned for almost a year on charges of murdering more than 2,000 orphans at the Roman Catholic orphanage at Canton, met foreign correspondents for the first time.

They said they expect to return to Canada soon but added that they would be willing to return to China to resume their work if the same opportunity should arise.

The nuns are:

Sister Sainte Foy (Elizabeth Lemire, La Baie du Febvre, Yamaska County, Que.)

Sister Saint Victor (Germaine Tanguay, a naturalized Canadian born in Nashua, N.H.)

Sister Saint Germain (Imelda Laperriere, Pont Rouge, Port Neuf County, Que.)

Others Imprisoned

Two other nuns, Sister Saint Alphonse due Redempteur (Antoinette Couverette of Ste. Dorothee, Laval County, Que.) head of the orphange, and Sister Saint Marie Germaine (Germaine Gravel, St. Pasteur, Champlain County, Que.) were sentenced to five years in prison at the same trial.

The nuns told today how they were tried by a mass "people's" court before mobs of jeering communists.

They said the reason so many ~~of the children which came into~~ their care died was that only about 10 per cent of newborn infants brought to the orphanage had a chance of survival.

All others lacked proper care and hygiene to such an extent that they could not be saved even with the best medical care. Some of the children were of opium-smoking mothers and they had traces of dope in them.

Many of the children were abandoned on the orphanage doorstep by mothers with too many children. Nearly all were girls one or two days old.

Girls Abandoned

Besides this Chinese habit of abandoning girl babies, there were such causes as the terrible incidence of congenital disease, prevalence of tetanus and the superstition of Chinese who don't want death to occur in the home.

The nuns said that when the Chinese took over the orphanage they put their own staff in charge but permitted the nuns to remain in their quarters.

At that time there were 60 babies there and 93 older orphans. Under the communist staff, 55 of the 60 died in two days.

The sisters said, however, that was the normal percentage, they could have done little, if any, better. On one day 10 babies were brought to the orphanage. The communists refused to accept eight, saying they were too sick to be saved. The nuns had never been able to refuse babies — "they were simply left at our door."

Orphans Screech

When red security police took the nuns away, older orphans set up such a screeching that the district police chief had to intervene. One orphan said "these sisters have not done what you accused them of. We are Chinese. If you don't believe them believe us." One orphan was told to hold her tongue or she would be arrested too.

At Wai San Road Jail the three nuns were put in a cell with 20 ~~other women who asked what~~ their crime was. The prisoners became indignant on hearing of the murder charge.

One woman said "everyone knows how difficult it is to save Chinese children. I had 13 but only two lived." Red jailers got angry and forced the nuns to stop talking to the other prisoners.

Crack Toronto Police Officer Losing Ground

Toronto, March 8 — (CP) — Edmund Tong, crack police detective who never forgot a criminal's face, lost ground today in his battle to recover from a bullet wound received in a Toronto street Thursday.

As hospital authorities said his condition worsened, the man he accused from his hospital bed of wounding him lay in a Montreal hospital, shot down last night in an ambush in a swanky Montreal apartment.

Tong, a sergeant of detectives, was shot in the chest when he and Detective Sergeant Roy Perry stopped a car they suspected of being connected with bank robberies in the Toronto area. Perry, his right arm and wrist shattered by bullets, is in good condition.

In Montreal 24-year-old Steve Suchan is in critical condition with two bullet wounds in the stomach. He was trapped when he entered a Cote Des Neiges apartment and found Montreal police waiting for him, tipped by Toronto police that he was on his way there.

Meanwhile Ottawa police said shortly before 3 a.m. they had been alerted to head off a car carrying Quebec licence plates 324-385, believed headed from Montreal to Toronto. In it was believed to be Leonard Jackson, wanted in connection with the Toronto shooting, and Edwin Boyd, wanted for Toronto bank robberies. Jackson and Boyd escaped from Toronto's Don Jail last winter and possibly eseaped when Suchan was ambushed last night.

The Toronto police dragnet which went into operation immediately after the two detectives were shot down on west-end College Street near Lansdowne Avenue picked up three women, all held as material witnesses.

Case Will Go To Jury Late On Monday

Cornwall, March 8 (CP) — The case of 21-year-old Elias Meek, charged with the knife-murder of Mrs. Dolly Alguire, is expected to go to the jury late Monday.

The crown has only two more witnesses to call before it sums up its case against the Cornwall district farmhand.

The trial was adjourned yesterday by the presiding judge, Mr. Justice H. A. Aylen, after three phychiatrists gave conflicting testimony as to the mental condition of Meek. Last Friday, Meek had been found sane after a two-day pre-trial hearing.

Dr. C. S. Tennant, of Langstaff, provincial psychiatrist, from Langstaff, called as a crown witness after the defence had completed its tesimony, said he had not found Meek mentally ill or defective. "I do not think he was suffering from any schizophrnseia (split personality) or mental illness at the time of the murder or for that fact, at any time," he told the court.

Earlier, Dr. C. H. McCuaig, of Queen's University, Kingston, and Dr. Gordon Lumsden, of Ottawa, both psychiatrists, testified Meek was insane. They said he was suffering from schizophrenia.

Last Sept. 28, Mrs. Alguire was found stabbed to death behind the Alguire farm home, about 10 miles north of here, when her husband returned home from a day of helping a neighbor.

Meek was arrested 14 hours later at the home of his father a mile away. He had been the only one at home with Mrs. Alguire the day of the murder.

Meanwhile, in an offshoot of the trial, James H. Stewart-Gordon, editor of Inside Detective Magazine, made a formal apology for an article in a recent issue dealing with the slaying of Mrs. Alguire.

He appeared in answer to a contempt of court action arising out of the story, which counsel for Meek said was a "vicious assault" on the accused.

CANADA'S BUDGET WILL BE BROUGHT DOWN APRIL 8TH

May be $150,000,000 Reduction in Taxes

Ottawa, March 8 (CP)—Canada's 1952-53 budget will be brought down in the Commons a month from today—Tuesday, April 8.

Finance Minister Abbott announced the date yesterday in the Commons and said he will bring it in the Commons and said he will bring it in at 8 p.m. EST providing nothing unforeseen develops.

Mr. Abbott did not give a hint regarding contents. However, Prime Minister St. Laurent already has said Canadians cannot expect "substantial" tax reductions for the next fiscal year starting April 1, though there may be some adjustments.

Mr. Abbott stepped briefly into the Throne-Speech debate which produced two more non-confidence motions in the government.

One was sponsored by Robert Fair (SC-Battle River) and the other, a bus amendment, was sponsored by William Bryce (CCF-Selkirk).

Two other non-confidence motions one by the Progressive Conservatives and the other by the CCF, already have been defeated in the House.

Mr. Abbott said that the treasury board now has completed study of the 1952-53 estimated expenditures. The task now is to "ascertain what, if any, changes should be made in our taxation structure and what form the budget should take."

May Reduce Taxes

There has been speculation that the budget will contain $100,000,000 to $150,000,000 over-all reduction in federal taxes. It is expected the cigaret tax will be reduced and also perhaps the levies on such items as electric stoves, washing machines and refrigerators.

Tobacco growers have asked the finance minister to reduce the cigaret tax—now 25 cents for a package of 20 cigarets which retail for 42 cents in most provinces.

Mr. Abbott said he is always open to legitimate representations regarding taxation, but he objects strongly to the activity of "special pressure groups."

Suchan Cornered In Swanky Home After Toronto Tip

Believed One of Men Who Shot Officers Thurs.

Montreal, Mar. 8 (CP)—Surgeons fought today to save the life of bullet pierced Steve Suchan, ambushed in his swank Cote Des Neiges apartment by police who sought him in connection with a Toronto robbery and shooting of two policemen there.

Police said they expected Suchan to live. Meantime they sought two accomplices also wanted by Toronto police in connection with the Tuesday robbery of $24,000 from a bank and shooting of Det. Sgt. Edmund Tong and Sgt. Roy Perry last Thursday.

Police, lying in wait for Suchan, fired before he could get his own guns into play when he returned to his apartment last night.

He had drawn two guns when he crumpled under two bullets fired by Det. Albert Dauphin.

Still sought are Leonard Jackson and Edwin Boyd and the word went out to such places as Ottawa and points enroute for police to be alert for a car bound from Montreal to Toronto.

In Montreal, where crime as often as not is stark and lurid, this ambush was dramatic, story-book stuff which today was the talk of the fashionable Cote Des Neiges area which lies on the sloping fringe of mid-town Montreal.

Ambush Laid

The story goes back to last Tuesday when armed bandits snatched $24,000 from College Street branch of the Bank of Montreal in Toronto. For the next day or so concerted police action produced nothing until Tong and Perry stopped a suspicious car on Thursday and both suffered pistol wounds as the car and its occupants sped away.

In hospital today the 47-year-old Tong's condition was described as worse while in hospital in Montreal attendants said the pistol-toting Suchan "shows no signs of weakness . . . there are no signs he is in danger of death."

TO GIVE AIR SHOW

San Francisco, March 8—(AP) —The Peiping radio reported that red China's first group of women pilots will give on air show over Peiping today. In addition, there are also women navigators, mechanics and radio operators," said the broadcast, heard in San Francisco.

Suchan Wanted To Be 'Bumped Off' Says Officer in Telling of Ambush

By DET.-SGT. GEORGES COTE
(As told to The Canadian Press)

Montreal, March 8 — (CP) — He was kind of mad, this fellow Steve Suchan, after we ambushed him last night and first he told us we were "poor shooters" and then he asked us why we didn't bump him right off.

He was lying there on the floor of his living room after being shot twice and I told him:

"As far as we are concerned we are anxious to have you alive."

Sgt. Det. Albert Dauphin and Dets. Maurice Bilodeau and Rene Poirier and myself had been assigned to lie in wait in Suchan's Cote Des Neiges apartment for him after word had been received from Toronto that he was wanted in connection with a big robbery there on Tuesday and the shooting of two policemen on Thursday.

Dauphin fired three shots. The first one hit the 24-year-old Suchan in the arm. Another one got him in the stomach and he fell to the floor, twisting and grimacing.

From the floor he tried to hold up his gun but he couldn't and the big weapon clattered to the floor.

I moved over to him as he lay there to turn him on his back and Dauphin kicked the fallen gun away.

Suchan looked up at me and said:

"You guys are poor shooters. Why don't you finish me?"

By this time we were waiting for the ambulance and he was still lying on his living room floor.

Then he said: "Give me one in the head. Nobody will know the difference."

That was when I told him we were more interested in taking him alive.

We found he had two .45 pistols and a German mauser.

When we went to the apartment early last evening some of the lights were on. We searched it and then left everything just as it was.

Dauphin and myself hid in the kitchen with the door half closed. Poirier and Bilodeau hid in the bedroom. Suchan's place was a three-room apartment so that anybody entering it stepped into the living room and would be kind of sandwiched between us.

We all had our guns ready if we had to use them.

About 9:40 p.m. we heard somebody approaching and then Suchan stepped into the room. He looked nervous and suspicious to me as I watched him from the kitchen.

First he looked about the living room. Then he looked at the kitchen and noticed the door half closed. Then he started across the room toward the bedroom and on the way he drew one gun.

That was when Dauphin showed himself. It looked as though Suchan was going to shoot so Dauphin let him have it first.

Suchan crumpled up and fell in a sort of a twist, still trying to hold his gun which seconds later he dropped.

That was it. We searched him and disarmed him and he seemed kind of sore. That was when he told us we were poor shooters and why didn't we finish him off.

All Livestock To be Slaughtered Have Been Shot

Regina, March 8 — (CP)—With the exception of one herd, all the livestock to be slaughtered in curbing Canada's first outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease have been shot and buried in five huge graves in the area surrounding Regina.

The last major slaying took place yesterday near McLean where first signs of the disease were uncovered, and included 9 head of cattle, 21 swine and 29 sheep.

The 39-head herd of Leonard Wass, a dairy farmer near McLean, in which the first signs of the disease were found, is being held for observation and for tests to establish virus types and immunity duration.

Federal officials said today the herd will be kept under close quarantine during the observation period and will be destroyed "inside of a week."

The entire group of slaughtered cattle, including the Wass herd, came from 22 infected premises plus five additional premises from which animals were destroyed as possible carriers because of their direct or indirect contact with diseased livestock. All five additional premises are in the vicinity of Regina and are believed to have had possible contact through purchase of animals after the infection was discovered.

It has been estimated that when the entire slaughter is completed, more than 1,100 animals, including 963 cattle, 97 sheep, 66 swine, two horses and one goat have been shot.

Also destroyed from infected premises were 482 fowl and 231 dozen eggs. Federal officials pointed out that poultry cannot contract the disease but can transmit the virus as "mechanical carriers."

Town Hall Burns

Ansonville, Ont., March 8. — (CP)—A $150,000 fire Friday destroyed the town hall and a neighboring building in this Northern Ontario community 40 miles east of Timmins. An exploding furnace was blamed.

Loss included a new telephone switchboard valued at about $70,000.

Fire brigades from neighboring Iroquois Falls and Montrock helped the Ansonville firefighters.

Two prisoners in a jail cell in the town hall were rescued.

SALES AND AD CLUB TO SPONSOR COURSE

The Belleville Sales and Ad Club will sponsor a two-day short course in business letter writing to be held in the evenings of March 11 and 12 at the local Y.M.C.A. The two evening sessions will run from seven until nine o'clock.

Aline E. Hower, well known letter counsellor, will direct the short course, which covers all the various phases of successful business letter writing. She shows how to write all forms of letters, ranging from credit and collection to sales promotion and sales purchasing.

Tickets for the two-day short course may be secured from any member of the Sales and Ad. Club.

DEDUCTED AT FIRST

Ottawa, March 8-(CP)—At least one section of the Canadian population is not worrying about getting income tax returns in on time this month. It consists of the bulk of members of armed forces. Under a new system, they have their full tax returns. There are certain exceptions to the rule but broadly speaking it spreads its happiness over the great bulk of the forces.

9th Anti Tank Growth Aired At Conference

Expansion and growth of the 9th Anti Tank Regiment RCA (ALI) were outlined in an address given officers of the regiment by commanding officer Lieut. Col. G. W. MacGregor, MC, at a conference held in Napanee recently.

Approximately 100, including 60 officers, were present, representing the unit's batteries in Napanee, Belleville and Gananoque. Lt.-Col. MacGregor said that the regiment has grown from 22 officers and 69 other ranks in 1947 to 59 officers and 231 other ranks in 1952 with a weekly parade of approximately 200 all ranks. It is believed to be the largest active strength regiment in this area.

Spring Training Discussed

The conference agenda included discussion of the spring training program which includes a two-day scheme for each battery and an outline of details for the summer camp at Petawawa from June 28 to July 5.

Following the conference a demonstration was given by a crew from the RCEME School, Kingston, under command of Capt. W. L. Ireland, which put a jeep together from "scratch" in two minutes and 16 seconds. The crew has travelled throughout Canada and appeared at the Canadian National Exhibition. Its official record is two minutes, six seconds.

A film depicting combined operations in attack, obtained from the Royal Canadian Air Force, Trenton, was shown in the mess to close the program.

Among the 40 officers and sergeants attending the conference from Belleville were, Major Everett S. Fairman, second-in-command; Major W. E. Wylie, regimental training co-ordinator; Major W. C. Burgoyne, OC 32nd Battery; Major J. B. Black, OC 34th Battery and RSM T. Lacey.

Refreshments were served in the officers' and sergeants' messes following the conference.

Colorful Films on Speckled Trout Enjoyed by District, City Officials

Even the life of a poor fish is not sacred.

The Carling Conservation Club went to much trouble and expense to bare the life story of the fabulous speckled trout. They put it on motion picture film and the result is a splendid technicolor record of this fighting piscatorial beauty.

The film with another "Duel in the Pool" was shown at their premiere to members of the city of Belleville, Hastings and Lennox and Addington counties tourist and publicity officials, their wives and guests at a dinner party at the Queen's Hotel last night.

MAJOR PERC KETCHESON

The "leading man" in the latter film is Major Perc Ketcheson of Napanee, roving columnist and secretary of the Carling Conservation Club. With him is associated Ralph Seaman, United States outdoor representative of the company.

The "Life of a Trout" to give the first picture a name is an informative record of this proud fish from the time it is spawned till it reaches a skillet. It should be seen by all fishermen.

Colorful Record

"Duel in the Pool" is a colorful record of trout fishing in Hastings and Lennox and Addington counties. Filmed in technicolor, it brings out with force and clarity the various trout haunts for which these counties are justly famous.

The films, Carling's representatives stated, will be available to any organization which is interested in their showing.

Jack Yanover, chairman of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce Tourist and Publicity Committee acted as master of ceremonies at the get-together. Present were John Buchan, Chamber of Commerce president, James Davis secretary manager; Alderman Harry Rollins chairman of the city council committee who also represented Mayor McLean Haig; Warden Lee Grills, Hastings County, county clerk Erle Denyes; Elmer Sandercock, MPP; Sam Curry, Tweed, and several other officials of the Carling company.

Major Ketcheson in a brief address outlined the aims and objects of the Carling Conservation Club.

"To be brief," Major Ketcheson said, "we have channelled the work of the Carling Conservation Club into fostering the knowledge of wild life into a consuming desire to be close to it, to see it 'close up' and by this same desire to bring people to where it is to be found, be they hunters, anglers, camera fans, or just plain folks like you and me, who want to succumb to the peace and solace, which a tired mind and body can find in the Great Outdoors.

"In order to accomplish this end, our directors, appropriated half a million dollors to be used over a period of years to further this work, let me tell you it has been wisely used, but it has been all used.

"In 1950 we extended this operation to our Cleveland unit, and the Carling Conservation Club of the United States was incorporated, to sell Ontario as a vacation place to some 250,000 people in the States bordering Ontario.

"In co-operation with the Royal Ontario Museum, and their trained scientists," Major Ketcheson said, "we have each year made funds available to finance field studies, to make complete their knowledge of wild life and their findings have made a most valuable contribution to those in charge of wild life management throughout North America, in order that these resources may be maintained in perpetuity.

"These studies have been, because of the urgency, confined to those species of fish and animals and birds, which have shown the most marked decline in population, the first the tiger maskinonge, next the moose, song and insectivorous birds, shore birds and waterfowl, the ring necked pheasant, the woodland cariboo, the latest, the film you are about to see, speckled trout.

"From the foregoing, you will observe one outstanding pattern we have endeavored to follow—the locale — from the far western borders of the province, through the north, the central section, and now, last but not least by any means, the eastern portion, aptly described, in general terms Land O' Lakes. No section has been overlooked in our effort to encompass the entire province.

"This has been a costly program, as you can well imagine," the speaker concluded, "much too great, I hazard, for any local group or groups to undertake. It has been, in a measure — rewarding, not only in the physical sense but also in the satisfaction gained in doing a worthwhile job."

Letter to the Editor

March 7, 1952

The Editor,
The Belleville Intelligencer.

AN EXPLANATION

Dear Sir:—

I have been given to understand that my name was introduced into the debate held in the presence of the Liquor Licensing Board at the City Hall on Friday morning when the application for a licence for the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Legion was before the Board. Why this should happen surprises me because I cannot recall having expressed in public an opinion on this matter, nor did I consider it my business as a private citizen to attend the hearing. The issue as I saw it was between the authorized representatives of the Legion and the residents of the immediate neighborhood of the Legion Hall on Coleman Street. It is true that I am this year honored with the position of Chaplain of the Legion but I had no part in preparing or presenting the application for a licence to the Board.

I note also that my good friend the Rev. S. E. Larman of Holloway Street United Church was at the hearing. The press report states (quite accurately) that Mr. Larman is vice-president of the local Ministerial Association, but the inference is that he represented that body at the hearing. Mr. Larman would, I know, be the first to deny any such inference; rather that he represented nobody but himself and members of his congregation. It is true that this matter of the Legion's application for a licence was informally discussed at a recent meeting of the Ministerial Association but absolutely no vote, resolution or formal opinion was passed or even presented to the meeting, nor was any official representative appointed to Friday's hearing. It is only fair to state that from my observation had a resolution opposing the granting of a licence to the Legion been presented it would have passed. But the fact that no formal vote or opinion was taken is another reason why it never occurred to me as president of the Ministerial Association to attend the hearing. Nor, of course, had anyone any right to quote either the Ministerial Association, or its president, as having given an opinion. As for the latter he authorized no one to speak for him. He much prefers, and feels reasonably capable of, speaking for himself.

Yours very truly,
Arthur Smith,
Archdeacon.

Obituary

SAMUEL HARRY TURNER

Lifelong resident of the city, Mr. Samuel Harry Turner, 65 Grier St., died in the Belleville General Hospital Friday after being in failing health for five months. He was in his 76th year.

Mr. Turner was born on North Park Street, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Turner. He was an employee of the Belleville post office for 17 years and a member of the Tabernacle United Church. He was a veteran of World War I and went overseas as CSM with the 155th Battalion. He was a life member of the A.F. and A.M. No. 201.

He is survived by his wife, the former Mary Ethel Maybee; four daughters, Mrs. Morley (Theda) Spiker, of Simcoe; Mrs. Marian Stacey, Whitby; Miss Hazel Turner at home, and Mrs. William (Muriel) Frain, Belleville, and five sons, Leon A.; Edward E.; William M.; Walter P., and Douglas F. Turner, all of this city.

One sister, Mrs. G. H. Harris, Hamilton, and two brothers, Walter of Belleville, and George of Hamilton.

MRS. FRANCES H. HARRISON

Word has been received in the city of the death of Mrs. Frances H. Harrison at Clarke Manor, St. Petersburg, Florida, early this Saturday morning. The late Mrs. Harrison was born in Huntingdon township, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Bird and lived in that community until her marriage to Dr. E. R. Harrison. She resided in Madoc for many years, while her husband carried on a practice in that district and on his death she moved to Florida, where she has since resided.

Mrs. Harrison, while a resident of Madoc was active in the Methodist Church and later the United Church and the announcement of her death will be sincerely regretted by a wide circle of friends. She was the last of her immediate family.

The funeral announcement will be made later.

JAMES TOPPING
(Tyendinaga)

Following a lengthy illness, James Topping, Marysville district farmer, died at his home on March 4th. He was born in the Tyendinaga district 77 years ago son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Topping and had lived all his life in the district.

He was a member of Christ Anglican Church and was a former member of the Orange Lodge and Oddfellows.

He is survived by his wife, the former Edith Campbell; five sons, Clare, Frank, Harold, Delbert and Tom, and three daughters, Mrs. Harold (Grace) Fox; Doris Topping; Mrs. Earl (Ethel) Alkenbrack, and two brothers, John and Edward Topping, and two sisters, Mrs. Smith and Mrs. W. Alexander.

The funeral was held Friday afternoon with service at Deseronto United Church conducted by Rev. L. G. O. Walker, rector of Bath Anglican Church. The bearers were Dave Harvey, Fred Mowbray, Bernard McGuinness, James Fahey, Saul McFarland and James McFarlane.

HARRY FOSTER
(Agincourt)

A former well-known resident of Moira in Huntingdon township, Harry Foster died suddenly at his home in Agincourt, Ont., on Friday. He was of advanced age.

Born in Moira, Mr. Foster resided there on the family homestead until he was 45 years of age. He is the last of a family of 12 offspring of the late James Foster and Hannah Wood.

Leaving Moira, Mr. Foster took up farming in Demorestville, Prince Edward County residing there until two years ago when he moved to Agincourt.

He was well-known in horse circles of the district. He was a member of the United Church.

Surviving are his widow the former Harriett Milks, four sons and four daughters. He enjoyed the respect and high esteem of a large circle in the county and district.

LATE SAMUEL LAKE

The funeral of Samuel Lake a veteran of the Northwest Rebellion was held on Thursday afternoon March 6th at the Duffin Funeral parlor, Stirling.

Rev. R. R. Bonsteel pastor of Rawdon United circuit was in charge of the service.

The bearers were Messrs. Harold Chambers, Raymond Chambers, Murney Stapley, Nelson Stapley, George McMullen and Clarence Fitchett.

The interment was made in the family plot at Eggleton Cemetery.

JOHN SUTTLE POST
(Eldorado)

Ill for the past three weeks, John Suttle Post of Eldorado, died at his home Saturday. He was in his 73rd year.

Born in Marmora township, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Post, he had lived in the Eldorado district for the past 42 years where he was a farmer. He was an adherent of Union United Church and took an active interest in municipal matters. He served for 22 years on the board of trustees for S.S. No. 16, Madoc, and was also a councillor for a number of years.

He is survived by his wife, the former Emma Gray, and one son, Don, at home, and three grandchildren.

Also surviving are three sisters, Mrs. Nellie Paget, Belleville; Mrs. Lottie Robinson, Wallaceburg; and Mrs. C. D. (Mary) McCann, Eldorado; and three brothers, Elisha, Florida; Manley, Eldorado, and Edmont, of Marmora.

The funeral announcement appears elsewhere in this edition.

IN MEMORIAM

HILTON. — In loving memory of my dear husband, Charles H. Hilton, who passed away March 8, 1951.

No one knows how much I miss you,
No one knows the bitter pain
I have suffered since I lost you
Life has never been the same.
In my heart your memory lingers
Sweetly, tender, fond and true,
There is not a day, dear Charles,
That I do not think of you.

—Sadly missed by wife Alma. M8

SOULE. — In loving memory of a dear mother, Mrs. Susanna Soule, who passed away March 8, 1949.

"May she rest in peace."

—Margaret. M8

HOWARD. — In loving memory of a dear father, who passed away March 8, 1942, also a loving mother who left us September 19, 1951.

We are sad within our memory
Lonely are our hearts today.
For the ones we loved so dearly
Have forever been called away.
We think of them in silence,
No eyes can see us weep.
But many silent tears are shed
When others are asleep.

—Sadly missed but dearly loved by their daughter Eva, son-in-law Harold and grandchildren. M8

HICKERSON. — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Dora Hickerson, who passed away March 8, 1950.

She was a wonderful mother,
She played life's battles square,
No matter when we needed her,
We always found her there.
So on this day our hearts go out
To the dearest and best of mothers,
Who never had time to think of herself,
But always thought of others.

—Lovingly remembered by her husband, daughters and grandchildren Brenda and Elaine. M8

Shalom From Israel

(Article 24)

CAPERNAUM AND AIN GEV

Jerusalem — (Special to the Ontario Intelligencer) — "Then He took the five loaves and the two fishes and looked up to heaven, He blessed them, and brake, and gave to the disciples to set before the multitude. And they did eat and were filled; and there was taken up of fragments that remained to them twelve baskets."

This quotation is taken from the gospel according to St. Luke, and deals with the miracle of the loaves and fishes that took place at Capernaum.

On the northern shore of the Sea of Galilee is an area covered with tall palm trees and evergreen forests. This place is the Biblically famous Kfar Nachum, which in the English language is called Capernaum.

It was at this former fishing village of Galilee that Jesus met the disciples John and Peter, and where the miracle of the loaves and fishes took place. Capernaum has also become famous because the "Sermon on the Mount" was delivered from a nearby hill.

Popular Centre

Capernaum is a must on the program of visitors to Israel. At this site many beautiful churches have been built, the most famous of which is the Church of the Loaves and Fishes. One can also see the ruins of a Jewish synagogue which was destroyed during the second century. Among the ruins may be found beautifully carved stone pillars, an old stone mortar and pestal, and an old stone candelabrum, called a menorah in Hebrew. The menorah has become the national seal of the State of Israel and is the symbol of Jewish independence.

One wall of the synagogue still stands and it is hoped that by using the stones of the original synagogue, it can be reconstructed. Research along these lines is being carried on at the present time and it is quite likely that the reconstruction of the synagogue will begin in the near future.

Near the ruins, another historic object may be seen. This is the stone mosaic which originally made up part of the floor of a Byzantine Church that stood at Capernaum.

Ain Gev is the only Israeli settlement which is situated on the eastern shores of the Sea of Galilee. As one approaches the settlement he sees barges, motor boats, fishing ships and nets on the shore and in the water. This is because Ain Gev, as well as being an agriculture settlement, produces most of the fish of the area.

Banana Plantations

Along agricultural lines, the settlement has large banana plantations. Ain Gev also serves as somewhat of an entertainment centre and in the evening, motor launches bring people from Tiberius, a city on the opposite side of the sea, to dine and dance at the modern little cafeteria which has been set up on the shore of the settlement.

Ain Gev was founded in 1937 and progressed under peaceful conditions until the outbreak of hostilities in this country in 1948. Being situated on the border between Israel and Syria, it was one of the first places to be attacked by the invading armies of Syria.

Despite the fact that the kibbutz was surrounded on three sides, it was never captured by the Syrians and the people of the settlement even managed to capture a Syrian military position, Tel Sussita. Tel Sussita is a high hill and is the controlling point of the east shore of the Sea of Galilee. As long as the hill was in Syrian hands, the settlement could never feel secure.

The settlers of Ain Gev are proud of the fact that they were able to capture this security point, because military experts have claimed that it was impossible to even try to capture Tel Sussita.

Ain Gev has become well known in Israel because of the fine group of musicians that live at the settlement. Each year during the passover season (a holiday commemorating the exodus from Egypt) people come from all parts of the country to hear the annual concert put on by these musicians.

The settlers of Ain Gev are musical and industrious people, and at the present time they are busy constructing a large music theatre. Concerts and musical recitals will be held at the theatre and when it is completed, Ain Gev will become the musical centre of the area.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

By
WINIFRED E. WILSON

"Are these two birds the very same ones that nested here last year?"

This oft-repeated question can be satisfactorily answered more often now than thirty years ago. When the birds have been banded, naturally there can be no doubt - - - we may see for ourselves. But even though neither one of the pair wears a band, we have much valuable information about the habits of the various species from which to draw - - - information now available because, in the last few decdaes, the number of bird watchers has increased enormously.

Comparatively few of our feathered friends mate for life. Males of certain species are particularly fickle. A house wren not only changes wives during a summer, but may actually divide his affections between two or more simultaneously. Like their relative, the domestic fowl, most members of the grouse and ptarmigan families keep harems. A great many species, however, are content to have a new wife each spring. When this is the case, we wonder which of the two originals returns to the old site. Some experienced bird watchers are inclined to think that the female generally wins, and her former husband must seek other quarters.

When after an extensive journey and a prolonged absence the same couple is again in residence, how did they manage to connect? This is one of the many deep secrets of birdland. Shore birds, ducks, and geese generally mate in the south and fly north as husband and wife. But male robins, song sparrows, rose-breasted grosbeaks, scarlet tanagers and others get here first in spring, seize and hold a territory until the arrival of the females.

Some species are known to continue in pairs after they fly south. Knowing the way our common goldfinches talk so lovingly to their mates, we need not be surprised to learn that the dark-backed goldfinches stay in pairs all winter. Many of the hawks certainly remain together for an entire year, and it has been proved that red-shouldered hawks often mate for life, returning each spring to the same old nest.

A WELL-ADVISED DELAY

The private bills committee of the Ontario legislature acted wisely the other day in deciding to "review the principle of" of all requests by charitable organizations for municipal tax exemptions.

The committee made this decision when it was called upon to deal with a request by the Sarnia Y.M.C.A.-Y.W.C.A. for passage of a private bill granting exemption from municipal taxes except for local improvements. Several other private bills asking similar exemptions were also halted for more extensive scrutiny.

Bryan Cathcart, P.C.-Lambton West, who sponsored the Sarnia bill, said that both the councils of Sarnia and of Plymouth township, where the Sarnia Y.M.C.A. has a 12½ acre summer camp, had approved the request for exemption.

But W. M. Nickle, P.C.-Kingston, the chairman of the committee, said the members should establish "some kind of principle." He said passage of the Sarnia and other similar bills would deprive future councils of the right to levy taxes on the properties involved. Mr. Nickle intimated he was not in favor of such legislation.

Mr. Nickle, we believe, was right and in closer touch with the people back home than his colleague from Lambton. To permit a municipality to exempt a property from taxation is one thing, but to pass legislation depriving a municipality of its right to tax a property is something entirely different.

Whether the Sarnia Y.M.C.A. is granted exemption or partial exemption from taxation doesn't matter except to the taxpayers of Sarnia, but the principle involved, we believe, is an extremely important one.

If the Ontario legislature were to begin granting exemptions from municipal taxation on request, it would soon be flooded with such requests. Unless it wants to lay itself open to accusations of discrimination and favoritism, the legislature would be well advised to proceed very slowly about granting these exemptions.

Are any of the people who ask for these tax exemptions, we wonder, willing to forego such municipally-provided services as police and fire protection, garbage removal and snow-plowing? Or do they want to be given such services at the expense of other people?

WANTED: ONE STEEL MILL

Some months ago, an American newspaper correspondent named William N. Oatis was jailed in Czechoslovakia. Oatis had been gathering factual information about conditions in Czechoslovakia and transmitting it to the Associated Press. In the eyes of the Communist authorities of Czechoslovakia, this made Oatis "a spy of the imperialist warmongers."

The American authorities have made more than one effort to effect Oatis's release, but thus far without success. Just the other day, spokesmen for the Czechoslovakian government in Washington intimated that something might be done in the matter of releasing Oatis if the United States were to build a $17,000,000 steel mill for the Czechs. The Czechs were propably prompted into advancing this suggestion by the fact that, only a few months ago, the Americans had ransomed four American airmen whose plane had been forced down in Czechoslovakia.

Whether the Associated Press and the American government are going to be able to bring about Oatis's freedom remains uncertain, but the incident certainly illustrates the difficulty of doing business with Communists in Czechoslovakia or anywhere else.

Communists respond to only one kind of argument, and it is time some of the leaders in the western countries woke up to that fact.

HIGH COST OF MOTORING

Delegation of Vancouver citizens who interviewed Attorney General Gordon Wismer to urge a lower car licence fee was on solid ground. The group, sponsored by the B.C. Automobile Association, asked for a $10 licence in place of the present $25 charge.

British Columbia motorists probably pay most heavily of any in North America for the "privilege" of driving a car. On top of the high freight charges for cars and parts inherent in our geographic distance from manufacturers, we are loaded with the highest tax structure.

We pay the highest licence fee scale in Canada, a $10 registration fee (highest in Canada), $5 for a driver's licence, and 10 cents on every gallon of gas. As an extra wallop, we pay an extra 3 percent (sales tax) on new and used cars, and on all parts and equipment. — (Vancouver Province.)

EDUCATION

That some change is needed certainly becomes patently plain with the rather astonishing revelation in the survey that fewer than 60 percent of children who start to school in Canada ever get to high school. Of these another 25 percent fail to complete junior matriculation. Only about one-tenth of the population goes on to higher education. — (Moncton Transcript.)

TOMORROW

Tomorrow is the day
I may
Do what I have put off today.

The day to follow this,
when I'm Quite certain I shall have more time;

The day when I am sure
there'll be
No unexpected call for me;

No pressing duties that introduce
The cheap and always false excuse.

But what undone I let remain
Tomorrow I'll put off again.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

March 8th., 1932.

Mr. Thomas Givins, florist, Bleecker Ave., well known and highly esteemed resident of this city, is today observing the 87th anniversary of his birth and is receiving the congratulations and good wishes of many friends.

Traffic Officer Frink is having his hands full endeavoring to get traffic moving on No. 2 Highway, Trent Road, near the cemetery. Two cars are in the ditch and it is necessary to go through the cemetery to get around them. At Jones' Creek cars are also in difficulty; the heavy snow has caused the roadway to be cut up badly and many cars get into difficulties at this point. At one time fifty cars were in a tangle there.

Many motorists, who thought they could get through the blocked roads spent the night in lodgings kindly provided them at farm houses. Through motor busses east stopped at Trenton and sent passengers the remainder of their journey on the trains.

30 YEARS AGO

March 8th., 1922.

Mayor Charles Hanna, members of the city council and several city officials inspected the plant of the Tiger Rubber Company. The plant now turns out 180 to 200 tires per day and has a capacity for 500 to 600 tires per day, besides 500 inner tubes. The staff has been increased from 60 to 100 hands, all working on piece work and the payroll amounts to about $10,000 per month. The gross profits for the past nine and a half months amounted to over $75,000; from this amount all expenses are to be deducted. The visitors found the visit to the plant very interesting.

40 YEARS AGO

March 8th., 1912.

The hockey match between the Printers and the Jewellers was a fast and interesting game at the arena last night. The result was a tie of 2 to 2. Fenn, Bateman and Mason played star games, the latter scored both goals for the Printers. The following composed the teams: Printers: Weese, Cookston, Riggs, Gallagher, Fenn, Mason and Bateman; Jewellers: McBride, Best, W. Wonnacott, Hamilton, Soles, A. Wonnacott and Frost. The referee was W. Wilson.

Mr. Thomas Corbett of Calgary, an old Belleville boy, is home on a visit.

Dr. Potts of Stirling was in town today.

50 YEARS AGO

March 8th., 1902.

Messrs. John Lewis and Company have been awarded the contract for the plumbing in the new post office and customs house in Deseronto.

The people who live in West Belleville are wondering how they ever got along before the footbridge was built; now they miss the convenience of the bridge owing to the overflow of water from the river covering the footbridge gangway and Coleman Street.

Mr. M. Bird of Stirling was in town today.

The work of tearing down the ruins of the Yeomans' building on Front Street, opposite Victoria Ave, which was destroyed by fire will be commenced shortly. A new building will be erected upon the site.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

COMMUNION WITH FLOWERS

To get close to God we must get close to the wonders and mysteries of His created things. The late Dr. George Washington Carver once said that he "talked with flowers." But, as he did so, he insisted that he was talking with God.

No member of royalty ever wore a gown so exquisite and perfect as the commonest flower. Take the dandelion, for example. What a garb of gold it wears! Yet people look upon it as a pest in their lawn. I let them stay in mine. Their cheerful heads shine out like new stars in the firmament at night.

I once talked with a gardener who personified his shrubs and flowers, calling them "he" and "she." Why not? They have so many of our own characteristics. Perhaps that is why we are so drawn to them, and do silently talk with flowers. It's always a pleasant and inspiring talk. No unkind words are ever breathed from the heart of a flower!

When I see people standing silently before the window of a flower shop, I too take my stand there, and all the time I keep wondering what is being said by those admirers, and undoubtedly those observers wonder what is being said in my own mind about the beauty and wonder in that shop.

Children love flowers. I have watched them as they held some bit of beauty plucked from where they might be playing. They seem fascinated with its strangeness and color, and often its fragrance. Many of these children, in the outer world, hunt for flowers as they would a treasure, about which they might have been told.

We are better, happier, and more devout human beings through the love of flowers and our communion with them. These flowers were not arrayed in such perfect form, color and fragrance without a purpose. There is less loneliness in the home when flowers are there. Flowers in the garden grow and thrive best for that one who sprinkles love about them. It makes them blink their very eyes in delight!

COSTLY HOME SOLD

Santa Monica, Calif., March 7—(AP)—The beach home of Mrs. Sylvia Gable, which cost $200,000, has been sold for $37,000 to a Chicago firm, the International Rolling Mill Products Company. The home was built by Actor Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., and at his death went to Mrs. Gable, then his widow. Mrs. Gable has a divorce suit pending against actor Clark Gable. They were estranged last year.

ROOKIES STAR

Lakeland, Fla., March 7 (AP)—The sparkling play of two rookies had Detroit Tigers veterans hustling today.

That was the result of the first infra-squad game yesterday in which young John Phillips at 3rd and former Toronto Maple Leaf Alex Garbowski at shortstop pattered home runs and starred in fielding.

OUR TOWN

BY JACK SCOTT

WANTED: A SAGE

There are a good many days—sometimes perhaps only because of a transient mood, again because of a reaction to a disturbing item of news—when I feel an almost desperate need to have the advice of older and wiser men.

I wonder often how many younger men and women share with me a longing for a philosophy, or, if you like, an attitude to buckle on as an armor against the uncertainties and tensions of these times.

I can speak only for those I know, those of us who came out of the last war with a great appetite for serenity and for a sense of purpose in our lives—and found ourselves swept into the tumbling current of confusion and changing values.

Some of these find a sort of false happiness by deliberately limiting their view as far as their back fence, absorbing themselves in their own personal problems and triumphs, their own cardboard world.

Some find a sense of purpose in believing strongly, fanatically, in a cause. The three best-adjusted men I know are this way.

One is a Communist who abandoned his career to run a "peace" group. One is a young lawyer filled with a zeal for the future of the Progressive-Conservative Party. The third is deeply and increasingly religious. "Our only hope," he said to me one day with deep sincerity, "is believing in Jesus Christ."

Some, too, are honestly ignorant and unaware of the outside pressures. Often I'm tempted to feel that their kind of Hereford happiness, unknowing and without guilt in being unknowing, is enviable.

But most of the group I speak for have none of these protective coverings and are exposed rawly to a world that seems to deny them the chance of happiness.

I find myself vacillating between philosophies of hope and cynicism, neither with a forseeable future. One invites hypocrisy, the other, despair. The cool and contemplative logic I crave eludes me in the face of so much that is wildly illogical.

I hesitate to believe strongly in anything. That seems to me too attractive, too convenient. I resist every day the constant invitation to take a firm stand in my own mind.

I read of the plan, for example, to put 400,000 Germans into uniform on "our" side and my mind goes back a short eight years to a time when fresh from seeing Canadians slaughtered at Cap Gris Nez, I stood outside a prisoner-of-war compound and tasted a bile of hatred looking in through the wire at Germans.

Almost every issue of the day, issues that other men seem to be confidently accepting or rejecting, leaves me confused.

A boy I met in Petawawa is killed in Korea and I search my mind unsuccessfully trying to find a voice to say his death really means anything. I ask myself, would I die for it?

I read a United Nations report on world population. I sit in my warm and pleasant living room with everything to make a man glad to be alive and read that 233,000 children will be born in the world today, that three-quarters of them are doomed to a short unhappy life of semi-starvation, that in the cold language of statistics we are eating ourselves off the face of the earth.

And I have no philosophy that will either let me absorb this or put it into a proper perspective. What should a man do or think on reading that? Shrug? Fall into gloom? Pray? Sigh? Join an organization? Forget it? Hope? Despair? What?

"Half the time we feel blissfully wedded to the modern scene, in love with its every mood, amused by its every joke, imperturbable in the face of its threat, bent on enjoying it to the hilt," he wrote. "The other half of the time we are the fuss-pot moralist, suspicious of all progress, resentful of change, determined to right wrongs, correct injustice, and save the world even if we have to blow it to pieces in the process."

It isn't the way I would put it but I know that same schizophrenia.

I want only simple things to make me happy—my home, my children, my unimportant little job, some time in the sun. But there is forever a thunder over the hill and I know that other men like me, outwardly content with their day-to-day life, are hearing it, too.

That is the question I would put to the older and wiser men. Is there a sage who can say, "Here is the way to look at all this, here is a way to serenity or a reasonable facsmile"?

And if there were such a sage—would I believe him?

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Most birds, when they fly to a perch up in a bush or tree, make a clear-cut landing and stay there when they alight. But a jay is totally unable to do so simple a thing. In a jay's life nothing is simple. No matter where it first alights, whether a branch or a fence top, a jay has instantly to hop one, two or even three times before it comes to rest.

Usually with some sort of exclamation, generally a yell, it flies into a tree, selects a landing twig; lands, and then instantly leaps two feet to a better one, then a foot to a better one. With each choice, it yells. Then finally it makes a decision; stays where it is, and devotes its entire attention to yelling.

A jay, whether the blue jay of eastern Canada to the foothills of the west, or the Stellar's jay of British Columbia is like a small boy in temperament and character. It is always playing cops and robbers, with plenty of yells and weird war whoops. I have even heard a blue jay pretending, like a small boy, that it was firing a machine gun—uh-uh-uh-uh! It hates to be patronized. If you put peanuts out for it, it does not come honestly, as do other birds, to accept the gift. A jay has to pretend it is pinching the peanuts. It will take fifteen minutes, with its fellow jays, yoo-hooing in the neighborhood, furtively darting, hiding and making heroic false rushes and feints before it finally, with incredible stealth and speed, darts in and seizes the peanut. When it reaches the safety of the trees, its cries of derision for all peanut-givers sounds exactly like the yah-yah-yah of a rascally small boy.

Jays are known to be nest robbers, bullies, clowns, cheats, scallywags. But so are boys. Those who are attracted to wild birds for the sake of pleasure rather than of science are very kindly disposed towards jays.

CAN THE DOCTOR BREAK IT UP?

In the halcyon days in Canandaigua there were persistent rumors that smart workmen here and there were getting no less than a cool dollar a day for ten hours work. But milk was 3 or 4 cents a quart and three pounds of good round steak (a cut which is now nearly extinct) set you back two shillings.

The salient feature of the village in the era of Canandaigua Ale and Flanagan's Oysters was the doctor with the Vandyke beard, prince-nez, Prince Albert, white team and red-head driver. An eminent specialist arriving at your door today in limousine with liveried chaffeur and outriders in jeeps could not create a greater stir than the Canandaigua doctor did when he turned into Chapel Street to break up a case of pneumonia on the lungs. That's where pneumonia always hits, right plumb on the lungs, and sometimes the doctor had to make half a dozen calls to break it up. "Don't worry," the driver always assured neighbors who happened along while he waited for the doctor, "we have never lost a case of ammonia on the lungs and we ain't going to lose this one."

It was a dissappointment to me when I learned in medical school that it was not only on Chapel Street but pretty much everywhere that pneumonia settled on the lungs—if the doctors failed to break it up. I think I shall never forget how heartsick I became when my brave young illusions were shattered by Osler's confession that "One of the most widespread and fatal of all acute diseases, pneumonia" (otherwise called croupus, fibrinous, lobar pneumonia; pneumonitis; lung fever; and, by you academic morons, a bad cold setled on the lungs), "has become the 'Captain of the Men of Death,' to use the phrase applied by John Bunyan to consumption." This is a pretty how-dy-do, I thought, if the pre-eminent Dr. Osler must defer to a seventeenth century fable maker. It seemed to me that Osler's cold, scientific passivity in respect to pneumonia was as deplorable as the Canandaigua doctor's pretense of breaking up the illness.

This impression was strengthened when as an intern in the 400-bed Erie County Hospital under the finest medical teacher I ever knew, Dr. DeLancey Rochester I was privileged to observe the working of Dr. Rochester's favorite treatment for pneumonia namely, a hot mustard foot bath for ten minutes every 2 or 3 hours.

Doctor Rochester was too scrupulous even to imply that HMFB treatment could "break up" anything. But the treatment as applied by the most capable nurses, selected to carry out Dr. Rochester's orders, seemed to me then and has seemed ever since the best first aid, home treatment or hospital treatment for the C R I that is, for any acute respiratory infection, from pneumonia to earache.

It may occur to some readers that my faith in the remedial value of the hot mustard foot-bath must have dwindled since the introduction of sulfa, penicillin and other antibiotics. Not so. I believe the HMFB is indicated in every case of C R I whether the antibiotics are used or not.

You just can't take a hot mustard foot bath by yourself—at least I do not advise it. The treatment demands the help of a nurse, as talks to follow will explain. If you would like to have these lessons in compend send 25c and stamped, self-addressed envelope for the booklet Call It Cri.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Fistula

Kindly explain what fistula is and whether it can be cured. (E. W. M.)

Answer—An abnormal passage leading from a hollow organ to the surface or from an abscess to hollow organ or the surface. Most common situation of fistula is about the rectum — the passage leads from an ischiorectal abscess into the rectal passage or onto the skin surface or both. It can be cured by operation.

Old Legends Never Die

I like to wear full rubber soles and heels, but several people advise me to discontinue this practice as it is harmful to the eyes. (H. A. R.)

Answer—What you wear or don't wear on your feet has nothing to do with your eyes or eyesight.

Pruritis

I want to thank you for your fine pamphlet on Pruritis. I wish a thousand other sufferers would follow your advice as I did. I had suffered for many years and physicians and specialists had failed . . . (H. J. C.)

Answer—Thank you. Pamphlet on Pruritis (itching without apparent cause) is available on written request (no clipping) if you inclose stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

ANCIENT PRACTICE VINDICATED

Alcoholics Anonymous has a program that is called "Twelve Steps to Freedom." Following these steps has been responsible for the rescue of thousands of people from the bondage of a dire evil.

The twelfth step is, "having had a spiritual experience as a result of these steps, we tried to carry this message to alcoholics, and to practise these principles in all our affairs." When a member of the AA group has spent hours counselling with an alcoholic over his troubles he generally refers to such activity as "twelfth-step work."

This, of course, is what the New Testament refers to as witnessing—telling people of one's own experience and trying to lead them to enter pathways which will lead to a similar experience.

The church today has largely foresaken its ministry of witnessing. "Don't I belong to church? attend the services? pay my church dues? What more can you expect of me?" Important as these things are, none of them is mentioned in the so-called Great Commission found in the last verse of the Gospel of Matthew. Here Christian believers are instructed by the Lord to go into the world and make desciples of every nation.

AA is teaching the church anew a great lesson in what it refers to as "twelfth-step work." This is plain old-fashioned witnessing, on which the New Testament lays such important emphasis.

Stephen and Mrs. Vancott Of Ameliasburg to Celebrate 65th Wedding Anniversary

Although he "retired" from the farm 32 years ago, 90-year-old Stephen Vancott of Ameliasburg in Prince Edward county, is still able to do more work than many men 40 years his junior.

To illustrate, this still young nonogenarian who with Mrs. Vancott will observe 65 years of marriage on Sunday, March 9th, helped to harvest 80 loads of hay for a county farmer last summer.

"I did the loading and all the mowing away," he proudly asserts.

In addition to acting as summer time hired man Mr. Vancott found time to paint the roof of his house as well as many other odd jobs.

"I am a firm believer that it never hurt a man to work as long as he is able," he says.

Retired 30 Years Ago

Mr. and Mrs. Vancott retired from their Ameliasburg township farm just over three decades ago when their only son, Roy, decided that farming was not for him. Roy went to Michigan where he became a successful bus operator and is now in the tourist resort business "up-state" in Michigan.

This weekend they are observing 65 years of married life and will be guests of honor Saturday night at a function in the township hall staged by residents of the community.

Born in Thurlow township east of Belleville, Mr. Vancott saw his father die, when he was five years old. When he was 10 he went to work for a Prince Edward county farmer and has lived in the county ever since. For 76 of the past 80 years he has received his mail at Ameliasburg post office.

"I guess the people around here have gotten to know me," he says.

Eyes Still Good

Mr. Vancott's eyes are still good and he does not wear glasses to read. Bearing this out is the fact that he still drives his own car as he has done for the past 45 years. He was one of the first men in the country to own a car and has lost track of how many he has owned in the intervening years.

Asked if he had any difficulty in getting his driver's licence, Mr. Vancott admitted that he did on one occasion. A few years ago when the Department of Highways doubted a man his age could safely drive a car, a man was sent down from Toronto to give him a driving check.

After the test was taken the man told Mr. Vancott he was good for another ten years. "And I don't see why I cannot be driving when I am 100," he said.

He admits, however, that he doesn't like to drive through cities and when going to town is willing to ride with someone else.

In Ill Health

Mrs. Vancott is the former Emma Spencer and has lived all her life in the Ameliasburg area. Now 83 she has been in ill health in recent months but until a few years ago was active in church work. The couple attend Ameliasburg United Church where Mr. Vancott has filled every office from Sunday School superintendent to being a member of the session.

Mr. Vancott says he was sick but once in his life. He does not smoke nor drink and it is to this fact that he attributes his old age and his good health.

FRANKFORD

Frankford — Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Carlisle and family spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. L. Murdoch in Madoc.

Miss Juanita Wood, of Belleville, spent Sunday evening with Miss Mary Elliott.

Mrs. Hector Whitton spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Percy Hubble, in Stockdale.

Miss Janet Howard returned home on Friday from Trenton Memorial Hospital. Her many friends wish her a speedy recovery.

Lord McPherson, of Scotland, toured the Bata Shoe Plant last week. A party was held in his honor in the recreation hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Poole, of Brighton; Mr. and Mrs. Carl Sine of the 6th of Sidney were Saturday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Carman Westlake, in Batawa.

Mrs. Mary A. Gunter of Frankford; Mrs. Eliza Gunter of Gunter were Thursday guests of Mrs. Hugh Patrick in Batawa.

Mr. and Mrs. Carman Westlake were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Westlake.

Miss Muriel Twigg of Trenton spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Reid.

Mrs. G. Chard and Mrs. H. Truesdale spent Monday with Mrs. Jack Foster.

Mr. and Mrs. Genereaux and Marie, Mr. and Mrs. Steinburg Mr. and Mrs. E. Chard and children spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Herman Chard.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Foster spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Ted Lawrence at Montrose Farms.

Mr. George Carlisle and family of Stirling; Mr. and Mrs. Joe Grills, Mrs. Louise Anderson were Sunday guests with Mr. and Mrs. Albert Carlisle.

Rev. Clarence Walker of Winnipeg, Manitoba, district superintendent of Western Manitoba and Northern Districts, was the special speaker in the Full Gospel Tabernacle Sunday, and weekend guest of Rev. and Mrs. Gordon Pierce.

Mrs. Ernie Chard and children spent Wednesday with Mrs. H. Walroff in Trenton.

The regular weekly meeting of Frankford Full Gospel Tabernacle C.A.'s was held in the church Friday evening. Vice-president Maddy Solmes had charge of the meeting. Maddy and Reg. Solmes favored with a vocal duet, "Have I Done My Best For Jesus?" Reg. brought a stirring message from Genesis and Corinthians. Rev. G Pierce made the announcements.

A meeting of the executive of the Frankford Bowling League will be held in the office of E. G. Lohnes, following bowling Thursday night. Plans for the playoffs and annual banquet and dance will be discussed in detail.

Monday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lohnes were Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lohnes, Darlene and Blondie, and Mr. Raymond Lohnes of Belleville.

Mrs. William Davidson of Deloro is visiting Mrs. Harold Rogers this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Rose and Edna, visited Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone Ireland in Smithfield, on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Spencer of New York City spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. George Spencer.

Mr. Ray Johnson of Kingston visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Johnson, on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ward Deline of Marmora visited Mr. and Mrs. Roy Gunter over the weekend.

Mrs. William Davidson of Deloro visited Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Lohnes on Monday.

It is hoped that in the near future the 1st Frankford Cub Pack will be able to resume operation. The Scoutmaster has been successful in obtaining the services of a Cubmaster and assistant for a period of one year. It is hopeful that at that time another leader can be obtained.

Wins Tickets

Mr. Harold Baker had the thrill of a lifetime over the weekend. He was the lucky winner of two hockey tickets to Maple Leaf Gardens on a Lions Club draw. Messrs. Ray Scott and Herb Rankin made the trip with the lad to Toronto.

On completion of the game, Harold was shown around Maple Leaf Gardens, and was successful in obtaining autographs of several of the players. On the way home, they saw the wreckage of two automobiles in which one person was killed and another very seriously injured.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Moran have moved into their new home on the western outskirts of town.

Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Reilly have moved into part of Charles Bennett's home.

The Frankford Badminton Club held the draw for their radio on Monday night at their regular playing night. Arnold Stickle of the Frankford band drew the winning ticket, which was held by Mrs. T. A. Smith of Trenton. The club realized a good profit from the project and will be in a position to purchase more badly-needed equipment. Congratulations to Mrs. Smith.

Mrs. William Davidson called on Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lohnes on Tuesday.

The Frankford Softball Association is hoping for a little colder weather this Friday night, when they present the Quinte Skating Club at the Frankford Arena. All proceeds will go to promoting softball in Frankford this coming season.

ARTIST INHERITS ESTATE

Caracas, Venezuela, March 8.—(Reuters)— Jacques Belliard, a penniless French artist who has earned his living for several years peddling his cartoons from village to village, Thursday learned he is the heir to a title and a fortune of more than $280,000. Second of four brothers, he succeeds to the title of Marquis de Neuville and the fortune, because his elder brother as an inspector-general in the French navy is barred by law from receiving the inheritance.

UNIQUE CONTEST

Windsor, Ont., March 8 (CP) — Boys and girls at Patterson Collegiate here staged a unique contest to see who could collect most money for the community chest. If the boys lost they were to wear their pant legs rolled up. If the girls lost they were to go without lipstick. Yesterday the boys paraded in their bare legs.

RAWDON

Rawdon—Mr. and Mrs. Roy Thrasher, Mount Pleasant-Rawdon, Mr. George Thrasher, Fort Steele, B.C., Mrs. Paul Sharpe, Wellman's, and their cousin Mrs. C.W. Thompson of Stirling spent Sunday with their cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Varty at Bogart. The group visited several old landmarks and renewed acquaintances with old friends in that district.

Rawdon friends will look forward to hearing Rev. Kingsley Joblin, a professor of Victoria College, Toronto, who will be guest minister at St. Paul's United Church on Sunday, October 19th. Kingsley received his high school education at King George high school, Stirling, while his father, Rev. Fred G. Joblin, Port Perry was minister on Rawdon circuit for a 12 year period.

Mrs. Rusell Hubel spent a day recently with friends in Cobourg.

Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Hagerman recently entertained Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wickett, Foxboro.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Thrasher, Mount Pleasant-Rawdon, Mr. G. Thrasher, Fort Steele, B.C., were dinner guests last week with Mr. and Mrs. Milton Shaw, Ivanhoe, and in the afternoon they all enjoyed a trip to Coe Hill.

FRANKFORD

Angus Cranston Gives Fine Address on 'South Africa'

Frankford — The March meeting of the Frankford United Church 3M Club was held in the Rose-Lowery Hall Monday evening with 30 members present. Marjorie Moran opened the meeting with a call to worship.

Claude Moran took charge of the business portion of the meeting. Ruth Beach was called on for a report on the progress made by her committee, which is endeavoring to obtain tables and other supplies for the Junior Sunday School. She explained that the committee was planning on a work night, in which the tables would be cleaned up, painted and made ready for the Sunday School.

Bags Finished

Eileen Conley has kindly finished the bags necessary in which to keep scissors, crayons, and other supplies. A vote of thanks was moved to her, and a hearty handclap expressed the appreciation of the group.

A letter from the church board was read, requesting the 3M Club to appoint a representative or representatives to a special committee, whose purpose it is to investigate the possibility of expanding the hall premises. This committee held their first meeting Tuesday night, but no details are available for publication at present. The presidents, Claude and Marjorie Moran, were appointed to this committee.

Rev. R. MacEachern went over briefly the induction service for officers of the club, to be held next Sunday in the church. All 3M officers are urged to attend the church service next Sunday for the official investiture service.

Myrtle Poland and Eileen Conley took charge of the worship service. Myrtle gave an interesting commentary on the two famous Solomon paintings, "The Head of Christ, and "Gethsemane." To make the setting most impressive and effective, lights were extinguished, and the two pictures placed at the front of the hall, in indirect lighting.

Guest Speaker

Mr. MacEachern introduced the guest speaker, Mr. Angus Cranston of Batawa, who instilled a bit of South African atmosphere into the meeting by singing a couple of South African songs, one in Dutch, the other in Zulu. With coaching, and not a few off-key notes, the group joined Mr. Cranston in the Dutch refrain.

Mr. Cranston described the Union of South Africa as a land of sunshine and song, of sharp contrasts and distinctions, and a land of great promise and hope. Using large pictures to illustrate his interesting talk, he gave the club a completely different slant on that great land, than one usually finds in travel-commentaries and movie shorts. He pointed out that South Africa had received a great deal of unwarranted criticism and smearing in connection with the racial situation, by political parties who wished to further their own ends.

Little Rivalry

Actually, Mr. Cranston pointed out, there is little of the old rivalry between the Dutch and British that once existed. South Africa has a great task in winning the loyalty of the black people 100 percent, but they are making progress in that direction. Mr. Cranston went into detail on the religious set-up in that country, as well as the agricultural and mining interests. On completion of his talk, he was warmly applauded by the club members. President Claude Moran thanked him for his fine address.

A period of recreation, under the supervision of Ray Scott, was enjoyed. Orval and Peggy Berry, it is understood, are signing a radio contract, after their splendid example of elocution Monday night. Mervin Dafoe's team won the pillow relay. It looks as if he has had experience with pillows before.

All sat down to a bountiful repast, ably prepared by Myrtle Poland and her group. Mr. MacEachern returned thanks, and an enjoyable social hour brought the meeting to a close.

Next meeting will be either the first or second Monday night of April. Jack and Ruth Beach and their group will be in charge. Their group will be meeting Sunday night after church to plan the next meeting.

WEST HUNTINGDON

West Huntingdon — The Endeavor's Class held their February social evening meeting at the parsonage, Thomasburg, on Thursday evening. Rev. M. Clarke conducted an inspiring service previous to the opening of the meeting.

Mr. Dan Cooke presided over the program which had been carefully prepared by Mr. and Mrs. Alex McCurdy. Mrs. Frank Hammond conducted the scripture reading.

In the business period it was decided to accept an invitation to visit a Baptist group at Norwood on the evening of March 18 with the Endeavors furnishing the program prepared by Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] Carr. Mrs. Mac Sarles and Mrs. Howard Cooke contributed a duet followed by readings given by Mrs. Dan Cooke and Mrs. Russell Sills.

Mr. Clarke gave the special address which was most interesting taking the form of a lively discussion.

Mr. Alex McCurdy conducted a contest.

Mrs. Clayton Wright voiced the appreciation of the class to Mr. and Mrs. Clarke for their hospitality after which Mrs. Clarke served refreshments.

Rev. Morley Clarke was a dinner guest on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Ashley.

Sunday evening guests of Mr. andl Mrs. Harold Thompson included Mr. and Mrs. Russell Sills and Mr. and Mrs. Alex McCurdy.

Those from here who attended the funeral services for the late Rev. Mr. Nussey which took place at Brockville on Friday, were Mr. and Mrs. Melville Donnan, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Donnan, and Mr. Foster Wilson.

Mrs. John Jeffrey spent a few days recently with friends; at Toronto and Sarnia.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Bateman and John, of Tweed, spent Sunday evening with Mr. and Mrs. George Ashley.

Special Meetings

The Standard Church people have just concluded two weeks of special meetings at their church, Ivanhoe. A special three-day convention was held climaxing these meetings. Rev. Mr. Slater of Brockville was the special preacher for the meetings and was entertained at Mr. and Mrs. Foster Wilson's home during the two weeks.

Mrs. Alex McCurdy spent a few days last week with her parents, Mr and Mrs. Ross Hollard of Stirling.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. John Wallace and James and Mrs. Alex McInroy spent Sunday evening with Mr. and Mrs. John McInroy.

Miss Margaret Kerr, of Tweed, spent a couple days last week with her niece, Mrs. Goldie McInroy.

The World Day of Prayer was observed in this area in the West Huntingdon United Church with a fair attendance.

Those assisting Mrs. William Grant on the prepared program were Mrs. Keith Bray, giving an address; Mrs. H. MacMillian and Mrs. Barton Haggerty.

Mrs. Foster Wilson and Mrs. W. Grant each contributed solos.

MARSH HILL

MARSH HILL W.M.S.

Marsh Hill—Marsh Hill W.M.S. met at the home of Mrs. Frank Finkle and Mrs. Leslie Finkle on Tuesday afternoon with eight members present.

Mrs. Bartindale gave the call to worship, and two minutes silence was observed for the late King George VI, followed by prayer for the Royal family.

Mrs. Bartindale read a letter of thanks from Miss Ratz for the box of white gifts that was sent.

Notice of the presbyterial at Grace United Church, Trenton, on March 27th was read and Mrs. Leslie Finkle was appointed delegate for the W.M.S. and Mrs. E. B. Finkle for the Baby Band.

Plans were made for a "Silver Patch" apron and Mrs. Sarles is to make the apron.

Members reported nine calls, and one hospital visit and ten cards sent.

Mrs. F. Campbell, Christian Citizenship secretary, gave a reading "Working For Peace."

Mrs. Allyn Finkle was in charge of the program and opened the worship service. Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Farley Lindenfield.

The last chapter from the study book "Our Fellow Canadians From the Orient," was studied. The Chinese were the first of the Orientals to come to Canada. The Japanese were much later in entering Canada. The Oriental was not long in Canada before the Christian church showed its concern for him. The church reached out the hand of kindness and helpfulness and slowly, but surely won the confidence and loyalty of many of these new residents in the land.

Mrs. Finkle pointed out on the man of Canada where there were Chinese and Japanese churches, some have no minister, only a community forker.

Brief Dialogue

Mrs. Frank Finkle and Mrs. Leslie Finkle gave a brief dialogue between two Japanese women who had to move from their homes in British Columbia in 1941 and found a new home in Eastern Canada in 1951.

Mrs. Fred Campbell told the experiences of two arrivals from China, who are talented Christian women. Mrs. Campbell also read the story, "She Called it a Day," dealing with work of Miss Ruth Peat a Chinese community worker.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses.

Mr. Cecil R. Roberts, Eastern Field Secretary of The Gideons International in Canada, who will be guest speaker on Sunday at the morning service of Bridge Street United Church. Mr. Roberts is a native of Dartmouth, N.S., and an able speaker

Little Change In Produce Prices On Local Market

There was little change in prices on the local produce market today as eggs were quoted at 52c for firsts, 40c for mediums and 35c for pullets.

Fowl was also offered at last week's prices ranging from 50c to 55c for chickens.

Apples were freely offered at from 50c to 55c per basket for Delicious, Spys, Talman Sweets and McIntosh.

Winter vegetables, such as carrots, beets and parsnips were 30c per half peck with potatoes holding at $1.00 per peck or $4.50 per bag.

Pork by the quarter was 30c for fronts and 35c for hinds. Whitefish sold at 40c; smelts were 35c; pike 35c and herring 30c or four lbs. for $1.00.

CAMPBELLFORD

Campbellford—All Campbellford churches will take part in a special Sunday evening service on March 9, when Dr. C. A. Ratz, principal of the Ontario Pentecostal Bible College, will be guest minister.

The service will be held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, and the Rev. A. E. Toombs of St. Andrew's will be in charge of the service.

Members of the ministerial will take part in the services and special music is being arranged. These services have always been well attended in the past.

Prepares Budget

The secretary of the Campbellford Public School was instructed to prepare the financial budget for 1952, and present this as soon as possible to the Municipal Council, at a meeting of the Campbellford Public School Board held here this week.

Mr. Charles Haig, principal of the school, gave the attendance report, showing an average attendance of 399.4 students out of 435 on the roll.

RAWDON

WELLMAN'S M.B.

Rawdon — Wellman's Mission Band on Rawdon united circuit held their regular meeting on Saturday at the home of Mrs. John Heagle.

The theme was "Befriending New Neighbors". The pianist played quiet music and the leader gave the call to worship in the absence of the president. The response was read from the blackboard and all repeated four verses of a hymn as a prayer.

Miss Muriel Morton read the scripture lesson, taken from Hebrews.

A special prayer on the theme was composed by the children and the leader wrote it on the blackboard after which all read it in unison.

Miss Mildred Morton recited "Little Sister and I".

Miss Doreen Maybee gathered the offering of over $1.30 after which Master Charles Nix contributed a piano solo. Miss Marlene Haggerty read her report. Roll call showed 12 members, four visitors and two leaders, a total of 18 in attendance.

Reviews Chapters

Mrs. Burton Morton reviewed past study chapters and graphically told the children the stories in connection with the next two chapters.

After the benediction Mrs. Carman Nix conducted a series of quiet games.

"The World Friends" were distributed after which the hostess served apples, cookies and candy and was tendered a vote of thanks for hospitality.

Obituary

CAPT JOHN BUCHANAN SR.

(Waupoos)

Capt. John Buchanan Sr., of Waupoos died in Belleville General Hospital on Wednesday. Prior to entering the hospital a few days earlier, he had been a patient in Prince Edward County Hospital at Picton. He was in his 79th year.

Funeral service was held from his residence Friday under Masonic auspices to Waupoos United Church. Interment was in Cressy cemetery.

Capt. Buchanan was a sailor of both the salt and fresh water bodies, winning the British and Canadian medals for life-saving and the Royal Humane Society's Certificate.

Born in the town of Rock Ferry, Cheshire, England, Mr. Buchanan's life was filled with adventure. As a boy of eleven he followed in his father's and grandfather's footsteps, sailing in trawlers off the English coast.

Three years later he left Liverpool on a coastal steamer for Antwerp, Belgium, where he joined the barge, Shakespeare, a sailing craft. Signing on for three years at a "pound and a pint" he spent the full time away from home.

Went to Chile

His first trip took him to Valparaiso, Chile, and lasted 102 days. Food was chiefly salt pork and beef, hardtack and soup. The trip continued on to Paraguay, then back around the Horn to Falmouth, England, the return taking another 94 days. The trips both ways were very rough.

In 1902 Mr. Buchanan left to sail on the steamship Icemore, making three voyages through the Mediterranean and the Black Sea. Transferring to the Thamesmore, he made two voyages to Boston, then sailed on the steamer Rossmore between Liverpool and Baltimore. This was the time of the great cattle trading and 1300 head of cattle were often carried. Seven such voyages were made.

His next steamer, the Diomed, sailed from Birkenhead, England, to China via the Suez Canal, an eight months voyage. Later he sailed on the Ajax and Ulysses, the latter becoming disabled on one voyage wallowing in the seas until a tow craft arrived to haul them 41 miles to Falmouth.

Joining the Liverpool Lightship Service, Mr. Buchanan spent four years with them and during that time saw many tragic wrecks on the Mersey river. Another three years were spent shipping on passenger boats on the Mersey during which time he was awarded a purse of gold and a presentation from the Royal Humane Society for saving the life of a man who was attempting to commit suicide.

Came to Canada in 1907

Mr. Buchanan came to Canada in 1907, sailing on a steamer carrying freight to Portland, Maine. He left the ship on docking and journeyed to Toronto but the water called again and a visit to the dock led to his being employed as second mate on the Cayuga during her first season.

The following season he went to the Chicora, commanded by Capt. Benson Bongard. He secured his mate's certificate in 1908 and sailed on the Macassa for two seasons where he secured his master's certificate. He also served two years on the Corona, then as master of the steamer Jubilee on Lake Temiskaming.

The following season he became master of the City of Toronto tug National and thence to the tug Geary where he remained until the outbreak of World War I.

Capt. Buchanan and his son, now Capt. Jack Buchanan, joined the 216th Battalion and went overseas with them before being transferred to the Army Service Corps which carried munitions and supplies to the front lines in France. Father and son were never parted during three years and five months in the service.

Returning to Canada, Capt. Buchanan went with Capt. Bongard on the Chicora's Toronto-Hamilton run. His rescue of a woman who fell off a gangplank into the lake during the night resulted in his being awarded the Canadian Humane Society Medal. He sailed on the Corona until retiring in 1926.

Capt. and Mrs. Buchanan settled in Prince Edward County in 1907. They were married 57 years ago in the Liverpool Parish Church, both being 21 years of age at that time.

Mrs. Buchanan's father Capt. Richard Foulkes, was keeper on the estate of the late Prime Minister William Gladstone.

At his Waupoos home Capt. Buchanan won the esteem of all who knew him by his cheerful nature and many kindly acts. His sailor hobby found an outlet in woodworking and many nautical touches around his home.

He was a member of the United Church and in his earlier days sang in the choir. He was also a member of Prince Edward Lodge, A.F. & A.M. No. 18.

Surviving are his wife, one son, Capt. Jack Buchanan who is seriously ill in Belleville General Hospital, and one brother, Capt. Thomas Buchanan of Picton.

NOT ALL POISONOUS

Of the roughly 2,500 identified species of snakes, about 500 are capable of secreting poison.

Two Lost Planes Land Safely; Both in Ottawa

Trenton (Special) — A search by crew members of a Dakota plane from the search and rescue department at Trenton air station was called off late this morning when two American planes reported lost yesterday landed safely at Ottawa.

The two planes, a Cessna Crane and a Cub aircraft, were to take off from Pennesault Lake, 100 miles north of here, for Ottawa, filed flight plans by phoning Killaloe. However, weather conditions prevented the planes from taking off and they were later reported missing.

This morning a search plane took off from Trenton but the flight was cancelled when word came through the two planes had landed safely at Ottawa.

All Herds Slaughtered

Regina, March 8. (CP)—All known herds infected with foot-and-mouth disease in the Regina area have been slaughtered with the exception of one herd being held for experimental purposes, federal veterinary officials said last night.

The herd of Leonard Wass, comprising 39 cattle, is being held for observation to help in tests aimed at establishing virus types and immunity duration. The herd may be destroyed next week.

In Thursday's killings, at McLean 28 miles east of Regina, 129 cattle and five swine were shot, bringing the total number of animals slaughtered to 1,022.

PERSECUTED

The nuns had two trials, one private on Nov. 28, 1951, in which they were accused by various Chinese who had brought children to the orphanage. It was at this trial that sentences were decided on although the nuns were not told. At their public trial on Dec. 2 they were handed printed documents containing their accusations and sentences.

They estimated that 20,000 attended the public trial at Sunyatsen Memorial Hall. They stood for 2 1-2 hours on a table which was stacked on another table. Meanwhile, the prosecutors and judges stood on a platform slightly above. About 6,000 spectators were inside the auditorium. Folding doors put the trial in view of many thousands more outside.

Could Not Hear

The nuns said they could hear nothing distinctly, just the constant roar and occasional shriek of "kill them." All three expected to be executed. After the trial they were led among the crowd inside the auditorium and were spit upon.

Sister Tanguay shuddered at the remembrance, then she grinned and said "my communist guard was spit on too and hit by a rock when I ducked."

They were shackled throughout the trial and rode on a truck to and from the jail. On the return trip they were stoned. Two were hit on the face and bloodied.

They learned that every radio owner had been ordered to put his radio in an open window during the trial so that passers-by might hear. They heard part of the broadcast on their way back to jail.

Twist of Fate

The nuns expected that Sister Superior would be given heavier punishment since she had been in charge of the orphanage but Sister Gravel seemed to have been the victim of a particularly vicious twist of fate. A Chinese said he saw her strangle an orphan. The sisters said the man seemed sincere and they believe now that from a distance he saw Sister Gravel baptize one of the dying orphans.

The nuns painted a grim picture of the limits within which they had to work because of limited facilities and funds. They had to bury their own dead. They managed to hire a man to do it but he dug shallow graves and dogs sometimes dug up the bodies.

The orphanage then adopted a common practice in China. A big pit was excavated and lined with cement. The bodies were placed in it. Lime was used when essential.

"It was better than to have dogs dig them up," said one sister. For this effort they were accused of operating the "Canadian death pit."

TO TRY THEIR LUCK

Montreal, March 8—(CP)—Ivan Wagar, 21, of Napanee and Roy Gooden, 23, Montreal, will leave for England April 14 for a crack at the famous Isle of Man Tourist Trophy motorcycle race, it was learned here yesterday.

The first Canadians to compete in the race for some years, they sail on the liner Franconia from Halifax.

WEDDINGS

OLIVER—BALE

Colorful spring flowers decorated the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Bale, Campbellford, for the wedding of their daughter, Dorothy Elizabeth, and Bruce Edwin Oliver, son of Mrs. Oliver, of Belleville, and the late Dr. T. E. Oliver. The Rev. Dr. D. M. Smith officiated at the ceremony.

Mrs. C. C. Tatham played the wedding music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a gown of frosted white shadow lace and net over taffeta. The bodice was buttoned to a deep "V" neckline and the sleeves were long and fitted. The lace flare over the gathered net ballerina skirt, ended in a scalloped petal effect. Her shoulder veil was caught to a matching taffeta cap and she carried a bouquet of orchids and white carnations.

Miss Joan Bale, sister of the bride, was her only attendant, wearing a gown of powder blue taffeta. She carried a bouquet of orchids and yellow tulips.

Mr. Robert Stewart, of Belleville, nephew of the bridegroom, was groomsman.

Guests were present from Belleville, Oshawa, Toronto and Guelph.

EUCHRE PARTY

An afternoon euchre party was held by Milltown Birthday Club on Wednesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Little. Winners included: lone hand, Mrs. S. Fitzgerald, Mrs. Grace Merrie and Mrs. H. Bennett. Consolation, Mrs. Grace Asselstine. Refreshments served by the hostess, brought a most enjoyable evening to a close.

The Experts Say;-

Home-Making Has Become Penny-Watching Business

Editor's note: The Canadian Press asked heads of a number of leading women's organizations for their views on how women are meeting the increased cost of living in their own homes and what organizations are doing to combat rising prices. Their replies have been incorporated in a series of articles of which this is the first.

By KAY REX

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Home-making, 1952 style, has become a penny-watching business, most of it concerned with food budgeting. Leaders of Canada's largest women's organizations agree on that point.

The heads of several of these associations have offered a variety of suggestions about the cost of living, and how they are coping with it personally.

"We all know that we have to stretch meat by using it with a cheap filling such as bread crumbs," says Miss Anna Templeton of St. John's, Nfld., organization secretary of the Jubilee Guilds of Newfoundland and Labrador.

Mrs. Hugh Summers of Fonthill, Ont., has found a home freezer one of the most economical ways to preserve food. Mrs. Summers is president of the 55-year-old Federated Women's Institutes of Canada.

A volume of tips — including several family recipes — has been offered by the leaders of organizations which include the Dominion Women's Association Council of the United Church of Canada, the Hadassah Organization of Canada, Les Cercles Des Fermieres of Quebec, the Canadian Association of Consumers and the National Council of Women.

The National Council of Women five months ago launched a Canada-wide "thrift" campaign to get women to save intelligently. Together with other organizations, and particularly with the C. A. C. the council has distributed innumerable household tips and recipes aimed at economy.

Needs First

The council slogan of the drive is "Buy only what you need, not what you want." It has introduced recipes such as the following for quick beef stew:

One pound hamburger, or left-over meat put through the grinder; two tablespoons fat; two tablespoons flour; one cup tomato juice; one cup diced cooked vegetables; one cup vegetable water; salt and pepper to taste.

Brown the hamburger or left-over meat in hot fat. Add flour and brown slightly. Add cup of tomato juice, vegetables, seasoning and vegetable water. Cook, stirring constantly, for 10 minutes.

Rev. R. Rowley Gives Talk on Old Testament

"Seek ye the truth and the truth shall make you free". These were the words with which Reverend R. A. Rowley concluded an introductory outline of the Old Testament to the members of the Good Companion's Club of Tabernacle United Church on Tuesday evening. At future meetings Mr. Rowley is to conduct a series of short studies covering the background of the Bible.

This past Tuesday, Mr. Rowley took the Good Companions with him on a flight back through the centuries to somewhere around 1300 B.C. when Moses led the Israelites out of Egypt. In a thorough, yet quick resume, Mr. Rowley touched on the main events in the life of the Israelites from the time of Moses to the time of Jesus.

Kingdom Divided

There was Saul, the first king, appointed because the people demanded a king. There was the psalmist and king, David, who succeeded in uniting the people into a nation, but whose efforts were brought to nought by King Solomon, at whose death the country was divided once again, the northern part to be later captured by Assyria and the southern part by Babylonia.

During these times many great prophets arose, who had a small following but to whom most of the people refused to listen. Mr. Rowley stressed the fact that these prophets spoke to their day and generation. They were not speaking for the many years to come but, because they spoke of timeless truths, they speak to this day and generation also. Around 165 B.C. the Romans took the country and it was during the reign of the Romans that the Prophet of Nazareth appeared upon the scene, opposed to and yet in line with the Testament as it had grown up during the prevailing period.

In closing, Mr. Rowley asked the members to come to these studies with their minds void of any preconceived ideas.

Films Shown

President Lew Andrews conducted the business session, after which Wes Mifflin showed two excellent films, even if they did remind one rather forcibly "that the weather outside was snowing". The first film showed Canadian skiers enjoying the snow-packed hills of this beautiful country. The second film dealt with the construction of a low-cost house which can be erected in a matter of a few hours — that is if one happens to reside at the North Pole. The Eskimo has to be given credit for his ingenuity in building his igloo with just his hands and a sharp knife to cut the blocks of snow, and it must be said the housekeeping is very simple. When the house becomes dirty you just move out and build a new one.

Refreshments, served by the refreshment committee concluded the evening.

PLENTY OF SNOW IN TOKYO

Tokyo, March 8—(AP)—This is supposed to be the month of plum blossoms but Tokyo today was digging itself out from under nearly seven inches of snow. The unusual snowfall snarled traffic, caused accidents and brought on power failures.

Club Activities

BRIDGE STREET UNITED CHURCH J.E.A.

Stormy weather was responsible for a smaller gathering at Bridge Street United Church on Tuesday evening when the Jubilee Evening Auxiliary met for their March meeting.

At six o'clock a splendid supper was served to over 40 members and guests by Mrs. G. E. Harron's group.

Miss Campbell welcomed the newcomers and conducted the routine business, following which two minutes silence was observed in memory of the late King, George VI.

$46 Per Person For Liquor

Miss Ethel Horton, press secretary for Belleville Presbyterial, was an honored guest and brought greetings. Mrs. Calnan gave a short temperance report and stated that Ontario citizens averaged $46 each per year for liquor. The church is the only home for fighting this evil situation.

Miss Mary Thain and her group were in charge of the program. Miss Thain led in an interesting devotional based on the prophets of old as they warned their people of evil and called them to return to God.

A flying trip across Canada was led by Miss Thain, Miss Norma Arkels and Miss Marion Nichol. Beginning at Halifax, they told of a former wealthy church now used as a mission with the Reverend Herman Campbell and two workers in charge.

All incoming immigrants are met and helped. In Toronto the Fred Victor Mission, under the Reverend Honeysett labors for the down-and-out and the underprivileged.

They also told of a now well-known violinist who received his start there. Montreal has a similar work.

In Winnipeg a good work is done on the outskirts of the city where regular churches are not yet established.

In Vancouver the United Church work is in charge of Dr. Redmond.

The United Church needs over $3 million next year for extension work. Of this amount, over $2 million will be needed from local campaigns for work at home in Canada.

SISTERS ALL

By Jean Love Galloway

Have you tried those new coffee bags yet. They come in sealed glass jars and resemble individual tea bags. Once tried, most women will want one jar always on hand in her refrigerator for those times when only one cup of coffee is needed in a hurry - - - The bags will also help women over the times when they would far rather do without coffee than go through the motions of washing the percolator again.

Why, oh why, weren't coffee bags buy-able before now? They seem to produce a fresher flavored coffee than the instant brands. The process is a "steeping one, like tea, rather than a heating or boiling method. They are not expensive.

Best way to make coffee-bag-coffee, is to pour hot water into a cup to heat the cup. Empty it out. Drop one bag into the heated cup. Pour frantically boiling water over it right up to the brim. Let stand with a little nudging of the spoon for three to five minutes. Remove the bag and drink.

If you don't fill the cup brim full of water, the liquid displaced when removing the bag is large enough quantity that you may be left with only half a cup of coffee.

Looks as if this is the answer to better restaurant coffee and better church supper coffee. It costs about 3½ cents a cup. We think it tastes just like the coffee served in the little silver pots on the train dining cars.

Strawberries in March

Something new in desserts are the fresh frozen boxed berries from the south now in a number of the stores. These berries are frozen just as picked right in the wooden pint boxes. They can be kept in the refrigerator for a few days in the cold section, or for longer in the freezing box.

At 35 cents a box, they make delicious shortcake or may be served with their hulls and individually dipped in sugar as a special treat.

Hot Tea

So often when you are passed a cup of tea, it is not as hot as you would like it. There are several reasons for this. First, the cup itself may not have been heated. Then, the tea may have been transferred from a porcelain pot to a silver one which had not been pre-heated with boiling water.

Another reason tea cools quickly is because the cream used is ice cold from the refrigerator. Much hotter tea will result if the cream is put into the serving pitcher and kept at room temperature for two or three hours before being served.

APPROVE MEASURE

Albany, N. Y., March 8—(AP)—Commercial use of the name "United Nations" without permission of the world organization's secretary-general would be prohibited under a measure now before the state assembly. The state senate approved the measure yesterday. It would not apply to a corporate or trade name already in use. The U. N. had objected to the use of its name by a barbershop near the agency's headquarters in New York City.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Her future—with him or without him

One of the greatest safeguards against trouble is the ability to make prompt decisions when confronted with any kind of problem. For a person to dilly-dally spinelessly along with an unsatisfactory situation that is rapidly leading nowhere takes disastrous toll of emotions and nerves, with the further hazard of suddenly finding himself enmeshed in a psychological net from which he sees no escape.

Here's one young woman of 22 whose inability to take a decisive step is gradually weaving around her just such a net. She writes:

"I was married when I was 16, and have three children. My marriage was a very unhappy one, and lasted only six years. My husband wasn't the kind of man who was willing to work, or who tried to make a go of marriage. In fact, ours was his second marriage, his first having also ended in failure. We have now been separated for nine months. He doesn't care what becomes of his children, just as long as he has no responsibility about them. Of course he doesn't support us, so I work.

"I have now met someone I have really come to love. He is 19 years older than I am, but does not look his age. The death of his father left him a great deal of family responsibility at an early age, and the problem is, that now that most of the family is grown up and on their own, he says he doesn't want to get married or be tied down to anyone ever again.

"I have been dating him for four months, three or four times every week. He tells me he does not go out with anyone else, and I don't go out with anyone else, either. But from the looks of things, I have no future with him or without him. He never tells me how he feels about me, although I know he likes me. He knows I love him, but it doesn't seem to do me any good. I am so wrapped up in him that my children are suffering from it.

"Should I insist that we come to some understanding, or should I just forget about the whole thing? I know I'll never be happy if I give him up. Maybe if I were free from my husband, things would be different."

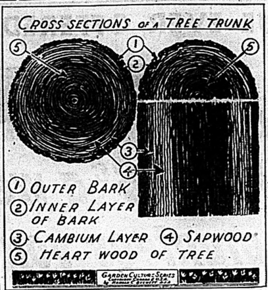
Take Legal Steps

Whether or not freedom from her husband would have any effect on her relationship with this man is something no one could possibly predict. But entirely aside from this specific problem, it seems to me that if she has made up her mind that she is never going to live with her husband again, she should immediately take the necessary legal steps to put an end to her marriage. Either that, or else stop going out with this or any other man three and four times a week.

Any married woman who is separated but not divorced from her husband, and who has such a close relationship as this with some other man, is running the risk of serious trouble. It might be her husband who would make trouble for her. It might be that her association with the man would eventually lead to sexual intimacy, as a result of which she might one dreadful day find herself pregnant. Would there be time, then, to get the divorce before the crisis became public knowledge? And even though her friendship with the man were completely innocent, surely she must be aware that any such association of a married woman with a man not her husband would be under suspicion, and that her reputation as a woman and a mother would suffer greatly as a result.

As for the particular man in question, the situation urgently calls for the fast exercise of that all-important quality of decision. Either she must stop dating him and put him out of her life, or she must make up her mind to accept the kind of withdrawn companionship which is all he offers her and put up with her disappointment and longing as best she may. Perhaps if she were to show less readiness to go along with his terms by reducing the dates to a minimum and going out with other men friends, it might break the deadlock at which they seem to have arrived. Certainly as long as she appears satisfied with the present arrangement, he is not going to see any reason to change it.

But no progress of any kind can take place unless and until she brings decision into play. Decision about her present marriage, and then decisive action on the decision.



TREE CROSS SECTIONS

This diagram illustrates the interesting structure of trees, and the various portions of the log are designated. Each year adds a new ring which is made up of a light and dark line. The light line is usually about three times the width of the dark line and represents rapid spring growth. The dark line indicates slower growth from mid-summer to fall.

Food for Thought

Readers' Saturday Column

QUESTION:

I enjoy your column and read it every day. Would you please tell me what makes my dumplings heavy. Also have you a good recipe? Do you have a recipe for a French dish "Ragout"?—Mrs. J. C. M.

ANSWER:

I can only guess why your dumplings are soggy. Two causes of sogginess are adding shortening to the dumpling dough, and cooking the dumplings on top of stew which does not contain enough meat and vegetables to hold them up. Following is my

NEVER-FAIL DUMPLINGS

(You cannot change this recipe without affecting the lightness of the dumplings.) Measure 2 cups unsifted but stirred flour into sifter. Add 5 level teaspoons fresh baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt and sift into bowl. Stir in 7-8 cup milk quickly. You may need the whole cup of milk—if dough seems overstiff add 2 tablespoons milk which will bring it up to 1 cup in all. Work quickly. Drop from tablespoon into boiling stew—being sure there is solid matter enough to keep the dumpling up. Cover and let boil from 12 to 15 minutes—never lifting the lid until 12 minutes have passed. Then try one dumpling by pulling it apart at centre with 2 forks. If it is not cooked a centre leave them 3 more minutes. Serve dumplings as soon as you can, as they become soggy on standing.

"Ragout" is the French word for stew. French cooks add less liquid than we do to stew and it is a richer dish.

RAGOUT OF BEEF

Two pounds round or sirloin steak, 1-2 cup flour, 1 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper, 2 tablespoons fat, 1 tablespoon flour, 1 each diced carrot and onion, 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce. Cut meat into small cubes. Sprinkle with half of the salt and pepper and roll in flour. Melt fat and brown meat in it. Stir in 1 tablespoon flour. Add 1 cup boiling water (or tomato juice), bring to boil stirring until it is thick. Add remaining ingredients, cover and simmer or bake at low temperature until meat is tender.

RAGOUT OF VEAL

Two lbs. sliced shoulder veal, 1 tablespoon fat, 3 finely chopped onions, 1 cup tomatoes, 2 diced carrots, 2 tablespoons chopped parsley, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper; (3 sliced tomatoes would be added when they are in season). Melt fat, add onions and brown them. Wash the veal and add it wet, cut up or not just as you wish. Add all other ingredients, cover and simmer for 2 hours or bake at 275 deg. Fahr. If fresh tomatoes are used add with onions.

QUESTION:

You had a "Pineapple Upside Down Cake" recipe in your column once. I wish you would put it in again. . . .mine are not as good as that one.—Mrs. H. M.

ANSWER:

I hope this is the one:

PINEAPPLE UPSIDE DOWN CAKE

One and three-quarter cups crushed pineapple with some juice included, 2 cups sugar, 1-2 cup shortening, 2 beaten eggs, 2 1-4 cups sifted flour, 3-4 teaspoon salt, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 2-3 cup milk, 1 teaspoon vanilla. Mix 1 cup of the sugar with the pineapple and pour into buttered, waxed paper-lined cake pan about 9x9x2 inches. Cream the shortening until light then cream in the remaining 1 cup sugar. Beat in beaten eggs. Sift dry ingredients and add them in thirds alternately with the milk and vanilla, beating smooth after each addition. Spread batter over fruit. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 50 or 60 minutes. Turn out on plate, upside down, to serve. This is best warm with a little pouring cream.

QUESTION:

I have enjoyed reading your column a great deal. I wonder if you could help me out. . . a while ago while visiting we had breakfast at a Dutch restaurant. They have a specialty of a Dutch cake, the name of which I do not remember. It contained a lemon flavor and raisins. We found it very delicious and would like to know if you have a recipe similar.

Following is a recipe for a Danish sandwich spread "Liver Posteg": Grind five times 1-2 lb. beef or pork liver, 1-2 lb. very fat pork and 1 onion. Add 1 egg, 1 cup rich milk, 1 tablespoon flour and salt and pepper to taste. Put in a loaf pan, bake in water bath for 1 hour in slow oven. It stiffens on cooking and keeps for 1 or 2 weeks.—Mary R.

ANSWER:

I have one recipe that might answer your description. It is called and it is a well-known national sweet made famous by a firm in Deventer.

BREAD AND BUTTER CAKE

One pound of white or wholemeal flour, 1-2 lb, syrup—this may be cane or light corn syrup—7 tablespoons brown sugar, 1-2 pint milk, 1 tablespoon grated lemon rind (or anise seed), 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1-2 teaspoon nutmeg, 1 teaspoon ginger (optional), 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1-2 to 1 cup plumped raisins. Sift all dry ingredients into bowl. Mix the syrup and milk, and add gradually to the dry ingredients working them into a firm dough. Work quickly. Stir in the rind and raisins. Press into well-greased loaf pan and bake 1 1-4 hours at 350 deg. Fahr. This is best on the second day as it should be stored in air-proof container for 24 hours to soften and ripen. It is similar to a tea-biscuit mixture, but sweet and rich. If readers know of another Dutch Cake to which Mary R. could be referring I would be grateful to receive it.

Wellington on the Lake

WINTER IN WELLINGTON

Winter now is monarch here
In this lakeside town,
Leafless trees bow low in fear
As the snow drifts down;
Winter birds fly to and fro
Seeking crumbs to eat,
Greeted by the tempest's blow
And the stinging sleet.

But the natives love the snow
Of the winter time,
On their skates they love to go
As to music's chime;
For the social centre here
Is the skating rink,
Hockey, game for young and old,
Older than you think!
—Helen B. Anderson.

The large attendance at the hockey games reveal a keen interest in this popular winter sport. Every night Maple Ave. is bright with the lights of cars, and sounds of joy and mirth are heard during the evening. Many very small children enjoy skating.

Mr. Warden Sanders, Toronto, spent a few days with friends in Wellington.

Mrs. Alberta Smith enjoyed a recent weekend with friends in Bloomfield.

Miss Catharine Tait, who is teaching at St. David's, Ontario, was a recent guest with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Tait.

Mrs. Harry Jolley, who has been ill at her home here, is now on the road to recovery. Her granddaughter, Mrs. Putnam of Peterborough, who spent a week with Mrs. Jolley, has returned to her home.

Mr. Ernest Hubbs, for some time an esteemed resident of Hillier, and recently of Wellington, passed away in Picton hospital following a brief illness. The deceased was the son of the late Philip Hubbs and his wife Prudence Nethery. His parents and a sister, Miss M. B. Hubbs, Reg. N., predeceased him.

The funeral service was held at the Ainsworth Funeral Home with Rev. C. P. Heaven in charge. The remains were placed in Wellington vault, the bearers being W. A. Davern, Lancelot Davern, Lance Nethery, Fred Morton, King Terry and Ralph Dorland.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Wiltse have returned home after a month's holiday in Florida.

Mrs. W. H. Teskey and Mr. W. Wiggins were weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. Baker, Oshawa.

A cable from Mrs. Harry Burley, who sailed from New York on the Queen Mary, tells of her safe arrival in England after a pleasant voyage.

THE PASSING SEASONS

How swift the passing seasons
Of the revolving year!
Softly spring and summer
Bring their joy and cheer;
Then comes radiant autumn
With its crimson train,
And the harvest bounty
Of rich fruit and grain.

But ruthless winter follows
With keen frost and snow,
Dealing death and darkness
To all the flowers that grow;
Winter streams are voiceless,
Their silver songs are still,
And the cedars shiver
On every wooded hill.

Human life has seasons
Like the revolving year.
Childhood is the springtime,
Youth, life's summer dear;
Then after youthful rapture
Comes manhood's autumn life,
Till age, like withered winter
Ends life and earthly strife.

Thus swiftly pass the seasons
Of manhood's life on earth,
And soon are all forgotten
His failures and his worth;
That we might learn the value
Of time, in youth's brief day,
And lay in store the treasures
That ne'er shall pass away.
—Helen B. Anderson.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Formal wedding invitations now mailed four weeks before wedding date

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I understand that I should mail out my formal wedding invitations three weeks before the date of the wedding. True?—Dolores M.

This used to be true. But nowadays the formal invitations for a large, formal wedding are mailed four weeks before the wedding date. This is particularly practical in the months most popular for weddings. . . allows time for the hosts of the wedding to make all plans for the reception, and allows time for the guests to schedule their dates!

Eight ushers—No senior bridesmaids

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please tell me quite frankly what you think of the plans I am considering concerning my attendants? The groom is, of course, to have a best man: for the large formal church wedding we are planning, we will need at least six ushers, and my fiance really wants eight ushers. I would like to have my best friend for my maid of honor, and my only sisters, twins two years younger than I, as junior bridesmaids. No other bridesmaids.—Therese C.

As far as the processional and recessional are concerned, this is quite all right. Processional: the eight ushers, in pairs, the shortest leading; the two junior bridesmaids, together; maid of honor, alone; last, you and your father. Recessional: bride and groom; maid of honor, either alone or with the best man; the two junior bridesmaids, together; last, the ushers, in pairs, the tallest last. However, it will not be easy to plan any pre-wedding parties where the attendants are featured; or to plan the special bridal table, if there is to be one.

The bridal shower—given by whom?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please settle this question for us. "A" insists that it is not only correct for a girl's mother-in-law-to-be to give her a bridal shower, but that in fact she should give her a shower. "B" says this point of view is wrong: that no member of the family of either the bride or the groom should give a bridal shower, that it should be given only by the girl's friends. Who is right?—M. H.

"B" is right about this. When the mother (or sister) of the bride, or the mother (or sister) of the groom considers giving a bridal shower, she should really stop to think what impression this will make. A shower given under these member-of-the-family auspices looks so obviously like a "planned promotion for gifts"—and of course this is exactly what it is!

And so often, too, the fact that the mother of the bride or the mother of the groom decides to take over the situation and give a shower, acknowledges the fact that the bride hasn't any friend or group of friends who will take the trouble to plan a shower for her. So mother steps in and hopes her plan to give the shower will be accepted as "correct".

"FAMILY BUDGET" HOSPITAL PLAN

28c A WEEK BUYS A LOT OF SECURITY FOR THEM protects them against the hardships that so often accompany unforeseen sickness or injury to the breadwinner.

Here's great news for the average-income family! A low-budget Hospital Plan that provides a comfortable cushion of security against the heavy expenses that go with illness or injury to the breadwinner, yet costs only 28c a week . . . JUST A LITTLE MORE THAN A DOLLAR A MONTH! This new Continental plan is amazingly simple and free from red tape. Premium payments may be made quarterly, semi-annually, or annually . . . any way that's convenient for you. When you are hospitalized, $28.00 a week in hard cash is paid DIRECT TO YOU . . . not to the hospital. You may use the money to pay hospital bills, doctor's bills, household expenses . . . any way you choose. In addition, EXTRA money is provided specifically to help cover miscellaneous hospital expenses—such as X-rays, medicines, etc.

This is the really low-cost plan that thousands of Canadians have asked for and waited for . . . now available through the company with the largest accident and sickness volume in Canada. Get complete details without delay by mailing the coupon below; or writing on a penny postcard to the address shown in the coupon.

(ENROLLMENT UP TO AGE 70.

A PROTESTANT "FREIZEIT"

Recently I had the opportunity of attending a student Freizeit for the first time and came away with the feeling that every one of those present has profited greatly from it. This Freizeit is a weekend spent in some quiet place where the students can get together, know each other better, and discuss several problems which concern not only the Protestant church but also the world at large. This year we spent two and one half days in Wilgartswiesen, a small village in the Palatinate hills. A large convalescent home, which at that time was void of patients, was made available to us, which was very much appreciated by all since we had the best of facilities and excellent meals, as well as lovely surroundings.

We had to get up at 5.30 in order to catch the train but twenty of us managed to make it, including the local minister, who led the discussions and acted as the leader. After a trip of almost two hours we arrived and sat down immediately to a very welcome breakfast. This was followed by a climb of one of the steep hills in the vicinity from which we had a wonderful view of the whole valley and looked down on the peaceful village below us. Since there was an abundance of snow, we participated in our first snowball fight this winter. I must admit that I was as active as anyone, for there is absolutely no snow in Germersheim, and seeing so much for the first time made me a bit homesick, with the result that I put my hands on as much of it as possible. Needless to say it sharpened our appetites to such an extent that the noon meal was just as welcome as the breakfast had been.

First Discussion

After dinner we rested for a while then settled down for the first discussion period. It concerned Martin Niemoeller, whose name is well known throughout the whole world as the U-boat commander in the First World War who became later a Protestant minister. He defied the Nazis with the result he was arrested, and locked up for the duration of the war. After the armistice he was released and since then has played a leading role in the evangelical church of East Germany. The discussion we had concerned his recent trip to Moscow and the reason behind it. It seems that over a year ago he was given the permission to make the trip but just recently did he get around to it. It was for the express purpose of seeing what he could do for the German prisoners of war still held in Russia, and he spent all his time there doing this. His daughter accompanied him to act as translator, and he was allowed to go where he wanted. He found the prisoners rather homesick and not living in too good conditions. Since he is rather impetuous at times, he got the idea that it would be better to stay in Russia and look after the prisoners, but this he was unable to do. At the same time he was able to visit a church service there and found it quite well attended. Whether this attendance was compulsory or not, he could not say, but he had the feeling that people came of their own free will.

Needless to say his visit kicked up a storm all over Germany, where the general feeling was that this was an example of direct collaboration with the Russians. After studying his past, however, and the facts of the case, we could not find any real foundation for this charge.

Choir Formed

The following day which was Sunday we formed the choir for the church service and sang two hymns which we had practiced the night before. As is the case in all churches here we sat up in the gallery and sang from there. One thing that was different, however, was that the congregation was all divided. The children sat in the front, girls to the left and boys to the right. Behind to the left sat the women and to the right the men. This was the first time that I had ever seen such an arrangement, and after asking my friends about it I learned that it was practiced in only very few churches.

After the service was over we all walked two kilometers to the next village to see the new electric organ which had been installed there. Of course everyone stared out the window at us since in these isolated towns any strangers immediately arouse wasn't long until all the kids in wasn't' long until all the kids in town had ganged up on us with snowballs and a pitched-battle was raging. The way they went about it I don't think they had had so much fun all winter. Anyway, the barrage kept up until we left the town limits.

The entire afternoon was spent in the discussion of the Christian in every-day life, the conversation being allowed to take more or less its own course, so that we were able to cover a multitude of topics before the bell rang for supper. After a short walk in the evening we spent the rest of the time in light entertainment.

The next morning we had a very short meeting, packed, threw our last snowball, and after thanking them all for the wonderful weekend we marched off to the station, stopping every now and then to take pictures. Judging from the amount of singing that went on in the train on the trip back, everyone was happy, for no matter which way one looked at it, it was a weekend well spent.

FRANKFORD

Frankford — Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Salmers of Toronto, visited relatives in Frankford on Wednesday. Jerry has completed his radio course in Toronto, and is making plans for his work in that field.

Mrs. Ella Walt, Mrs. Robert Maxwell of Stockdale, accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bryant and children on a trip to Port Rowan to visit Mrs. Bates and Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Oberholtzer for a few days. While there Mr. and Mrs. Bryant were guests of honor at a pre-anniversary dinner. The table was centered with a beautifully decorated anniversary cake. The same evening Mr. and Mrs. John Grunerud entertained the guests at a television party.

Mr. Bert Rowe has accepted the position of caretaker of the Frankford United Church and hall.

Frankford Lions Club held their bi-monthly meeting Wednesday night in the Community Hall. Guest speaker for the evening was Dr. John Renton, dentist from Trenton. Dr. Renton spoke on the subject of "Alcoholics Anonymous." His talk was of such interest and effect, that for over an hour, one could have heard a pin drop throughout the banquet room.

He was thanked by Lion Ray Scott and heartily applauded by the members.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Stojan of Alberta are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lenoir in Stockdale.

DESERONTO

Hobby Club Holds Meeting

Deseronto — The Hobby Club held their regular meeting at the home of Mrs. N. Thomas. Despite the stormy night, a goodly number of hobby enthusiasts, undaunted by sleet, snow or rain, were present and work on all propects went along rapidly and joyfully.

New Hat Models

New models for hats were displayed and discussed and it wouldn't be surprising if next season's newest and most original model appears at the "Fair."

Mrs. D. F. Weber was present and brought along her "roomy" basket to receive donations for her "White Elephant" booth. While excuses for forgetfulness were accepted this week, woe betide the "forgetters" hereafter. Everyone is asked to bring or send their "White Elephants" at any time and they will be greatly appreciated.

Next week's meeting will be at the home of Mrs. H. Bender.

The hostess, assisted by Mrs. Weber, Mrs. R. H. Jackson and Mrs. D. Dawson, served refreshments.

Benares, City of Temples

By Ferne Gerrie

The following descriptive trip to Benares was written by Miss Ferne Gerrie, formerly of this city, from the Mission bungalow at Akola, Berar, M.P., India, where she is a missionary secretary, under the Christian and Missionary Alliance. In this short account, a most vivid picture is had from one who saw these things first hand.

* * *

"Are you going on a pilgrimage?" said the conductor as he scrutinized our tickets which were made out for Benares, the city of temples. "No, we are Christians," I said, "and we are just going on a visit to Benares." "Oh, you are the people who try to convert Hindus to Christianity?" he said. "No, we can't convert anyone, we simply point them to the Lord Jesus Christ who alone can convert a soul," I answered. Thus began a series of conversations as we journeyed to this idolatrous city - - - the home and birthplace of Hinduism.

Scores of Holy Men

As we neared the city, we were astounded at the scores of sadhus or holy men making their way to Benares. They were always dressed in a sand colored dhoter and carried a stick in their right hand. This sand color signified renunciation to the world, and the stick represented the truth as found in Hinduism. Benares to the Hindu is the same as Jerusalem to the Jew, or Mecca to the Mohammedan. It is the city of salvation, and every devout Hindu strives to make at least one trip to that city in his lifetime, thus assuring himself of salvation without having to enter into another incarnation in the next life.

In Benares the great Ganges river attracts millions of Hindus. It is considered a sacred river and by dipping in that river you have obtained salvation, so the Hindu believes. As we walked along the river bank where there were numerous ghats, devout worshippers could be seen plunging in the river, drinking the dirty water, and finally bowing down and worshipping it. Under umbrellas or parasols sat numerous "sadhus" reading their scriptures and performing their vows. Boats of all sizes were drifting along the river and holy men could be seen teaching the eager students who had travelled great distances to sit at their feet. Little shrines and large temples lined the river and hundreds were running into the temple to carry a bit of holy water from the Ganges and a few flower petals to offer to the goddess.

Burning Ghats

We hired a small boat and rowed along the river to obtain a better view. Suddenly our attention was drawn to the "burning ghats." We rowed closer and saw that there were two corpses brought for burial. The eldest son was in charge. The corpse of probably his father was tied to four bamboo poles and over it laid cowdung cakes. As soon as he arrived at the river with the corpse he soaked it in the Ganges and laid it on the bank until he built the large funeral pyre. As soon as the fire was burning well the corpse was laid on the pyre and the son proceeded to drive out the evil spirit that caused the death, by beating the skull of the corpse until it cracked with a great noise. Then they believed that the evil spirit had departed. As soon as the body was burned the ashes were thrown upon the Ganges and the ceremony was over. What a picture of utter despair! Yet so sincerely do they believe in this ceremony, that wealthy Hindus from all over the country build a home in Benares where they can come to die, and be offered up to the Ganges River.

Numerous Shrines

All along the streets are numerous shrines and temples where the people can be seen early each morning, and again in the evening, doing "puja" to their idols. Cows and camels lie on the streets and sidewalks, so that pedestrians have to walk around them in order to avoid any accidents.

The Golden Temple is perhaps one of the most widely known temples in all Hinduism. From far and near worshippers come to pay their vows to the goddess. We entered this temple, and were never so conscious of the power of the Enemy. It was as if all hell were let loose. The noise and din of the heathenish music, the shouting of the worshippers, and the clanging bells were deafening. Cows were wandering in freely to the temple and the worshippers would fondle the cow as they came out, and would believe they had obtained great merit. In order to attain greater merit the beggars sat in scores outside the temple awaiting the generous gifts of food and money.

Hindu "Asharams"

Throughout the city are Hindu "asharams" which are places for Hindu worshippers or sadhus to come and life free of charge and for any length of time while they are worshipping in the city. In every "asharam" was a cow tied up in the best room. However, right in the very heart of Benares we met an Indian Christian man who had a Christian "asharam" where many sadhus had come. While visiting in the city they heard the Gospel and many have gone away from that wicked city with true salvation as found in the Lord Jesus Christ. What a thrill to see a light shining for the Lord Jesus in the midst af such darkness! In a city of 500,000 people there is very little Christian work being done, and so you can see what a field of service this presents. Do pray for that man as he seeks to win the orthodox Hindus and sadhus to the Lord Jesus and teach them the Word of God.

Wholly Given to Idolatry

As I looked at that city which was wholly given up to idolatry and Satan, I felt something of the compassion that Paul experienced as he viewed Athens, for the Word says, "his spirit was stirred in him, when he saw the city wholly given to idolatry." Acts 17:16. I trust that you will appreciate more than ever what you have been saved from as you read this letter, and that you will be driven to your knees in prayer for this country of India. The Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ is the only answer to heathenism, for "it is the power of God unto salvation to all that believe."

Senior Hawks Drop First Game Of Final Series To Peterborough 'Petes' 8-2

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

LONG LONG AGO!

The ghosts of the Coles, Churches, Myatts, Haddens, Rorkes, MacDonalds and Thompsons hovered in the smoky atmosphere at Albert Hares hockey igloo in Picton the other night.

It was our first visit to that venerable building with its creaking cornices, wobbly floors and hoary rafters since we wore the hockey paraphernalia of the old Wellington "Red and Black".

We heard strange names. Saw strange faces. Nostalgia filmed the reportorial mind and we leaped the wide chasm of memory to the boisterous rollicking days of the County League when Tuesday and Thursday nights were hockey nights in Prince Edward. The days when Wellington, Bloomfield, Milford, Demorestville, West Lake, and other squads from the "sticks" matched their puck calisthenics against those of such "metropolitan menaces" as Picton's Imperial Oil, Rogers Batteryless, Roly Rorke's Blackshirts, Tuxis Boys and other squads.

The igloo, which creaked at the joints, even in those days, almost "bust" at the seams when town and county teams clashed. Every hockey night was a sell-out. People waited in line, many were disappointed. The boxes, the mezzanine, the "gods" bulged with howling, cheering fans. They came from all parts of the county regardless of weather. Snow-filled roads proved no barrier. Horse-drawn sleighs filled with fans picked their way through drifted highways and sideroads. On more than one occasion, loyal Wellington fans, their sleighs stuck hopelessly in the drifts a few miles outside of Picton, trudged bravely through zero weather to cheer the "Iron Dukes". From Milford, Waupoos, Demorestville, Bloomfield, Cressy, Crofton and as far away as Mountain View came these fans to view the struggles.

It was not National League Hockey, by any stretch of the imagination, nor did the boys of those days wear equipment worth $200. Before the league settled down to proper organization, the puck-chasing gladiators wore nondescript outfits. Sweaters of all hues covered the only body protection, a suit of "longies". No bulging shoulders bespeaking heavy pods were evident. There wasn't a department store catalogue within ten miles of the town, officially that is, except on hockey nights when all were present secreted beneath the gaudy stockings of the players in a shin-pad role. A few of the old-timers of those days, whose bald pates wore the sheen of a cue-ball, donned toques, whether from pride or wisdom, we do not know.

* * *

But it was slam-bang, rip-roaring hockey. None of this glorified basketball on ice that is evident today. Nor was it powder-puff style. There were fights and plenty of 'em. And for every spot of fisticuffing on the ice, you could count on at least three among the spectators. They took their hockey seriously in those days and many a leaf of financial lettuce, not to mention a cord of wood or two, the odd Dobbin, changed hands. On one occasion the ownership of a farm hung on a goal, but the next morning all was hunkey-dorey.

Yep, those were the days of the roaring thirties. Rivalry was keen, but not bitter, nor was it carried to extremes. True, the gore of Picton, Bloomfield, Wellington, Milford and other teams reddened the ice at times, but nobody thought anything of it. The boys had plenty to spare.

Good fellows all, were the pucksters of those days. We recall the Haddon brothers; the Cole brothers; the Myatt boys; the Noble brothers, although Willie was never a Morenz; the towering defence of Ron Church and Peter Cole; the Welsh brothers, "Peckin and Jack"; the Reids, MacDonalds, the Dainards and the Thompsons, the Abbots, Gibsons, Cy Welsh, Art Storms, Bill Dainard, who used to light a gasper, brace himself, and heave an incoming forward into the balcony with a bodycheck that would rock a steer; Davy Young, who always admitted he was the best goalkeeper in the league, the late Roly Rorke, the fiery Platfords and Phillips, the Crofts, the Hudgins, Bart Reid, Bert Bolton, a man mountain if ever there was one, (he bodychecked us one night and when we came to we found ourselves nearing Consecon atop a Trenton-bound bus), "Shadow" Reid of Wellington, whose weakness was blondes.

Then there were the Hare "kids". Occasionally we bounced 'em off our knee, but they looked different the other night. Margaret is now an attractive gal of some ??? years while sister Doris is a comely young matron with a handsome husband. Mr. McLaughlin in the offing. Albert, the old maestro himself looked a trifle older but the good lady Mrs. Hare who still dispenses smiles with the hot dogs was her same youngish self.

Winners Hard-Rock Defence Thwarts Hawks Offensive; Second Game Here Monday

Peterborough, Ont. March 8 — The Petes flew to an 8-2 victory over Belleville Hawks here last night before a fair sized crowd to open their best of seven OHA senior B group semi-final series. They did it with a 4-1 first period splurge and a strong finish for three unanswered goals after a 1-1 middle chapter. Play was very fast throughout though scrambly in spots, and quite clean, the winners drawing two of the three penalties passed out.

Ron Horton was lost to the homesters early in the second frame when he suffered torn knee ligaments in a collision along the boards. Referees Jim Crombie and Maurice Walsh handled the game in flawless fashion. The latter took a dizzy spell and held play up several minutes in the first period, but was okay the rest of the route in fast travelling.

Collins Gets Two

Ted Collins counted two goals for the winners, with singles going to Drake Jopling, Curly Mason, Junior West, Arn Dugan, George Steele and Gus Leonard. Two assists each were earned by Fred Garvey and Dugan, as Jopling, Red Robinson, Chum Fryia and West each had one. Peter Jones and Vern Goyer were the Quinte snipers, the latter, Keith MacDonald Red Doran and Ernie Trumble having an assist apiece. Ray Harding sparkled in goal for the Petes, and had a solid defence in front of him. Lefort also kicked out a flock of hard drives.

Reeves went off early for interference and it cost a goal, Jopling banging one home in close in a scramble. Later, Mason slapped in a passout on nice passing right inside by West and Dugan. Barrett was robbed as Hawks fought back, but Petes had a margin on play in fast stepping. Gus Leonard made it 3-0 when he darted in suddenly to pick up a slow forward pass by Fryia at close range and blast it home. Steele stickhandled in close smartly on a solo thrust and blazed a screened shot through defence to make it 4-0, but Jones got that back from Trumble and Doran from the side.

Play was speedy and pretty even through the middle chukker, each goalie in turn having to hop to halt hot rubber on quick passing thrusts It was clean all the way. Horton was hurt accidentally early and was helped off. A dash by Gus Leonard and Fryia nearly paid off, and then Collins counted on a swell passing play at close range with Garvey. Goyer evened that up shortly in close in a scramble with Moher and MacDonald helping. It was hot and even and, with Wade off for interference, Hawks tried hard to capitalize but were checked closely. West nearly counted one on a breakaway.

They kept the pace up pretty well through the third stanza, though close checking made for some shinny at times. Collins got in a good try and then Dugan backhanded Jopling's forward pass into the hemp from 12 feet out. Steele served a charging penalty and Petes looked stronger as they bored in frequently the rest of the way. West combined nicely with Dugan with but one man to beat to tally a nifty marker, and Collins finished it up shortly from Garvey and Robinson at close range.

Paddy Young Whips Durando; Ready for 'Sugar'

By MURRAY ROSE

New York, March 8—(AP)—Paddy Young, a decisive winner over hard-hitting Ernie Durando, is ready and eager to take on Ray Robinson in a title bout May 16 if the busy Harlem sugar man still has the middleweight crown by then.

The 23-year-old Young won the right to meet Ray in Madison Square Garden by his second triumph over the stocky Durando last night.

But before Young can step into the ring with the 160-pound king, he'll have to wait and see how Robinson fares in his title fights with Carl (Bobo) Olson in San Francisco next Thursday and with Rocky Graziano in Chicago April 16.

In addition to all these middleweight scraps, Robinson may box light heavyweight Joey Maxim for the 175-pound diadem in New York this summer. Jim Norris, president of the International Boxing Club, said terms have almost been closed for the show, but that it has not yet been signed.

"It's all up to Ray," said Norris. "If he wants the Maxim fight, it's his. Maxim is willing."

In the first round of Young's fight with Durando, it appeared that the blond New Yorker's chances of a title fight were hopeless.

Durando, a powerful hitter with his right, rocked Paddy four times with his pet punch and it looked like curtains. But Paddy shook off the affects of the wallop and gave his crude rival a good going over through most of the fight.

He stabbed his swarthy foe with left jabs, belted him with left hooks and fight swings to the head and body and took most of the steam out of him. The officials all voted for Young.

Hawks Ready For Vics Tonight

A capacity house should greet coach "Red" Doran's dashing junior Hawks in Memorial Arena tonight when they face the Kingston Vics in the third game of their best-of-seven junior "B" group finals series.

The Hawks emerged from the second battle in Kingston Thursday night with but a few scars showing and they are in fine fettle for tonight's tilt. Should they win they will have a strangehold on the group title which takes with it the Eastern Ontario championship.

The Vics, meanwhile, are smarting from the two setbacks and will go all out in an effort to halt the Hawks' winning streak. A large crowd of fans is expected from Kingston at a game that should be a junior hockey classic. The game starts at 9 p. m.

Leafs-Red Wings Duel Twice Over Weekend Crucial Games

By CRAIG SWAYZE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The third-place Toronto Maple Leafs, striving to erase that two-point margin held by the runner-up Montreal Canadiens, tonight move into a National Hockey League weekend about as tough as they've experienced all season long.

In what could be a preview of Stanley Cup play Toronto meets league-leading Detroit Red Wings at home tonight and Sunday back in the United States motor city.

While the rejuvenated Leafs take on Detroit—who has already clinched the league title—in a double schedule, their arch-rival Montreal Canadiens have a somewhat easier task in entertaining the tail-end Chicago Black Hawks tonight and New York tomorrow.

The weekend's other tilt will see Chicago playing the fifth-place Bruins in Boston Sunday night.

In meeting Detroit 12 times this season, Toronto has been able to salvage but three victories while tying four games and losing five. Of a possible 24 points against the Wings, the Leafs have picked up 10. However, they could square their account during the weekend.

Detroit is minus the services of Metro Prystai, Benny Wolt and possibly Leo Reise ,all sidelined with injuries. Larry Zeidal, up from Indianapolis Capitols of the American Hockey League, will be filling in along the blue line while Jimmy Skinner, Red Wing scout, will coach the champions in the absence of Tommy Ivan, hospitalized with the flu.

The Leafs—with Fern Flaman, Joe Klukay, Gus Mortson and Bill Juzda on the crippled list—have brought Leo Bolvin up from their A. H. L. Pittsburgh farm club. They will use him along with Jim Morrison, Hugh Bolton and Jim Thomson on the blue line. The 180-pound native of Prescott, Ont., is high in general manager Conn Smythe's estimation.

Bleacher Collapse At Henie Show Injures Hundreds

Baltimore, Md., March 8 — (AP)—A huge section of ice-show bleachers, "not even nailed down," collapsed Thurs. night and injured more than 275 persons. Thirty-two men were reported in "serious condition."

As 10 hospitals continued treating the victims, the city revealed it had not issued the Sonja Henie show a permit for the temporary stands in Baltimore's 5th Regiment armory.

Though none was required by law, the show had asked for one and had been refused, Building Inspector Paul Cohen said.

The massive section shuddered and gave way about 8.25 p. m., five minutes before the show was scheduled to begin.

The heavy beams and planks went down with a roar. Men tore at the tangled beams to rescue screaming children and crying women.

There was no panic among others in the crowd, and the rescue operation carried on by police, firemen and National Guardsmen were completed within 30 minutes.

Cohen said the show was refused a request for a permit because all stands were not up at the time inspectors called Thursday afternoon.

Exempt from Code

He added that none would have been issued anyway since the section which would seat about 700 persons was "of temporary construction and not even nailed down." The armory is exempt from the city building code because it is state property but it is customary for those renting the building to apply for a permit.

An investigation has been ordered.

Miss Henie said the stands were erected under the supervision of a contractor, Ed Coronati of Park Ridge, N. J.

Coronati was unavailable for comment on the mishap, although his wife in New Jersey confirmed her husband's firm put up the bleachers and that he was at the scene.

A crowd of 7,000 persons were on hand for the show. Miss Henie cancelled the performance and said the ticket-holders could have a refund or attend another show Monday night.

Police estimated about 600 persons were seated in the section which collapsed.

GOT KEY OUT

Stratford, March 8 (CP)—Aubrey Henderson, 3, almost swallowed a car key Thursday. His mother noticed the little boy choking, found the key caught cross-ways in his throat, and quickly turned him upside down. She was able to get her fingers behind the key to draw it out.

Hawks, Rangers Peewees Draw

Black Hawks and Rangers battled to a two-all tie in the first game of their goals-to-count championship series in the Peewee division of the Belleville Hockey Association this morning. The second game will be played next Saturday morning.

The winners of this series will meet the Bruins for the league title.

John Brennan and Earl McDonald scored for the Hawks with Frank Howard and Gary Goyer pulling the trigger for the Rangers.

In the other games Red Wings blanked the Maple Leafs 2-0 with Ron Pointer and Jerry Doyle scoring.

Bruins shut out the Canadiens by a similar score with Melvin Alyea and Jack Craddock doing the firing.

HOME DAMAGED

Toronto, March 8. (CP)—Two women were taken to hospital after fire damaged a $40,000 home in suburban Swansea early Friday.

Damage to the home, owned by Harold Fair, owner of Alliance Paper Mills, was about $15,000.

Mrs. Nellie Rose, 67, a housekeeper, suffered a fractured right ankle and undetermined back injuries when she jumped from a second-storey window. Mrs. Fair, about 50, was treated for shock.

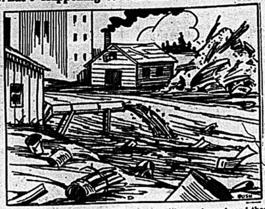
What's Happening to Our Lakes and Streams?



By JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT

(Noted Sportsman, Author and Creator of Solunar Tables)

It does not make much difference where we live; if you are over 40 or, better still, over 50, think back on the condition of your fishing waters as they were when you were a boy and then compare them with the waters if today. The comparison is not a pretty one.

I suppose that it is one of the frailties of human nature that we tend to learn things the hard way. Calamities must occur, crises must arise before we can wake up and take steps. Then, as often as not, it is too late.

When I was a boy, here in central Pennsylvania, we had clean, clear streams aplenty. In the west branch of the Susquehanna River there was good bass fishing. The trout streams, both large and small, ran clear and sweet and they held trout.

Then came the miners to take the coal from our mountains. They dug shafts in the hills and ripped away the topsoil for strip-mining operations. No repair work was done when the mines played out. They simply moved on to fresh territory.

Gradually the acid water from these places increased in volume as it drained into the streams. This, combined with drainage from culm banks, refuse from manufacturing plants, and so on, rendered many of our streams unsuitable for aquatic life.

The visible evidence of this was, of course, the multitude of fish, drifting belly-up with the current. This was regrettable but the damage could be repaired. Fish can be restocked. It costs money, but it can be done.

What was not evident to the casual observer was the complete eradication of all bottom life and small food-fish. Insect larvae and crustaceans simply disappeared, as they could not live in polluted water. There is little point in stocking fish in a stream where there is no natural food.

During the past decade Pennsylvania had accomplished much toward the complete restoration of her waters to their former condition. We now have anti-pollution laws with some teeth in them, and we have active wardens and trained biologists to see that these laws are enforced.

However, it is a slow process and very costly. Human aid is all right as far as it goes, but, when you come right down to it, only Mother Nature can do a thorough job of stream rehabilitation. Moreover, the process takes a great many years and during those years the streams have lost much of their usefulness to the general public.

Most of the states nowadays have adequate anti-pollution laws. That sort of thing is fairly well behind us. Now we are faced with new hazards and these are serious ones.

As the years pass, the United States is becoming more and more densely populated. With this increase in population comes increase in land use. Improved methods and machinery for farming and lumbering subjects increasing acreage to change. No longer is it wild land in its original condition.

You remember what happened in the "dust bowl" some years ago, when all the prairie buffalo grass was plowed under to be replaced with grain. More and more the same thing is taking place on our watersheds. Erosion is increasing as the topsoil is carried down to the rivers.

With each hard rain and resulting freshet, fresh layers of silt are being deposited on our stream bottoms, smothering out the bottom life. Hills are denuded of their forests, allowing fast run-off. This results in floods, the magnitude of which exceeds anything in earlier years.

Heavy floods do things to stream bottoms. The large rocks are turned and rolled over. This permits the smaller stones and gravel to be picked up and carried downstream. While gravel is not silt, it does fill up the pools and the winter holes, thereby reducing the utility of that stream insofar as aquatic life is concerned.

Meanwhile, our lakes and ponds are suffering to a greater or less degree, according to location. Unwise planting of exotic aquatic vegetation has done untold damage in the states of the southeast. The water hyacynth and water chestnut not only have rendered many bodies of water unfishable but, in some cases, have actually created biological deserts where once the fishing was good.

Where lakes have large streams or rivers feeding into them, it is not uncommon for them to be silted full, thereby rendering them unfit for any purpose to which a lake is supposed to be devoted. This is particularly true of the artificial lakes which have been created by damming rivers.

Adequate and intelligent watershed management is a complex study. So many things can and do happen which render such management an involved problem. It is all very well to enumerate and classify the conditions and practices which combine to form the hazard of improper watershed management. Altering these conditions and revising or stopping these practices is something else again.

Burning off the land

Overgrazing

Unwise farming, resulting in erosion

Farming bottom lands too near stream banks

Denuding hills of timber, and

Clearing forest land for agricultural use.

Rearranging and correcting these things is an exceedingly large order. As matters stand now, most of the land so effected is private land. The owner can do with it as he sees fit. American citizens do not like being given orders which, conceivably, might be considered as an invasion of constitutional rights.

Actually, the main hope lies in public education. That, as you very well know, is a long and thankless job, no matter what is concerned or how serious the matter in hand.

However, the hazard is well recognized and that, of itself, is a step in the right direction. The conservation commissions, state and federal forest services and the department of agriculture already have practical programs for watershed management laid out and they are only too willing to co-operate in all cases. The probabilities are that watershed abuses have passed their peak and that matters will improve from now on.

Jap Woman Loses Cue Game

San Francisco, March 8. (AP)—Irving Crane of Binghamton, N.Y., making three separate runs of six, defeated Japan's sensational woman cue star, Masako Katsura, 50-42, last night in a first-round match of the world three-cushion billiard tournament. The match lasted 57 innings.

It was the United States tournament debut of the 38-year-old Japanese woman, three time runner-up for the championship of her country.

Defending champion Willie Hoppe, of Dexter Hill, Pa., won his first round match Thursday night, beating Herb Hardt, Chicago, 50-26 in 44 innings.

HAD TO DO IT OVER AGAIN

St. Thomas, March 8 (CP)—Fire Chief Alex Sutherland recently was called to get rid of a skunk in the cellar of a house. He shot the animal, donned a gas mask and removed the remains. Later he was called to the same house. The skunk's mate had appeared. He had to do it all over again.

Owen Sound Trims Dutchies, Indians Win

By The Canadian Press

Owen Sound Mercurys, Cinderella team of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A circuit, moved a step closer to the league finals last night when they downed Kitchener - Waterloo Dutchmen 3-1 and took a convincing 3-1 lead in their best-of-seven semi-finals.

The Mercs, who just managed to squeeze into the post-season playoffs after a battle with Hamilton Tigers in the final week of play, have shown amazing resurgence in their series with the Dutchies. Taking a 2-0 lead in games, they dropped the third game of the series and then roared back last night to take the all-important 3-1 edge.

In the other O.H.A. Senior A semi-final, the high-flying Stratford Indians who finished up atop the six-team standings over the regular route, last night dropped Brantford Redmen 6-3 to even their best-of-seven semi-final at two games each.

In the O.H.A. Junior A loop, Toronto St. Michael's moved into a 2-0 lead over Galt Black Hawks in their best-of-seven semi-final by downing the Hawks 5-4 in overtime at Maple Leaf Gardens. In the other Junior A playoff, Kitchener Greenshirts overpowered St. Catharines Teepees 5-1 and gained a one-game lead in the first clash of their best-of-five quarter-finals.

In the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior A finals, Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds edged North Bay Black Hawks 4-2 last night to capture the opening game of their best-of-five league finals.

Sports Roundup

Phoenix, Ariz., March 8. (AP)—Any suggestion that New York Giants might go the way of the Phillies—that is, flop through an overdose of prosperity the way the 1950 National League champs did—brings only hoots of derision from Leo Durocher's dandies.

They feel they are a sounder ball club in every respect than the Quaker City outfit ever was, and they honestly believe they might run right away from the field, including Brooklyn. They say they would have done it a year ago but for that 11-game losing nightmare at the outset of the race.

There is a great deal of snap and life and hollering on the ball field and no one was detected a loafer yet. Durocher drives them hard every minute they are out there, and he drives himself just as hard.

"They won't take a day off," Durocher swears. "I asked them when they wanted one and they said they'd rather keep right on training every day."

That doesn't sound like a club that means to eat or cavort itself out of first money. The Giants, as a matter of fact, do not concede that the Phils so blew their chances last season. They simply don't feel that the erstwhile whiz kids ever really had it.

Durocher still won't announce that Davey Williams will succeed Eddie Stanky at second base. He continues to insist that Bobby Hofman and Ronnie Samford will be in the race right up to April 10 but everyone considers that window dressing. They think Hofman has a good chance of sticking around and relieving Williams now and then but that's all. Leo has to go with Davey and hope for the best.

The $65,000 kid, who divided his time between Minneapolis and the Giants last year, is giving it a terrific try but he realizes he has to improve his hitting considerably if the Giants are not to suffer badly from the loss of Stanley's bat.

TRADE BOGS DOWN

Hong Kong, March 8—(AP)—Trade between Hong Kong and communist China during the last six months of 1951, amounted to less than half what it was in the first six months. This was reported today in the annual statement of the Hong Kong Shanghai Banking Corporation. It said trade in the first six months of 1951 amounted to 1,151,000,000 Hong Kong dollars (roughly $192,000,000 but fell to 452,000,000 in the last six months.

Oh my! I'll bet this costs us plenty!

Silly accident, but expensive!
All accidents are silly — and unexpected.
The grocer boy does not intend to trip over a toy wagon in your driveway and break an arm or leg. But it can cost you thousands in a damage suit.
Or your dog may bite a stranger (or a friend). You may hit somebody with a golf ball. Your child may strike a passerby with a rock. The mail man may slip on the ice or a roller skate.
A very inexpensive insurance policy will cover you against damage suits from all these and other expensive, unplanned misfortunes. For example you can get $10,000 liability protection for only $10 a year.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Times are when you must know whether to take it on the chin or on the lam. And it is not mint sauce I am talking about, dearie. This is bridge.

When opponents are going to a makeable slam, it pays your side to take a sacrifice. Even a loss of several tricks doubled will save your side points if opponents can make more at their bid.

Both sides were vulnerable in this deal:

NORTH
♠A 8 6 5
♥J 4 3
♦9 8 5
♣A 7 2

WEST
♠K
♥K Q 10 9 8 6 2
♦None
♣J 10 9 8 5

EAST
♠Q J 9 7 4 3 2
♥7
♦J 7 3 2
♣4

SOUTH
♠10
♥A 5
♦A K Q 10 6 4
♣K Q 6 3

The bidding has progressed this far:

South	West	North	East
2 D	2 H	2 NT	Pass
3 D	4 C	4 5

East realized in the first round of bidding that opponents held great strength. Despite the two bids by west, east did not expect many top cards there. But it was a basis for possible sacrifice.

So, west came in right here with a bid of four spades. He had reason to believe that it might be doubled and go down some tricks. But it might be a paying loss if it keeps opponents out of a slam.

But south ignored the bait to double four spades. Instead, the south hand decided to dig into the possibilities of how big a slam his side could make. What does he need to know most at this time?

He wants to know how many aces and kings are in their pair. To find out, his bid was four no-trump; the aces and kings asker. It asks partner how many aces and kings he holds.

West will be defeated at any bid he may inject here. But any loss of less than slam worth will be a gain. West must consider the cost of such a sacrifice. He did and bid five hearts.

When competish is keen one copes with those who also know the ropes.
